Dr. Wilburn, in his address, discusses what an education means in today's world:

"The uncertainties of the world in which we live, as emphasized by the armed conflict in South Vietnam, strife in our cities the problems of developing nations everywhere, and all of the problems inherent in bringing greater economic and social privileges to larger and larger numbers of our citizens, emphasize clearly the vital importance of knowledge and indicate strongly the necessity that we must strengthen constantly and continually our education system at all levels. Our colleges and universities must be regarded as vast storehouses of knowledge which, when they are drawn upon by the youth of our land, will provide them with the techniques and skills along with new procedures to be applied in solving today's domestic, national, and international problems. It is not a mere cliche to say that survival of civilization depends, to a large degree upon the graduates of our colleges and universities. Of one thing

Whatever that education is, it is something that each person must ac-quire for himself. It cannot be pur-chased, borrowed, or conferred. It cannot be imposed on a student. He cannot acquire it by some mysterious process resulting by merely living on a college campus for four years in contact with professors, classrooms, and you as the Class of 1974. You, undoubtedly, are beginning what possibly will be the most rewarding four years of your lives. I hope that most of what happens to you will have a most positive effect upon what you will become and what you will believe in terms of values which will guide you in relating yourselves to Glenville State College must quickly become, in every sense, truly your Alma Mater. If this is to be, it must necessarily include the arriving at a degree of maturity which is exhibited in a sincere personal loyalty to yourselves, to your fellow students, to those who cause you to want to be creative, imaginative and objective in all areas of daily living. Only when you measure what you do in terms of values which make actions positive, and only when you mea loyalty to vourselves as being identical with your loyalty to others will C ville State College have the meaning that it should have as your Alma Mater. With best wishes.

Freshmen Arriving

Glenville State College will offer to your sons and daughters the oppor-tunity to achieve an education; but each student must, through individual effort, acquire that combination of knowledge and maturity of thought, wisdom, tolerance, curiosity, ambition integrity, character, and attitude which distinguish the truly educated.'

In speaking of the next few weeks ead, President Wilburn remarks, "Experience has taught us that the early months of college are a time of crisis for parents and students alike. Until now, most of you have been closely associated with the education of your sons and daughters. You have provided much of their instruction in your homes. Most of you have encouraged them to receive religious training. You have known your child-ren's teachers and the members of the school board; you have participated in PTA activities and school events; you have had the chief responsibility for discipline, supervision of study, and control of non-academic activities outside of school. And now, you are turning your sons and daughters over to Glenville State College. It is under standable if you have some misgivings and apprehensions."

Commenting on the newly initiated "Policies, Rules, and Regulations Regarding Student Rights, Responsi-bilities, and Conduct in West Virginia State Universities and Colleges" which were enacted by the West Virginia Board of Regents on August 4, 1970, Dr. Wilburn notes, "There seems to be nothing in the Policies, Rules and Regulations which are not now a part of the operating procedures of the College as far as student rights, responsibilities, and conduct are concerned. All students have been afforded due process in all discious. forded due process in all disciplinary actions, and shall continue to be pro-vided the same."

Parents will be given information concerning the size, location, service and regulations of the college, the manner of treatment of their sons and daughters, qualifications of the instructional staff and pertinent information about Glenville State, in particular

Dr. Wilburn pledges the cooperation of all his staff and personnel with these final words:

"As parents of our entering freshmen class, you are naturally favor-ably inclined toward higher education. You are hopeful of its value and are convinced that it is well worth the sacrifice many are making to send your sons and daughters to Glenville Finally, on the part of Glenville State College, I pledge to you that all who serve here will do their best to encourage your sons and daughters to become better men and women by reason of having studied here and by having associated with us. We appreci-ate your confidence in this College and in giving us, for a time, your most precious possessions-your sons and daughters. Se accept this trust with sincere responsibility."
