Mrs. Margaret Osborne

Art Student Exhibits Paintings, Ceramics

Mrs. Margaret Casto Osborne, of Spencer, recently held a one-man exhibition at GSC. This senior exhibition is a part of the completion of a field in art.

Mrs. Osborne is a transfer student from the University of Cincinnati College of Applied Arts, and will graduate from Glenville State College in Jan. 1965.

TWO STUDENTS ATTEND MEET

Miss Katherine Davis and Mrs. Shirley Davis represented the Glenville State College chapter of the Student Education Association at the state-wide joint SEA-FTA conference held recently at Jackson's Mill.

Mr. C. P. Wells, president of the West Virginia Education Association and principal of Nicholas County High School, gave the opening address on Friday evening.

Highlighting the conference was the banquet on Saturday evening at which Miss Winifred Newman, assistant superintendent of Kanawha County Schools, was the key-note speaker. Miss Newman's topic of discussion was "Usefulness of the Teaching Profession."

Ethics in the teaching profession, teaching standards, and SEA and FTA membership were discussed in various group sessions during the meeting.

New state SEA-FTA officers were elected during the conference by the delegates. Miss Susan Nois, from Morris-Harvey College, was elected president. Miss Nois also served as West Virginia's delegate to the national SEA-FTA Conventions during the summer in Vancouver, Canada; and Seattle, Washington.

Mrs. Shirley Davis was Glenville's voting delegate at the Jackson's Mill meet. She is a junior English and social studies student from Parkersburg. Miss Katherine Davis, from Bears-ville, is a senior English and social studies student and was GSC's alterante delegate.

Mr. Nelson Wells, associate professor of education, presented a new approach to reading at the Nov. 3 meeting. Mr. Wells and Miss Jewell Matthews are SEA faculty advisers.

KERR PLACES IN CONTEST

At a joint meeting of the West Virginia Poetry Society and the Parkersburg Chapter of the Society it was announced that Carl Kerr, Associate Professor of English and French, had places in each of the annual poetry contests sponsored by the two organizations. His poem, "Le Petrarichisme in Excelsis Heig'ho," a sonnet satirizing the Petrarchan convention, won second prize in the Parkersburg Chapter competition; and his lyric "Clos-sonne" won first prize in the State Society contest. The awards were made at a luncheon meeting in Parkersburg on October 24th, at which time he read his two poems.

Mr. Kerr is a member of the Glenville Chapter of the West Virginia Poetry Society. He has won prizes in a number of poetry competitions and has had poems published in various magazines and anthologies. One of his poems is included in Centennial Verse of West Virginia, an anthology published by the Centennial Commission last year. He was a member of the Centennial Poetry Committee and a member of the judging panel for the grade-school division of contributors to the Centennial Poetry Contest.

18 Complete Requirements

Eighteen students will complete the requirements for a degree on Nov. 6, announced Dean Delmer K. Somerville.

George Thomas Marshall will graduate with a B.S. degree in chemistry and mathematics. Marshall is a native of Sutton.

The other seventeen students will complete requirements for A.B. degrees in Education. Those receiving degrees in elementary education are Susan Hite Cochran, Clarksburg; Dorothy Sutton Drake, Arbovale; Jolene Cole Jones, Auburn; and Sherry Twilean Sherwood, Normantown.

Alfred A. Clay, Tioga; and Mack Kennedy Samples, Corton, will graduate with fields in English and social studies; Donald Emmett Fulton, Charleston, physical science and biological science; David M. Gillespie, Romney, social studies and teacher-ship. (Continued on page 2)

Glenville Enters Debate Tourney

Glenville State College's debate season begins with a debate tourney at Marshall University, November 7. Various schools from the southeastern United States will compete for first and second place trophies in the tournament.

Representing the affirmative on this year's question are Dock Hinkle and Randolph Dotson; Michael Samson and Fred Keeling take the negative. The question this year is: Resolved, that the federal government should establish a national program of public work for the unemployed. Entered in the novice division are Charles Keefe and Charles Morris. Coaching the team is Mr. Milton Kern, assistant professor of speech.

