

"DON'T JUMP THE STICK," ADVISES FRED G. BALE

Former Judge, of Columbus, O., Tells Students to Stay Loyal to Character

LIKES YOUTH OF TODAY

Says Most People Came Into His Court "Because They Don't Stop to Reason"

By Woodrow Wolfe

"What America needs today is citizens with courage enough to stand loyal to character," Fred G. Bale, former judge of a juvenile court in Columbus, O., said in an assembly address Wednesday. The speaker was introduced by President E. G. Rohrbough.

Advising students not to follow the crowd, he said, "Do not jump the stick because someone else jumps the stick." Mr. Bale, who said he had worked eight years with the "flaming youth," declared that "in my opinion the young people of today are better than the young people of yesterday."

Declaring that alcohol is one of the three race poisons, he advised students to refrain from drinking intoxicants, pointed out the harm done by alcohol, and said, "Alcohol keeps something to your 'quitter.' It keeps you from living a clean moral life."

Pointing out that his experience as a judge had given him the inspiration to "tell the youth of today something they don't know," he said, "One of the finest things of teaching is helping the youth to see the best in everything."

Mr. Bale said there were more people brought into his court because they failed to use their reasoning power than for any other reason. "That's why people jump the stick. They don't stop to reason," he added.

DORMITORY WORK IS SPEEDED UP

Six Bricklayers Added—Work Is Started on Upper Wing of Structure

Six men were added yesterday to the force of bricklayers now working on the new College dormitory, increasing the total number to twelve. With the doubling of the number of workers, brick work was extended to the upper wing where the concrete footers were completed several days ago.

About half of the window frames have been delivered, C. W. Loar, superintendent, said yesterday. A number of these are now being installed in the lower wing as the brick work continues.

The steel material to be used in the building is expected soon, Mr. Loar said.

When completed, the dormitory will contain sixty-six student bedrooms to accommodate 132 students. In addition to student rooms, there will be three apartments of four rooms each.

JUMPING STICKS WITH THE SHEEP

Individual initiative has ever been a predominant characteristic of people who play such a large part in determining the destiny of society. Those who are so credulous and passive enough to follow any and every leader are usually doomed to oblivion by being swallowed up in the crowd.

This natural characteristic of zealously trying to imitate every fad and fancy without first analyzing the merits or demerits of the practice was cleverly illustrated by Judge J. G. Bale in his talk before the student body Wednesday. To play the sheep and jump the stick is, in his opinion, a sign of extreme weakness in any individual.

College students apparently do not prove an exception to frivolous imitation. A casual observation would tend to convince one that among all groups they, perhaps, are the most radical in catering to will-o-the-wisp absurdities. It is true that the college group originates a great many of the passing fads, but it is just as true that the majority in the group are perfectly contented to follow blindly any fanatic suggestion without first appraising its true worth.

But should this situation exist within the group that will in all probability produce the leaders of tomorrow? Is not the central purpose of college training to develop initiative and logical reasoning on the part of each student? The old maxim, "Think twice before you speak," may very appropriately be worded, think twice before you act.—Jarrett W. Jones.

A WORD OF ENCOURAGEMENT

This spring approximately 291 students of the College will receive certificates entitling them to teach in the schools of West Virginia. The teaching profession, as are other professions, is overcrowded. It will probably be impossible for all of us to get jobs. But is this time that has been spent in college wasted? Most certainly it is not. While here we have acquired knowledge, both academic and social, which will form a basic foundation for our later accomplishments. Life will not be terminated merely because employment is not immediately forthcoming. Problems will continue to face us and demand solutions, and by virtue of our college training we will be better prepared to answer them.

Nothing could be more depressing than to think that the entire value of our college training would be measured by our ability, or good luck, to immediately join the ranks of the employed teachers. We are fortunate that such is not the case. Collegiate opportunities and accomplishments are not measured momentarily. But rather the value of college life can best be ascertained if we ask ourselves the question—Am I better suited to meet, solve, and enjoy the problems of social existence now than I was when I entered college?—Jack Elder.

