Our Language! — Is It Ours?

"Remember that you are a human being with a soul and the divine gift of articulate speech: that your native language is the language of Shakespeare and Milton and the Bible . . ."

These words of George Bernard Shaw, in his play "Pygmalion," should only remind us, at the college level, that we should be proud of our language. But are we?

In our age of complexity and mass communication we are constantly being exposed to "blab." We are constantly being hammered at with commercials, advertisements, slanted news stories, and "silly" talk, and we are slowly and constantly turning the volume down. But at the same time, are we subconsciously turning down the volume to words of wisdom—words that, if we are not aware will cause us to be greatly handicapped in our profession.

The individual in our society has the responsibility of developing proper habits of listening and proper ways of judging. He must decide with intelligence when to turn down the volume and when to leave it up. The alert and judicious college student should know when the professor is delivering or when he is reminiscing.

This failure to recognize words of meaning stems from the student's unfamiliarity with the language and the meaning it conveys.

The student who would be successful in this world, who would be well thought of by his peers or colleagues, will develop both a written and spoken command of the language, equal to that type of language expected of a college graduate. We must act, talk, and think like a college graduate.

Even though a college student has not consciously sought to improve his language while on campus, we think that there will be some improvement, unconsciously, because of the college atmosphere. If a student consciously strives to command the language, how much farther can he go?

In order for a student to seek to improve his speech, he must be convinced within himself that it is worthwhile. We cannot convince him that this is the thing to do, but he must feel the value of it himself.

If this command of the language is not worthwhile, why is it that corporations such as the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and the General Electric Corporation provide courses in public speaking and courses in writing for their employees? Why is it that many employers want a personal interview with prospective employees?

There is no doubt that part of the problem lies within the cultural-economic aspects of the state. But leaders in politics, education, industry, and business are constantly becoming aware of the need for a much better grasp of the English language.

Some optimists say that maybe we have hit the bottom, and there is only way to go. But no matter where the core of the problem lies, the responsibility of acquiring better speech habits, ultimately, is ours—are we willing to seek help?

And, so, in the words of the great wit and philosopher George Bernard Shaw, "Remember that you are a human being with a soul and the divine gift of articulate speech: that your native language is the language of Shakespeare and Milton and the Bible."

Nelson Wells Is Discussion Leader

Assistant Professor Nelson Wells, supervisor of secondary education, was the discussion leader of a study group at the Ninth Annual Conference of the West Virginia Unit of the Association for Student Teaching, held in Morgantown last weekend.

The theme of the meeting was "Improving Student Teaching Through Better Evaluation." Topic for discussion by Wells' study group was "Should a letter grade be given on the required work in student teaching, or should it simply be a 'pass or fail' with an individual evaluation? Can the grade, as now given, be interpreted as an estimate of the student's possible success as a teacher? Should it be?"

Dr. Eddie C. Kennedy, a former instructor at Glenville State, is chairman of the Association for Student Teaching. He is now teaching at West Virginia University.

Faculty Members Discuss Library

Because Glenville State College faculty response was so intense when the use of the library was discussed at the December faculty meeting, the discussion will probably be carried over to the January meeting discloses Dean Delmer K. Somerville.

A panel discussion on "Ways of Encouraging Increased Student use of the Library" stimulated great interest among the faculty members according to Associate Professor Espy W. Miller, panel moderator. Dr. Byron Turner, Stanley Hall and Nelson Wells were members of the panel.

F. Miller Gives Data

Floyd W. Miller, librarian, pointed out that while use of the library has increased over several years, the current academic year, as compared with the previous academic year, shows a decrease in library use by both students and faculty.

Stanley Hall maintained that instructors must assume the leadership for inspiring, encouraging, or requiring students to use the library.

Nelson Wells proposed that a four-year required-reading program might be set up for each student to complete. The books required would represent all fields of knowledge and would be chosen by the faculty.

Turner Makes Survey

Dr. Turner reported on a survey he had made of 54 students. He found that the time spent by these students in the library averaged less than three hours a week. Some students spend no time at all in the library.

According to Dr. Turner's survey, the most-used materials in the library are the dictionaries, encyclopedias, newspapers, magazines, and reserve books.

The students questioned also gave their reasons for either using or

Farm Is Intricate Part Of Glenville State Campus

By BILL HINTON

One mile north of Glenville on Sycamore Run lies an important part of the Glenville State College campus. This part of our campus is the college farm.