Hinkle is a business administration and speech student from Summersville; Dotson is a senior physical education and speech student from St. Marys; and

Paul Winter of the Paul Winter Jazz Sextet

Paul Winter Sextet Is Lyceum Feature

The Paul Winter Jazz Sextet will present a program of modern jazz Nov. 13 at the GSC Auditorium. The program is sponsored by the Lyceum Committee headed by Mr. Carl A. Kerr.

The Sextet, comprised of saxophone, classical guitar, flute, piano, bass and drums, will present a highly varied program of modern music, part original, and part influenced by their travels in 25 countries.

This group has been hailed by critics as possibly the most important new jazz group of the 1960's. Winter's concept of a concert jazz ensemble, playing a distinctive repertoire of composed and improvised modern music, has brought the Sextet international acclaim.

In 1962, the Sextet made a six-month tour of Latin America for the State Department, playing 160 concerts in 61 cities, and conducting seminars in every major university.

An official tribute to the success of the tour came from the late President Kennedy, with an invitation to perform at the White House. On Nov. 19, 1962, the Sextet became the first jazz group ever to play in the White House.

Winter's musical background is broad and balanced. Early in his life he began studying the piano and saxophone. Following high school, Winter entered Northwestern University where he formed a jazz group. The group entered the Intercollegiate Jazz Festival and traveled to Washington for the finals at George Washington University and was there named the nation's finest college jazz band.

Since that time, the Sextet has presented concerts all over the United States, played at the top jazz festivals, worked in every major jazz club in the country and made numerous network television appearances.

MERCURY SETS COMPETITION

The Sixth Annual Poetry Contest will again be sponsored by the MERCURY. Winning poems will be published in the Christmas issue of the MERCURY.

Subject matter for the poems is unlimited, and any student is eligible to participate in the contest. MERCURY staff members may also enter the contest as they will be in no way involved with the judging.

Entries may be placed in the MERCURY box at the Student Union, left in the MERCURY office, or given to any staff member. The original copy turned in must be signed with the student's given name. Deadline for entries will be Dec. 8 at 4 p.m.

Each poem will be numbered before being sent to the judges, and judges will select the winning poems by number. Names of the winners will remain unknown to the judges as well as to GSC students until the three winning poems are published in the MERCURY on Dec. 16.

First place winners since the contest was begun include Dorothy Butler, 1959; Leith Owen Clark, 1960; William Spelbring, 1961; Michael Bush, 1962, and Judy Criss, 1963.

Judges for the contest will be announced in the next issue of the MERCURY.

RULES LISTED FOR MEETINGS

The College Administrative Council, after discussion with the Assembly Committee, has developed guidelines for campus assemblies.

Not more than two convocations per term will be scheduled that require dismissal of classes. These could be scheduled during any period of the day or any day of the week, but both would not come during the same period.

Programs to be scheduled for these periods should be presented to the Assembly Committee at least two weeks before the date selected. If they are then approved by the Dean, they can be placed on the activity calendar, and announcement of dismissal of classes plus some description of the program can be issued from his office.

If for any reason an additional period is needed, it would be scheduled by the Administrative Council.

Since these programs are to be considered important enough and attractive enough for dismissal of classes, it is reasonable to assume that employees in the offices, Library and Student Union will wish to attend. These will close during the period involved.

Most group meetings do not call for the dismissal of classes. These can be scheduled at any time desired by the Division, individual instructor, or student group if the desired space is available and the purpose is in keeping with general College purposes. The sponsor of the meeting would be responsible for getting the activity listed on the calendar for the facility to be used. It should be emphasized that those meetings are not to interfere with the regularly scheduled classes of either students or instructors.

The Assembly Committee will not be responsible for the scheduling of these programs as they will be scheduled by the instructors involved. However, the Assembly Committee will schedule assemblies for campus-wide purposes where classes are not dismissed and the auditorium is used.

