Theta Xi's Conduct Basketball Dribble

The annual Theta Xi Basketball Dribble to the Tournaments at Charleston got underway Tuesday at 3 p.m. in front of the Student Union as Dean Maze passed the ball to the group of eager dribblers. About thirty of the brothers were involved with the journey, which usually takes 23 hours of rigorous efforts to keep up energy and warmth. The dribblers task rotated with every mile. Their goal was reached as Reggie Stewart dunked the ball in the basket at the Charleston Civic Center. The idea for the tradition was originated in 1969 by Pat Wiant, an active Theta Xi. Before he could see the idea become a reality, he was killed in a car accident. Since that time, the Theta Xi's have made their yearly jaunt to Charleston in memory of Pat Wiant and in hopes of inspiring student enthusiasm.

DR. JOHN OTTS VISITS GSC

Accreditation Team Visit Scheduled For March 24

On Feb. 24 and 25, Dr. John Otts, Chairman of the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education, visited Glenville's campus as an orientation procedure. NCATE is an accrediting association, and Dr. Otts, who is an associate professor of the College of Education at the University of South Carolina in Columbia, heads the eight man committee that will report to NCATE after a complete evaluation March 24-27.

Dr. Otts, who has served on approximately ten accreditation teams, pointed out that his visit last Sunday and Monday was strictly to familiarize himself with the campus and administration.

In March the complete NCATE team will make a thorough examination of Glenville to verify the report published by Glenville for NCATE. They will interview faculty, graduates, student teachers and various other people connected with GSC. Then a report will be made expressing the team's opinion on standards. Dr. Otts emphasized that the team did not make recommendations or decisions. He explained that Glenville must be accredited every five years and that before the college is accredited by NCATE, it first must go through two preliminary accreditations. The first is by the state of W. Va. and the second by Glenville's regional North Central Association. After the team report, President Wilburn and Dr. Otts will travel to Washington for the Council hearing in the fall.

The opinions given by the team can be valuable to the college. Dr. Otts explained, "For example, if the college hadn't been able to receive enough money for the library's needed improvement, this would be a substantial argument when petitioning for money."

There are various advantages to accreditation. The chief advantage for the student is that, if Glenville is accredited, graduates in teacher education will be certified in 20 other states.

The accreditation team from NCATE is constructive to Glenville primarily through its objectivity. As Dr. Otts stated, "We try to help the institution become a better institution."

BULLETIN

Glenville State College advanced to the semi-finals of the WVIAC Basketball Tournament by defeating Concord last night. GSC will face the top-ranked small college team, Fairmont, tonight.

Theta Xi fraternity started their traditional basketball dribble to Charleston on Tuesday, for the WVIAC tournaments.

Improvements Added To S. Union

The Student Congress in association with the college administration, announces that contrary to original plans Student Union hours, for the immediate future, will remain the same. A combined effort of the college administration and Student Congress has produced some innovative and exciting additions to the Student Union program. Already in use are ping-pong tables and related facilities. These are made available from 3 p.m. each day until closing time. In addition, at its last meeting the Student Congress approved the purchase of a new television for the Student Union. Provisions also have been made to put the new televisions in a location more accessible to students than the present location. Mr. Hicks, Student Union Director has also indicated in his plans that pinball machines and other amusements will soon be made available in the Union area. One movie, providing it is available from the film company, will be the popular "Lady Sings the Blues." Funds for the movie were allocated to the Student Congress from the Conv.-Lyceum Committee.

Student Congress plans for a bowling tournament and a pool tournament in the Game Room are rapidly being completed. David Jaffre and Gary Dobson will be coordinating these events. The success of these activities will depend largely on the degree of participation by students.

Student Congress President Phil Reale said that the activities and new policies in regard to the Student Union are an excellent example of what can result when students and administration work cooperatively toward a common goal. He said his only hope was that students would make maximum use of their new resources for entertainment.

Science And Teaching: Sometimes They Meet

Did you ever wonder why your elementary teachers skipped science day after day? And later did you wonder why science was so difficult in high school and then impossible at college? We may have the answer, at least one answer anyway. Let's go back to the elementary teachers because they haven't had the proper training to teach it.

That is what we are trying to correct with Science 321. Science Methods and Materials for Elementary Teachers, taught by Mr. Joe Evans on Wednesday evenings. There are now 10 students enrolled in this class and they are actually teaching science to elementary children. Each group prepares a unit, then each student has an opportunity to teach the elementary children two 45 minute lessons. These two teaching sessions are a few weeks apart to give the student an opportunity to improve. There is a certified elementary teacher, Mr. Evans, and all class members serving as critics. Each session is video-taped and later viewed so that the students can see their performance—both good and bad.

At the present time the Science students are working with 15 children in first and second grades and 12 children in fourth and fifth grades.

Science 321 is offered the second semester each year in an effort to help prepare elementary teachers for the classroom. If you are an elementary or early childhood major and need some confidence in your science teaching ability—we highly recommend Science 321.

GSC Speakers Bureau Established On Campus

The Speakers Bureau is one of the latest ideas of Glenville State College. It has been organized by Mr. Robert Gainer at the request of Dean Maze. The purpose of the Bureau is for better community relations: to keep the name of our college before the public and as a recruiting device for students.