THE VALUE OF CRITICISM

We as college students should be far enough advanced to realize the importance of being able to profit by objectional pressures that are certain to confront us daily. Perhaps the one thing we misunderstand most frequently is criticism, but the fact remains that it probably is the most valuable.

In classrooms it comes from instructors. Outside of school it is continually heard from others. Sometimes it comes from so many sources that we get disgusted enough to "throw in the towel" and "junk" the whole business.

However, there is always something to look forward to, and therein lies the profits of criticism. There is always the thought of improvement—the thought of attaining something greater. And many of us are inspired to greater things, when and after we have been criticized and have learned to "take" the criticism.—Coral May Gulentz.

COMPETITION AMONG US

"I usually give more weight to a student's opinion of another student than I do to a faculty member's opinion of him," F. G. Atkinson, who interviews college seniors for Proctor and Gamble, confessed recently while visiting a large university in the Middle West.

Like many other men with similar jobs, he visits college after college, interviewing men graduating from each and then selecting those he feels will make the most desirable employees. And like the superintendents who have been interviewing prospective teachers here recently, Mr. Atkinson

Glenville's Own News Reel

By S. M. F.

Can you imagine Dean H. Laban White impersonating farm animals? Nevertheless, he did so in an amateur contest at a district Rotary convention at Wheeling recently. Pictures of Paul Fulk, Pioneer football captain for 1936, Catharine Wilson, senior, and the new student body officers appeared in Sunday's Exponent-Telegram. Several Verona Mapel Hall girls were given considerable worry last Tuesday night when the library was closed one-half hour early. It has been said that some of the girls were tripped up when they arrived at Verona Mapel Hall a half hour late and couldn't say, "We have been getting reports." . . . Aside—Gosh, this campusology course is getting treacherous.

Alex Goldberg and his orchestra have been employed by the Holy Roller Court to play for the annual dance Friday night in the College gymnasium. The hours are from 9 p. m. until 1 a. m. and several moonlight dances are on the program. So, come one and all and enjoy yourself to the utmost. . . . Several girls who were not so lucky as to receive schools in the counties in which they applied, have announced their intentions of filing applications for schools in Alaska. . . . Miss Dobson has said that her supreme purpose for enrolling in Northwestern University, School of Speech, this summer is to "take Lew Sarrett's prosody course and building the lecture recital."

Eleanor White, daughter of Dean and Mrs. H. Laban White, and a student at West Virginia University, will appear in the final University orchestra concert at Morgantown Wednesday night.

Seen in Glenville over the weekend: George White, '35, of the N. Y. A. office in Charleston; Frank Vass, '33, coach of Colcord High School, and Mrs. Vass, '32; Graydon Woodford, '34, of the C. I. T. Corporation in Beckley; Mrs. Harold Hall, '30, of Philippi; Mrs. Lloyd Gainer, '22, of Parkersburg; Mrs. Evalde Thelmar, former student, of Weston. So until next week, it's "30."

Way of the World

IN THE DAY'S NEWS—

The wives of students attending McGill University, Montreal, are forming a club to while away the time until their husbands come home from school.

Eight-year-old Ann Duncan Morrison, temporary mayor of Santa Barbara, Cal., under the national youth week program, burst into tears at the sight of prisoners in the city jail and won releases for three of them.

Roused to scorn by the college and university organizations of veterans of future wars, members of the American Legion post of Washington, D. C., have organized a first aid station and supply depot for future veterans.

A village school for parents only, the first of its kind in Britain, was opened at Coppull, England with more than 100 pupils.

William Jurgis, about 60 years old, was recently brought to an Atlantic City hospital with a 3-inch slit in his throat which he had sewed up with a darning needle and black thread.

—COMMENTS ON LIFE

Men fear death as if unquestionably the greatest evil, and yet no man knows that it may not be the greatest good.—W. Mitford.

Only yesterday Russia was regarded as a menace to civilization. Today Russia is the best boy in the Sunday School class.—Rev. Dr. E. W. Norwood, British churchman.