ASA Sells Fruit Cakes

Do you have a liking for fruit cakes? If so, see a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha Sorority, for they are selling them. Sizes and prices of the cakes are: one and a half pound cakes, $1.75; two pound cakes, $3.00; and three pound cakes, $3.25.

Thursday, November 12, the Alpha Sigs are sponsoring a card party for the ASA's and their dates, and members of the Theta Xi Fraternity and their dates.

To observe Alpha Sigma Alpha Sorority's Founder's Day November 15, members of the Gamma Kappa pledge chapter will attend the Presbyterian Church as a group. Following church services, the members will eat in the Colonial Room.

HMH Entertains Faculty Members

On Halloween, Oct. 30, Alpha Sigma Alpha Sorority was the guest at a Halloween Party given by the women in the Home Management House.

The new Glenville State College faculty members and their wives were entertained at an Autumn Buffet Friday, Oct. 16.

A dessert was held in honor of the Delta Zeta Sorority earlier in the month.

Library Has NTE Manuals

Dr. Delmer K. Somerville, Dean, announced that all persons completing an A.B. degree in Teacher Education at Glenville State College after Nov. 6, 1964, must take the National Teacher Examination.

All persons who will be completing degree requirements in Teacher Education in Jan., 1965, and in March, 1965, must take the examination on Dec. 12, 1964. Persons completing their degree requirements in May, 1965, may take the examination on this date. In fact, it is recommended that they do so. However, they may take the exam as late as March 20, 1965.

Those persons planning to take the examination on Dec. 12 are to register at 3:30 p.m. on Nov. 9, in room 307A. Any student who cannot possibly be at this registration session should see Mr. William Deel prior to Nov. 9.

For the convenience of students planning to take the NTE, the Robert F. Kidd Library has secured study manuals which include questions and answers to examinations given in the past.

Manuals are now available at the reserve desk of the library in the following fields: art, biology and general science, business education, chemistry and physics, elementary education, English, home economics, mathematics, music, physical education, science, social studies, and professional information.

DZs Observe Founder's Day

Members of Delta Zeta Sorority celebrated Founder's Day on Oct. 22. Their official colors of pink and green ribbons were worn under their sorority pins. After eating together in the Colonial Room of the student union a Founder's Day Ceremony was observed.

Mrs. Helen Neal Radke, of Port Angeles, Washington, has been named Delta Zeta's Woman of the year for 1964. Mrs. Radke became a member of Delta Zeta Sorority at the University of Washington, Seattle, Wash.

Mrs. Radke is the president of the National School Boards of America for 1963-64. She is a delegate to the White House Conference on Education and served as a member of President Kennedy's Panel of Consultants on Vocational Education.

Announcement of this award is made at a Founder's Day Celebration as announcement of the winner is made simultaneously throughout the nation in Delta Zeta's 153 college chapters and 232 Alumnae Chapters.

L-MEN FALL TO SALEM

Saturday evening, Oct. 24, GSC played Salem College at West Union, West Virginia. The game was Glenville's sixth conference game and turned out to be its fifth loss of the season. Salem was celebrating its annual homecoming.

Glenville's defense played a fine game in the Salem contest, except for a couple of unlucky passes which Salem made good for touchdowns. The defense was paced by Dike Goff and Harold Erwin with five unassisted tackles each. Guards Larry North and Kermit Moore made two tackles each.

Pioneer offense played a fine game also, but didn't seem to have the extra drive. One of the outstanding offensive plays came in the fourth quarter. Freshman quarterback Jim Mollohan threw an excellent pass to end Bill Adams who caught the ball among a host of Salem boys and made the play good for 42 yards.

Salem scored in all four quarters, scoring first with a pass play. Then in the second quarter fullback Newt Whitaker ran one into the end zone to make a half-time score of 13-0.

In the second half Salem scored two more times with the final score coming within 1:27 of the end of the game. Whitaker plunged over from the one yard line, making the final score 26-0.