All faculty and staff were invited to be speakers and the response was very good. Twenty-six speakers talking on more than 70 subjects can be provided by the Speakers Bureau. The subjects range from art to travel, some include slide presentations, demonstrations and even inservice workshops in science and music for the elementary level.

This is a service offered to the five counties surrounding Glenville State College and is free except for possibly paying the speaker's transportation expenses.

An attractive brochure has been mailed to all service organizations in the area and is available through Mr. Gainer's office.

To date the Bureau has not been called upon for speakers; however, it is anticipated that it will become a very active organization.

Anyone desiring more information may write to: Speakers Bureau, Administrative Services Office, Glenville State College, Glenville, W. Va. 26351.

Heart Fund Report

The Heart Fund total continues to climb each day as mail returns are received from residents who were not at home when volunteers called and from business folk throughout the county. The success of the campaign has been due to "willing workers" such as the Panhellenic group, the Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity, and Mrs. Yvonne King and the Mercury staff for publicity which has been given. Time, talent and concern has been contributed as well as money. We still are looking forward to the "Krazy Legs" Contest for added funds plus lots of fun. Mrs. Garnett Taylor

Mercury Rises? Heat Is On!

In the past few weeks there has been a literal barrage of complaints drifting back to our office, through both direct and indirect sources, concerning the quality of The Mercury. The scope of criticism is wide, as is the range of critics. Because we believe the Mercury is worth defending, we would like to take this opportunity to answer our critics.

First, a few facts. The Mercury is published weekly by one Editor, one assistant-editor, a sports editor, two typists, three IBM operators, one News Bureau Director, four, (Yes four,) reporters, two photographers, and one advisor. There was a time (specifically last year) when there were two assistant editors, several other staff positions and 30 reporters. But, financial aid cuts and curriculum revisions have changed that, and we "do with what we have." Admittedly "poor quality" cannot be justified with tales of woe, but who has the right to define terms (such as 'quality') and criticize without first-hand knowledge of the situation? More importantly, who can supply a workable solution?

The Mercury has been termed inferior and even illiterate by some. It has been criticized as being intellectually boring, without taste and whatever else that can be thought of by those who deem themselves learned enough to judge. Yes, we agree, the publication is far from perfect. But, we also feel that it has not merited this harsh criticism. As always, it is easier to find fault, and "cuts" can be so much more sarcastic and witty than compliments.

We are 16 people working to find news, write, type set in type and headline for publication of a reputable newspaper. To meet deadlines, we have three and 1/2 days (working two nights) a week to get the paper out every Friday. We have tried a few innovations this year to improve The Mercury but they have been passed over. In case you haven't noticed, the new flag (across the front page), numerous features, cartoons and even the attempt to present valid controversial subjects in our editorial column. If there are typographical and grammatical errors, we beg your pardon. If they are that offensive to you would you care to volunteer to help? (an overwhelming response is expected). There has been a suggestion that we publish bi-monthly and this has been the only constructive criticism thus far. We have given much consideration to it, but the reaction when we publish a two page paper instead of four is quite enough to make us forget the thought. We also must consider the timeliness of news and just what must be published weekly. Some would even like to see literary editions but we feel that our primary goal should be to consider the desires of as many students as possible. Essentially we must then decide just whom to please. As it stands we are seemingly satisfying a silent few.

The Mercury is a publication we are proud of (yes proud). We define quality in relationship to the content and not the technicalities. That is not to say that we do not care about misspelled words, etc., because every attempt is made to proofread carefully. But, the Mercury is a "learning experience" and our primary consideration is to provide worthwhile pertinent news to students on this campus, and we sincerely feel that we do this adequately. If the Mercury does not meet your personal standards, quit being destructive with mere criticism, get involved and volunteer to help.

Bluefield Defeats G-M In Overtime

The Pioneers of Glenville State College mishandled a 13 point lead with just under nine minutes remaining in the game to fall to Bluefield, 88-87 in overtime.

The Pioneers and the Big Blues were knotted at 38 all following the first half of play. However, in the first 12 minutes of the second half the Pioneers rushed out to a 13 point lead. Bluefield came roaring back and knotted the count at 76-76 with 1:27 left.

The Pioneers pulled out in front again, but Carter Johnson banked in a rangy field goal at the buzzer to push the tussle into overtime.

Glenville led in overtime by four, but two free throws by the Big Blues with no time remaining on the clock slipped Bluefield out in front for the win, 88-87.

"LOST"

A boy, on horseback lost in an expanse of woods, acted sensibly: dropped the bridle reins across horse's neck, horse took him home.

Lost in an expanse of woods, a light snow, a hunter takes of on what to him is the way out. After a time, he notes: Here are tracks of another man, I'll follow him out. A little later, and: Well, there are tracks of two men. When tracks of three men appear, he awakes: They are his own tracks, he is going in circles.

The thing that guided the horse home, the hunter had in him. Man must have a keener sense of loss, man either trusts the Thing that can "guide him home", or he experiences disaster.
