'66-'67 Year Ends: Students Reminisce

As the 1966-67 school term comes to an end, it is only natural to reminisce about the year's events. A quick look at the nine months shows an amazing number of outstanding happenings. With the beginning of this school year, two new floors

With the beginning of this school year, two new floors in Women's Hall were ready for occupancy, and the TKE and DZ houses opened this year, also. The new Robert F. Kidd Library was completed in December, and books were moved into it by a book walk. This was the year of the floods, and GSC students were quick to help townspeople move from the flooded areas and repair the damage after the water receded.

Bowling leagues were organized this year with the opening of the new lanes in the Pioneer Center, and a Fac-ulty-Administrative Organization assumed many of the duties formerly connected with the administration alone. To encourage school spirit, the SGA initiated a Spirit Campaign which resulted in quite a bit of enthusiasm. SGA also sponsored a concert, bringing the Drifters, Marcels, and Napoleonic Wars to the campus. April's Fine Arts Festival emphasized the fields of music graphic acts drame and emphasized the fields of music, graphic arts, drama, and literature.

literature. Now that the year is ending, all these events are history. There will be another school year for many of us, though, and it promises to be just as exciting as the past one. For the 172 graduates, however, this year will have been the last as a GSC student. Memory has a way of playing tricks on us, and past events often lose their glow as time passes; how-ever, if we were to stack the good against the bad, we would surely agree that this past year has been both pleasant and eventful for all who attended Glenville State College.

Madam Editor:

In my three years at this col-lege, I have heard nothing but complaints from the faculty and administration concerning student parking regulations. New rules and regulations have been formulated, especially concerning those who were allowed to have cars who were allow on campus. xxx on campus. XXX But, these rules have not been enforced. The rules state that no freshman or sophomore may have a car on campus, with certain exceptions. It is well known that many freshmen brought cars here this fall and either did not register them at all, or had an upperclassman register their cars for them. I say if we're going to have the rule, let's enforce it, either through the administration or through SGA.

Another complaint often heard, this time from the students, is that per capita, the faculty has more parking space than the stumore parking space than the sub-dents, yet the faculty and staff insist on parking in lots desig-nated for student parking. I do not say that many students do not park in faculty lots, but if the nt regulations were string enforced this would not ocpresent ently en campus. Student pollers were met with courtesy at most times. Those people questioned were eager and anxious to make their opinions known. Since 500 to 600 question-naires were distributed, many students filled out several differ-ent ones. Data obtained by these surveys is, therefore, quite repre-sentative of student opinion at GSC. GSC

Roger Shaver and Joe Butler conducted a survey of student opinion regarding the semester system. Generally, the system is opposed by 42.7% of the total men and women with 40.9% in favor of it and 16.3% undecided.