The West Virginia conference standings after the Salem game are as follows:

EASTERN DIVISION

Future plans for GSC debaters are a trip to Pittsburgh to observe a cross-examination type debate and participation in a debate contest to be held April 2 and 3 at Bellarmine College in Louisville, Ky.

PAUL WINTER SEXTET

The Sextet has been featured on the NBC "Today Show" and was the subject of a half-hour documentary show on CBS's "Eyewitness".

The group also performed on ABC's "Hootenanny" from West Point at which time they performed their version of the folk tune "John Henry" from one of their albums.

In reviewing recorded concerts by the Sextet at the Universities of Colorado and Kansas, on Columbia records, critic John S. Wilson heralded Winter's achievement by saying that Winter's group constitutes as hopeful a sign for the future of jazz as has turned up in many years.

GSC's New Architecture Building with faculty: Associate Professor Thomas Lilly, Professor John Lilly, Assistant Professor William Lilly, and Dean John Mark Turner.

East Edge of Campus Gets New Building

With the imposing structure of the new addition to Louis Bennett Hall dominating the construction on campus this year many students are perhaps not aware of the latest building to be completed. Pictured above are the recently completed facilities of GSC's new School of Architecture along with its distinguished faculty. Dean John Mark Turner welcomed us and offered to answer any questions we might have about the new addition.

"Our story is an interesting one," began Dean Turner as he poured us a cup of coffee. "When President Heflin suggested that I assemble a faculty for the new School of Architecture at GSC, I was beset with many problems. I wanted something fresh and alive—out of the mainstream of traditional architecture—that would give Glenville State College a reputation for progressive thinking. I scoured hundreds of applications for the kind of men I was looking for, but to no avail. It wasn't until I was driving through Charleston that I discovered, quite by chance, the kind of thing I was looking for. The building that caught my attention was a large treehouse, and a few inquiries produced the names of the architects. That was how I met the three Lilly brothers. By offering them liberal sums of money, I was able to convince them to join the faculty of my new department at GSC."

"Dr. Heflin, then president, offered us the use of any tree on campus for our new building. We chose the big tree in front of the Administration Building, but we were encouraged to change our minds because it was feared that the magnificence of our structure might overshadow the traditional style of the old building. President Heflin thought that the tree overlooking the tennis court would be more suitable, and in the long run we had to agree that he was right.

"Construction was completed this fall," continued Dean Turner, "although we ran into several snags. The State Building Inspector demanded that we provide some means of access to the building as an alternative to our practice of climbing the tree. We readily agreed to this, especially since Assistant Professor Bill Lilly couldn't climb very well, and his loss to the faculty would have been irreparable."

"We also had some trouble requisitioning building materials since the Board had not yet given final approval to our plans. As a result, construction was slowed down somewhat, but we managed to finish with the help of donations and volunteer labor."

"I want you to notice the architecture," continued Dean Turner, waving his hand toward the edifice. "It's in the perpendicular style, modelled after the Lilly house in Charleston."

Professor John Lilly pointed out to us that this style was inspired by the building habits of birds.

"There is a lot to be learned from the birds," he told us. "Our philosophy of architecture is that the most perfect forms are to be found in nature. Our new Architecture Building is the embodiment of that philosophy."

Impressed with the outward appearance, we asked if we might look around the inside. Associate Professor Thomas Lilly personally conducted us through the building.

"As you can see," he explained, "the building is divided into four offices. The front office belongs to Dean Turner. He isn't too happy with the arrangement," Dr. Lilly confided to us, looking

Comedy Dominates Suspense In 'Angel Street' Production

By THOMAS A. LARSON

In the last ten years or so there has been a change in the public taste which has resulted in our finding humor in situations that once terrified us. The great horror movies of the 30's have been replaced by the comedies of terror that now populate our cinema and television programs. We no longer react to evil by fearing it; instead we are delighted by it, finding a wry humor in the inversion of traditional values.