Society folk are definitely tired of the fast life. We realize now that the simple life is best.—Elsa Maxwell.

AND SOME HUMOR—

Ole Olson came to the village one day and inquired of the restaurant proprietor:

Ole—Got any squirrel whiskey? Restaurant man—No but I can slip you some Old Crow.

Ole—Aye don't want to fly. Aye just want to jump around a little.

An old Southern planter was discussing the hereafter with one of his colored servants. "Sam," he said, "if you die first, I want you to come back and tell me what it like over there. If I die first I'll come back and tell you what it's like."

"Dat suits me, massa," the old Negro replied, "But if you dies fast Ah wants you to promise me dat you'll come back in the daytime."

—FRESHMEN SHOULD KNOW

These rules to follow, now that the semester is coming to a close:

Cut at least two classes daily. Call on all your instructors and tell them how much you have enjoyed their classes—even if you haven't.

Don't bother to write term papers—it takes too much time.

Be late to all your classes—your classmates will worship your nonchalance.

AND SOME VERSE—

Mother O'Mine

If I were hanged on the highest hill,
Mother o'mine, O Mother o'mine,
I know whose faith would follow me still,
Mother o'mine, O Mother o'mine.

If I were drowned in the deepest sea,
Mother o'mine, O Mother o'mine,
I know whose prayers would come down to me,
Mother o'mine, O Mother o'mine.

If I were damned of body and soul,
Mother o'mine, O Mother o'mine,
I know whose love would make me whole,
Mother o'mine, O Mother o'mine.

"Education Before Verdun," Arnold Zweig; "Sparkenbroke," Charles Morgan; "Uganda," H. B. Thomas; "Winged Child," Jean Starr Untermeyer; "Ocean Transportation," Abraham Bergland; "Crime," Nathaniel Cantor.

"The Son of Marietta"

"The Son of Marietta" by Johan Wigmore Fabricius, is a long, picturesque romance, on the order of Anthony Adverse, by a Dutch novelist who was introduced to American readers with the publication of "Lions Starve in Naples." The setting is eighteenth-century Italy; the tale, in three sections, follows the life and adventures of Benedetto, born to Marietta, who had been brought up as an innkeeper's foster child. Unacknowledged son of the Bishop of Todi, Benedetto evinces no love for music or the church, but finds a madcap, adventurous life wholly to his liking.

Student Forum

Those Late-Comers

To the editors of the Mercury:

Delay is always annoying. People never like to be kept waiting, and most especially do public speakers and actors become annoyed by useless delay on the part of the audience in getting to their seats on time.

The curtain will be drawn for first act of the senior class play, "Holiday," Saturday night, May 30, at 8:15 o'clock. Would it not be possible for all of us to be in our seats at precisely 8:15 o'clock, thus eliminating the unnecessary noise and detracting commotion after the curtain has been drawn. This confusion causes the actors to forget their lines and that part of the audience that arrived on time to completely miss the opening of the play. Since these late arrivals are entirely unnecessary they can be eliminated. May we suggest that we all try to be in the College auditorium at 8:15 o'clock. Why can't we step up our schedule for doing things and see to it that we don't hold up what promises to be an interesting dramatic performance.

do when they get out of school. School men are looking for teachers who realize that teaching is a profession—a job to be taken seriously.

A few years ago companies and boards of education alike were competing for college graduates, but now it is the graduates competing among themselves. Such a situation may eventually reveal to students the importance of proper application to the task at hand. In Glenville State Teachers College, that task is preparing to do a splendid job of teaching.

Students of 1892 Describe Their Glenville at Commencement Time

[From "The Independent Star," published at Glenville Normal
School in 1892.]

Again, time in its flight has passed around. Another year has gone with all its joys and sorrows and Commencement Day, that day we look forward to with pride and fond hopes, is here once more.

This day, like all other days, has its rays of sunshine and clouds of darkness.

On the other hand it is a happy day because we this day receive that degree which is the reward of our days of toil, our nights of labor, our hours of study and our longings and anxieties of examinations.

