Dean Releases Schedules For Comprehensive Exams

Dean Delmer K. Somerville has released the dates for several of the comprehensive examinations in teaching fields.

All students who plan to enroll in Directed Teaching next semester should take the tests. Others may take them in April, 1964.

may take them in April, 1964.

The Dean has said that it is not necessary that a student have completed all of the required courses in his fields to be eligible to take the examinations. He should have completed the basic ones which a student would normally complete by the end of the junior year. No specific list of these has ever been approved.

No student should be permitted

Speaker's Topic Is 'World's Fair'

Mr. E. L. Montgomery, a member of the West Virginia Department of Commerce, will be visiting campus tomorrow, Nov. 21.
Mr. Montgomery is Director of the West Virginia World's Fair Pavilion which is now under construction at Flushing Meadow Park, New York City.
While on the GSC campus, Mr. Montgomery will discuss, in the Little Theatre, West Virginia's part in the World's Fair, plans for the exhibit and expected accomplishments.

At this time, Mr. Montgomery will show a film "Preview of the World's Fair". Students are urged to attend the lecture at 3:30 p.m.
Mr. Montgomery will be the guest of Dr. Byron Turner while in Glenville; he will be speaking to the Rotary Club later Thursday evening.

Duo-Pianists Are Feature Of Lyceum Concert Dec. 5

The Lyceum Committee, under the chairmanship of Carl A. Kerr, will sponsor a concert by Victoria Markowski and Frank Cedrone, husband and wife duo-pianists, Dec. 5 at 8 p.m., in the GSC audi-torium. Student admittance will be by activity ticket.

The piano partnership of Mark-owski and Cedrone began in 1952 when both were students at the when both were students at the Boston Conservatory. Later, they joined the faculty of the conservatory where they taught piano ensemble classes. Mr. Cedron also taught theory and harmony and was assistant director for two vears.

The duo gave a highly successful debut concert at Carnegie Recital Hall in New York. They have also toured the New England states and were guest artists with the Portland, Maine, Symphony and the Boston Civic Symphony.

Markowski and Cedrone have premiered piano duos and duets by such American composers as Herbert Fromm, Eugene Hemmer, Charles Repper, Grace Warner Gulesian and Allan Small.

They were chosen to perform for the Northeastern Conference of the National Federation of Music Clubs where they were hailed as "the most musically gifted duopianists to appear on the concert scene in many years."

Markowski and Cedrone have markowski and Cedrone have been featured on both radio and television in New York, Boston, and Philadelphia, performing and lecturing on the serious and hum-orous highlights of piano ensem-bles.

The two artists have directed and accompanied such musicals as "Brigadoon" and "Finian's Rainbow" for summer theaters and on tour, using their own duopiano arrangements.

The Markowski-Cedrone concert (four hands at one piano) will be the second lyceum offering this year. The first, "Three in Concert," was a program of music and modern dance which was presented Oct. 10.

Professor Kerr Writes

Common Courtesy, Good Behavior

By Mr. Carl A. Kerr*

In the last issue of the MERCURY, the editor saw fit to print two letters addressed to her on the subject of "the dress and conduct of some of the students" attending the first and conduct of some of the students" attending the first Lyceum program of the season. It seems that some students —apparently they were mostly male representatives of the student body—did not think it necessary to wear their best bibs and tuckers for the program on Oct. 10. It is obvious that because of this breach of propriety the students of the "in" "group on our campus were mildly outraged.

The etiquette of attendance at concerts and dramatic presentations is neither complicated or snobbish. Only common courtesy and polite behaviour are required. Conformity in such matters is a mark of refined intelligence, not an arbitrary dictum imposed by some stiff-necked arbiter. Our Lyceum programs are planned for the sole purpose of entertaining and edifying the student body, but we all want to impress favorably the performers and other visitors on our campus. Sloppy attire, boorish behavior, and disrespectful attitudes toward serious artistic presentations do not recommend us as either educated or well-bred.

Are we to believe that the wearers of rain hats and

Are we to believe that the wearers of rain hats and sweatshirts are campus non-conformists militantly defying the neatly tied and coated members of the audience? Is it the neatly tied and coated members of the audience? Is it possible, on the other hand, that those students attending the program en deshabille simply did not know that for evening concerts or recitals, such as our Lyceum programs, one generally "dresses"? The latter question is undoubtedly more appropriate to the situation. After the intermission many of the students who came to the program informally dressed were so uncomfortable that they did not return for the second half of the concert. It is highly likely that these students will wear a suit and tie for the next Lyceum program.

Some students come to our campus never having attended a concert, a legitimate theater presentation, or a formal dance. Some of them have never seen a symphony orchestra or a ballet in action. (Any contact they have had with these activities has been restricted to television, and watching Leonard Bernstein conduct, via TV, at Lincoln Center in New York does not require investiture in a respectively in stripe or dark shadow plaid. Paiamas and slipners are supported to the control of table pin stripe or dark shadow plaid. Pajamas and slippers are eminently suitable in this case.)

It is not surprising, then, that a few members of our student body may be unaware of the niceties of social behaviour observed by educated people. I for one, however, am not worried about the necessary adjustments, for most of our students learn quickly what is and is not done. In the early days of his career when he was attempting to win a place in the theatrical world, Marlon Brando was notorious for his helphing hells correlating hore phasted non conform for his belching, belly-scratching, bare chested non-conformity; but now that he has attained his artistic majority his bad manners have disappeared. If we have any Brandos on campus, I confidently anticipate their early rehabilitation.

The problem of behaviour at a Lyceum program is, however, more serious. We go to these programs to enjoy ourselves and to benefit culturally from the performance. Courtesy demands that we respect the artists and receive them warmly as their performance warrants.

Enthusiastic applause is, literally, music to their ears; but boisterous clapping and foot stomping are appropriate only at a circus or in a burlesque house. The proper time and place for applause sometimes puzzles even sophisticated audiences. Nevertheless, a few rules are generally observed. One never applauds between the movements of long musical compositions: the symphony, sonata, concerto, suite, etc.

When groups of selections are played—a group of Chopin etudes or of Debussy preludes, for example—applause is usually withheld until the end of the whole group. (It is not unusual, however, for the audience to applaud spontaneously and enthusiastically after a particularly brilliant performance of a single selection group.) During a program of sacred music, one generally does not applaud until the very end of

Can Anything Be Done?

Students have a legitimate right to protest about college practices which seem to them unfair. The MERCURY does not fulfill its role as a college newspaper if it does not give a voice to some of these legitimate complaints. One of the most frequent complaints which concerns both the MERCURY and the student body deals with the daily lunch line at the cafe-

A MERCURY reporter noted that at a specific time during the noon hour, NINETY students were in the serving line outside the cafeteria door. The number is often larger.

At the close of the game, the Pioneers were going for the winning tally. However defensive half-back Ed Smith intercepted Olie Pottmeyer's pass on the 22 to preserve the win for the Titans.
For Ernie Moore, Jim Kiser, Louis Nocida, Bill Kinzer, Ed Drake, Olie Pottmeyer and Tom Gunnoe, the Titan game was their last college football game. These men displayed gallant efforts in attempting to win their final college game, especially Gunnoe who stood out on the chilly Nov. 2 afternoon as undoubtedly the most outstanding football player on the field.