Likewise, our heroes have a different complexion. We have no use for the superman of the nineteenth century in whom the virtues of strength and pureness of heart were combined in the pursuit of justice. The twentieth century has championed the anti-hero, who fumbles through the action quite ineptly, but who nevertheless, for reasons known only to himself, manages to remain in control of the situation and triumphs over evil in the end.

Such considerations as these make it unlikely that nineteenth century melodrama, in which the lines between good and evil are clearly drawn, can be taken seriously today. The twentieth century drama—the term melodrama is out of favor because of its nineteenth century connotations—has added realism. But today we have come to expect something different from what we expected ten or twenty years ago.

What I am suggesting is that Patrick Hamilton's drama, "Angel Street," written as recently as the late 30's, has a different appeal today from what it had during its Broadway production twenty five years ago. In what would seem almost a recognition of the change in taste that has occurred during those years director J. Rodney Busch has given us a production of "Angel Street" which is held together not by the suspense, which characterized the original Broadway production but by the comedy in the character of Inspector Rough, played by Wayman Johnson.

Indeed, Mr. Busch misses no opportunities for comedy in the staging of "Angel Street," and he has added some of his own as well. Wayman Johnson is not merely the friendly, somewhat overbearing police detective that Hamilton has created. Instead he is the anti-hero, which I have suggested earlier is more suited to the modern taste. Mr. Johnson fumbles around the Victorian livingroom of Mrs. Manningham, inspecting everything with his magnifying glass even before he has told the bewildered lady his purpose for calling. After carefully examining the tea service for some time through his magnifying glass, Inspector Rough observes to Mrs. Manningham that he is enough of a detective to see that he has interrupted her tea. What, in the script, is merely a pleasantry on Rough's part becomes excellent comedy when combined with Johnson's antics. Like a male Margaret Rutherford he fumbles through the action, somehow incongruously breathing confidence that everything is under his able control.

By playing up the comedy possible in the play Mr. Busch has perhaps unwillingly sacrificed the suspense. David Morris' portrayal of the villain, Mr. Manningham, is occasionally delightful; he is rarely sinister, except in the opening of the third act before he rings for the maid. He is the most deliberate actor in the play, but he sounds too much like a revival preacher to convince us that he is really evil.

Rebecca Summers, playing the part of Mrs. Manningham, is convincing in the first act. She is able to put across to the audience that she is, at once, afraid of and in love with her husband.

Nancy Reed, playing the maid Elizabeth, is one of the minor successes of the play. She is a sympathetic companion to Mrs. Manningham as well as a traditional comic servant in the scene in which she and the others prepare for Mr. Manningham's return.

Loretta Dwelle, as the maid Nancy, looks very impudent and pretty. However she is never able to be vulgar enough for the part. Even in the scene where she vamps Mr. Manningham, she looks more innocent than she should be.

The performance at times lacked smoothness, especially in the third act which all but blundered along; but the play makes excellent theatre, and the reliance on the comedy was a wise choice.

Louis Bennett Houses 328 Men

Louis Bennett Hall addition and renovation at GSC is scheduled for completion Aug. 31, 1965. Lloyd M. Jones, college business manager says the construction is now approximately one-third complete.

Plans for the new structure include four floors instead of the present three in the old section, a hydraulic elevator, television room in the basement for the use of men residents, mail boxes in the lobby, an apartment for a dormitory director, and a public lounge.

Present partitions between sections in Louis Bennett Hall "will be removed when the new project is completed, making all sections of the dormitory joined by halls. Another feature of the structure will be new furniture throughout the entire building."

The million-dollar structure was designed by architects Griefe and Hoblitzell of Charleston. Total cost of construction of the new section including architectural fees is $774,792. Various pieces of new equipment will be distributed throughout the entire building at a cost of $150,000. This will make the value of the entire dormitory, including both new and old portions, in excess of a million dollars.

The completed dormitory will house 328 men as compared with the present structure's 132 housing capacity.