Day of Sadness

On the other hand it is a day of sadness to many because they are to leave the school which has become dear to them, are to sever ties of associations to enter upon the world's broad field of battle to pursue their different avocations of life. Who can take the last look at the school house that stands upon the hill and think of the pleasant days spent there without dropping a tear of regret. Our school days are our happiest days and in years to come our minds will return to the silent walls of the Normal. In our dreams we will revisit the places we frequented during our stay in the quiet little town of Glenville.

Memories Linger On

Who can be so cold to nature and so lost in the thoughts of wealth or the greed of gold to forget those places that become a very part of the student himself while at school? It matters not where we may be, whether we seek our fortunes in the West with its beautiful plains and prairies, or amid the glittering gold diggings of California, or in the North with its deep and broad lakes and glaciers of ice and fields of snow with their crystal palaces, or in the East where the hum of manufactures make merry music and her foundries and furnaces that send up a cloud of smoke by day and a pillar of fire by night, or in the beautiful South where the palmetto waves in the balmy breezes and the magnolia nods in the sunshine and the waving fields of many snow-white cotton, our thoughts will carry us back to the days we spent in Glenville while at school, and the beauties that surround it. Time will never erase from our minds the scenes of the placid Little Kanawha and the memories connected therewith. On either side, the banks are lined with rare and beautiful flowers which make fragrant the air, while the stately elms lift their stout forms heavenward and branches play with the invigorating breezes and the pure sunshine that makes this climate so delightful, while the song of the bird lends music to these charms.

Let Us Wander Back

Let us wander back in our imagination to the school grounds we left Commencement Day so dear to us. Here we behold our beautiful brick structure whose spire pierces the blue heavens, while from its cupola floats the stars and stripes which is the pride of every American's boast. Surrounding this building the beauties of nature are unsurpassed by any land. To the back, Fort More stands up boldly and a visit there brings back to our minds the days when our town, as well as our Nation, was disturbed by the sound of arms, the dust of drums and tramp of soldiers. But let us stand upon the historic hill a few moments listening to nature's sweetest music and bask in the pure atmosphere and we forget that our quiet place of retreat was ever distracted by grim war. At the foot of this hill sleep the dead. Some of these were the Nation's defenders and fell in defense of our country's rights, while below the calm and serene waters of the Kanawha seem to whisper peace!

Hills Resemble Ocean

Turn and look another direction and behold the lofty hills whose sides are a mass of living green, resembling an ocean, so beautiful that our pen falters and wavers and we cannot find words to describe it. Next we see "Camden Flats," which has been described both in prose and poetry. The student that leaves without visiting Camden Grove has lost much of all that makes his stay happy while at Glenville. There are many places of interest and beauty that will ever be revered in the minds of the students when far away—such as "Lovers' Retreat," whose name is suggestive of itself, "Sleepy Hollow," "Pine Grove," and "The Bridge," all of which lend luster of the scenery of Glenville, and each is a romance within itself. All these places will live in the minds of the students when far away and when the halls of the Normal shall resound to their footsteps no more.

But to-day we close. We leave, some never to return again. We go in different directions and to pursue different vocations in life. How we have spent our time while at school we are answerable to ourselves and to our God.

MAY 30, DATE SET FOR SENIOR PLAY

Comedy by Phillip Barry Will Be Presented in College Auditorium

Rehearsals for the three-act play "Holiday" to be presented by the senior class in the College auditorium Saturday, May 30, at 8:15 p. m., are being held regularly, according to Miss Margaret Dobson, director. The comedy, written by Philip Barry, has twelve characters.

As the play opens, one of the daughters of the solvent Seton family has become engaged to a youth with no fiscal or social background. The alliance is regarded dubiously by the head of the Seton household, a self-satisfied money-loving man living complacently for and with the Seton ingots. The young man, although an expert in financial matters, believes that life is not one hundred percent bank notes and that there is fun to be had in the pursuit of other treasures.

He purposes to take his vacation in the early part of his life and to work when he is old. These radical impressions disturb both his betrothed and her parents and they immediately attempt to change the young man's plans. Friendly to his credo is his prospective sister-in-law—and here is found one of the numerous solutions of the play's success.