In 1929 seventy-eight acres were purchased from E. G. Rohrbough and a little later forty-nine more acres were purchased from Charles T. Whiting which made the total amount of acreage 127.

The first building on the 127 acres was the barn built in 1938. It has concrete floors, running water, electric lights, silo, hay mow, and refrigeration facilities. The barn has facilities for the cattle including four box stalls for heifers and calves kept for replacements, and stanchions for 20 cows plus space for working. At the present time the barn houses 14 Holstein cows and 11 younger heifers.

Buildings Added

Poultry, brooder, and machine and implement buildings were added in 1948-49. The poultry house is equipped for accommodating 300 hens and now houses 125 New Hampshire Red Hens and 200 Cross Browsers. The brooder house is equipped for chicks and the machine and implement building houses all of the machinery. This should lead to the question as to what machinery the farm has to aid in doing the work. The farm is well equipped with machinery as it has two tractors with such accessories as side delivery rake, mowers, hay loader, potato digger, manure spreader, harrow, and two trailers. There are also a truck and silage cutter.

Other buildings are the butchering house for slaughtering hogs and dressing poultry and laboratories for classes especially in poultry and dairy. There is a building for pasteurization and homogenization of milk which is sold to the school.

Sell To College

Crops raised on the farm include alfalfa and clover for silage and hay and potatoes. The latter product is sold to the college.

Employed are Robert Beal, farm manager, and six students who work a maximum, each, of 65 hours per month. Byrl L. Law, assistant professor of agriculture is farm supervisor and lives in one of the two houses located on the farm; the other being the residence of Beal. The house in which Law lives is a five-room brick veneer home with a bath, garage, utility room, and basement. It has a concrete foundation, plastered walls, and oak floors and is heated by forced air furnace. Both houses are located just across the road from the farm.

not using the library. Some reasons for using the library were: Quiet place to work; have to write a paper; gain additional information. Some reasons for not using the library included: Live off-campus and work part-time; assignments don't require library use; don't know where things are in the library.

White Wave Falters Before Bears In 1957-58 Opening Cage Encounter

Glenville State College fell to the powerful West Virginia Tech Golden Bears in the Pioneers' first encounter of the 1957-58 season on Dec. 3, at Glenville. Tech jumped to a commanding 20-3 lead early in the game the G-Men never recovered as the visitors went on to win 110-84.

Tech dominated the game throughout as they knifed into the Glenville defense at will, scoring set and inside shots with amazing accuracy.

Glenville's scoring was on 25 field goals and an astounding amount of fouls, 34.

Poole Leads

Rudy Poole, GSC senior, led the White Wave offense with 23 points and senior Bob Reynolds followed closely with 19.

Poole also led in rebounds as he grabbed 13 from the boards. Mel Edwards followed with a total of eight rebounds.

Tech scoring honors were taken by Russell, who tossed in 24 of the victory points. Five other Tech men scored in the double figures.

On Jan. 16 in Montgomery, the Byrdmen will have an opportunity to feast this year's opening defeat.

Conference competition opened last year for the Pioneers and Tech at Montgomery when the Bears downed the White Wave 103-83. Senior forward Ken Hammond led the Tech drive at that time.

College Pool Provides Activity For Students

The swimming pool, located in the health and physical education building, gives the students one way to spend an evening of physical activity.

There are always at least two qualified life guards on deck and one faculty member in the building while the pool is open.

Good health habits are also emphasized by having each student shower before entering the pool. This rule is stressed most emphatically, and a student worker is placed in the dressing room to see that the rule is enforced.

The pool is open on Wednesday and Friday nights and on Saturday afternoon. Fees for admission to the pool are 50 cents on Wednesday and Saturday except students, faculty members and family. Friday nights are considered community nights and a fee of 25 cents is charged for everyone entering the pool.

Classes are also held in the pool including elementary and advanced swimming and a course in lifesaving. These classes are under the instruction of Leland E. Byrd, assistant professor of physical education.

That man is the richest whose pleasures are the cheapest.

Starting into the laboratory on the second floor of the Science Hall the other day, I met a skeleton who was on his way out. Bowing politely and shaking his hand I commented that I was looking for Mr. Adams, to see if I could gather some science news for the MERCURY. As the man of bones passed me, I was relieved to see Mr. Adams behind the skeleton, providing motivation.