Art Students Prepare Caricatures For Exhibit to Be Held Here Soon

Look, there's Shirley Temple! Yes, and over there stands the late Will Rogers, eyes gleaming as if he intends to pass a sweet juicy hamburger across the counter to the immortal Wimpy, of funny-paper fame.

Then there is that hen-pecked husband—we have known so long as Jiggs. 'Tis funny, Maggie is nowhere to be found. And then there is William Shakespeare, the intellectual wizard whose equal has never been known.

Abraham Lincoln stands there as real and life-like. Why, it seems he is almost ready to speak. But Joe E. Brown is just the same old Joe—just a big-mouthed chap that's out for a good time. Eddie Cantor looks like himself, although he could stand a little polishing around the ears. Senator Borah seems to have just gotten home from an intensive political battle.

There aren't any trees, especially any cherry trees. But George Washington of colonial days is there in all his glory, and even Uncle Sam, nattily attired in his resplendent red, white, and blue cape and trousers and cutaway coat and his glamorous top-hat—all aglow as if America were just born anew.

The Art 202 Class has all these personalities molded into life-like characters and caricatures made from plaster of Paris. They will go on display here before long and the public will be invited. One hundred pounds of plaster of Paris has been used. Miss Margaret Christie is the instructor.

For Digestion's Sake... SMOKE CAMELS

PROMS AND EXAMS. Constant rushing about and mental strain put you on your mettle. Camels set you right with their aid to digestion—their cheering "lift"—their costlier tobaccos.

Smoking Camels stimulates the natural flow of digestive fluids . . . increases alkalinity

Life sometimes pushes us so hard that we feel too worn-down really to enjoy eating. Science explains that hurry, mental strain, and constant tension reduce the flow of the digestive fluids.

Scientific studies definitely show that smoking Camels increases the flow of digestive fluids . . . alkaline digestive fluids . . . so vital to the enjoyment of food and to good digestion.

Camel's rich and costly tobaccos are mild beyond words. Enjoy Camels as often as you like—with meals—any time—for their cheering "lift" . . . for their aid to digestion—for the pleasure they bring. Camels set you right! And never jangle your nerves or tire your taste. Make it Camels today.

MINUTEMEN HOLD FIRST PLACE IN BASEBALL LEAGUE

Rivermen Go Into Second Place As Bulldogs Drop to Third Position

FIRST SHUT-OUT PITCHED

Guy Bennett Tosses Three-Hit Ball to Keep Fulks' Nine at Top of League

BULLETIN

Guy (Tarzan) Bennett of the Minutemen entered baseball's hall of fame yesterday when he blanked Frank Martino's Hilltoppers 21-0 to turn in his second successive shut-out and keep Paul Fulks' Minutemen at the top of the intramural ball league. Marra, Hull, Mowrey and McNemar pitched for the losers.

After previously going into a tie for the league lead, Ted Riddle's Bulldogs dropped back to second place when Fulks' Minutemen defeated them 8 to 0 Wednesday. Last week's games saw the Bulldogs trim the Hilltoppers 8-6 Tuesday, the Minutemen trim the Bulldogs 8-0 Wednesday, and the Rivermen win over Martino's Hilltoppers 11-5 Thursday.

Rivermen	3	2	.600
Bulldogs	2	2	.500
Hilltoppers	1	5	.166

Guy Bennett, ace mound star for the Minutemen, turned in the best pitching performance of the season, Wednesday. He held the slugging Bulldogs to three scattered blows and issued only one walk. Bennett's teammates gave him excellent support and failed to commit a single error in the seven innings of play. Batting honors for the tilt went to Fulks, who gathered two hits in four trips to the plate. Springer hit a long home run for the Minutemen in the third inning.

In Tuesday's game, Riddle's team took an early lead, scoring four runs in the first frame, and checking the Hilltoppers' rally to win, 8-6. Grose held the Hilltoppers to four hits, one of which was a home run by Bohensky in the first inning with Wolfe on base. The Bulldogs took advantage of errors and walks to account for four of their runs.

The Rivermen moved into second place Thursday by defeating the Hilltoppers, 11 to 5. The game marked the fourth loss for Martino's men. The Rivermen continued to show the strength they promised early in the season as they clubbed the Hilltopper pitchers unmercifully. Lineups and summaries:

IN THE SPORTLITE

By ISADORE NACHMAN

FOLLOWING the organizing of the intramural baseball league recently Coach A. F. Rohrbough again comes to the fore with another idea to entertain the male members of the student body. The innovation is an intramural volley ball league. Plans call for a six-club league to begin play within the next week. Boys who are participating in the baseball sport have been barred from playing in the new league. Allen (Chuck) Smyth will be the director. Volley ball, however, is not a new sport on the campus. It was first played as an intramural sport about four years ago. The Minutemen still seem to be the strongest team in the baseball league. Guy Bennett, Minutemen hurler, turned in the first shut-out of the season when he cut the Bulldogs to three bingles and allowed only one free ticket to first.

SIMPLE SPORT SHOTS: Fred Smith says he can really throw that thing called a baseball. In Smith's own words, "I can really throw that thing and make it look like a pea." Jack Springer and Lee Summers want to know what one has to do to crash into print. Well, boys, the best thing I know is to "bite a dog," 'cause that's really NEWS. Washington Irving High School, of Clarksburg, rated an A. P. story when the Hilltoppers' tennis team trimmed the Salem College players. But Salem sports writers say it wasn't the "varsity," however.

DID YOU KNOW that Rex Pyles, a former Pioneer court star and now coach at Alderson-Broadus College, has been appointed head of the Philippi baseball team that will play in the West Virginia State League this summer. Stanley Jeranko, another former Pioneer, will be one of the umpires in the same circuit. Frank Vass, one of the greatest centers to ever play basketball for Coach Rohrbough, was visiting with friends here Saturday. Coach A. F. Rohrbough was given a position on the all-time basketball team picked of former W. V. U. court stars. The College intramural baseball league plays every afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Rounders Is Great-Grandparent of Game We Call Baseball in This Modern Age

Are you a rounders fan?

Never heard of it? It's the great-grandparent of baseball, America's national game, and came here from England about 1838. In Philadelphia it became known as "townsball," then more interesting names soon appeared, such as "three-old cat," "four-old cat," and "scrub."

Holding a bat unlimited as to length but not less than 2½ inches in diameter, the man comes to bat. The pitcher—or feeder—stands 45 feet away, but which he may run and step at liberty when pitching. In his hand is a regulation ball weighing 6½ ounces and measuring 10½ inches around. It is made of live rubber, covered with yarn and leather, and bounces like a golf ball.

Changing, modifying, adding to the old game, America soon passed from rounders to baseball. But though baseball has spread to other countries and become popular in many of them including Canada, Australia, and Japan, it has never been successful in England, where it had its origin.

Theodore Riddle Splits Finger

Theodore Riddle, captain of the second-place Bulldogs in the intramural baseball league, had the little finger of his right hand split at the first joint in a game at Rohrbough Field Wednesday. Riddle was catching at the time of his injury but remained in the game, moving to left field.

SIX VOLLEY BALL TEAMS WILL PLAY

Allen Smyth Will Direct New Organization — Games to Start This Week

Allen Smyth announces that an intramural volley ball league composed of six teams will be formed and begin play sometime this week. Smyth will have complete charge over the league which will play four nights a week.

The six teams expected to play will be organized according to the place of residence of the players. One team will represent the first floor of Kanawha Hall, one the second floor of the same place; another will be made up of boys who reside in the gymnasium, cottage, and the library. The fourth team will represent the Lodge and the other two clubs will be chosen from boys residing in town.

Approximately forty boys attended a meeting in the College gymnasium Thursday evening announcing their intentions of playing in the new league. Captains of the teams will not be chosen until teams have been organized. Previously, captains have been chosen and allowed to pick their own teams, but this year a change has been made and a captain will be elected by each team.
