Governor Rockefeller Visits GSC Campus

"I have a very strong feeling about this particular institution; as you look across West Virginia, and you look at the graduates of Glenville State College and what they are doing, it's remarkable," was the opening statement made by Governor John D. Rockefeller IV, Thursday, Dec. 6. Governor Rockefeller visited the campus and spoke with faculty, administration and students.

After a short introductory speech, Governor Rockefeller opened the floor to questions. Several issues were brought up as questions came from the audience. Nuclear energy, the Cranberry backcountry, re-election, state employees bargaining fights and the Iranian crisis were ginia roads were the main topic of the session.

Rockefeller admitted that most West Virginia roads were in bad repair, "A prime campaign promise: of mine was roadwork." When Rockefeller first took office, roads were resurfaced an average of once every 30 years. As of now, roads are resurfaced every 14 years. Rockefeller hopes to bring the average down to every 8 to 10 years.

As the topic of roads was dismissed, a question of whether or not to allow coalmining in the Cranberry backcountry arose. Rockefeller stated that as long as he lived, there would be no coalmining there. This comment brought cheers from the audience. The Federal Surface Mine Act, was also supported by the Rockefeller administration. As for nuclear energy, "I just don't trust nuclear power, yet," stated Rockefeller.

In closing, Governor Rockefeller was asked if he would run for re-election. "I don't know how to answer," was the only reply. A last question, pertaining to the Iranian crisis, was asked, and Governor Rockefeller complimented President Jimmy Carter on his handling such an "emotionally charged" situation.

After the question/answer session Rockefeller traveled to the Calhoun County Vo-Tech Center. by Carron Smith

One Acts Prepare For Premiere

The three one act plays will be presented to the GSC students on Tuesday, Dec. 18 at 6:30 in the auditorium. The first of the three plays is 'Early Frost.' 'Early Frost' ia a very tender yet gripping story of Hannan and Louise, two sisters who live in a rambling old house. Hannan, the elder sister, has been considered peculiar ever since childhood, when a missing playmate was believed carried off by gypies. When Alice, the sister's little niece, comes to live with them, Hannah fearfully insists that she is the missing child returned. While playing in the attic, Alice is visited by a strange illusion which almost leads her to solve the mystery of fifty years ago. Hannah, fearing her long-guarded secret will be discovered, tries to silence the little girl. It is this tense, cat-andmouse game between the two that brings the play to a startling climax.

The cast members of the play "Early Frost" are: Raeleen McMillion as Louise, Pat Lewis as Hannah, Rhonda Anderson as Alice, Athelene Birchfield as Lydia and Jerri Riley as Mrs. Clayton.

The second play is "Terror Walks Tonight." This play tells the story of Mrs. Harrison, believing that when young people go steady, there is apt to be trouble, who organizes a committee to rotate all dates, and sends a team out to see who is going with whom. Resenting her interference and to keep the busy bodies at home, the teenagers invent a sex maniac roaming the neighborhood. As a disquise, the young boy wears a slouch hat, a raincoat with the collars turned and a muffler. When someone else appears in a similiar outfit, panic ensues and one of the most prominent citizens almost gets arrested as a local Jack (cont. on page 4

Speaking Of Christmas . . .

"Santa Claus has just traded in Rudolph and the otner reindeer for a new 1980 Chevy Chevette. Chevettes not only get 28 miles to the gallon, but they also simplify the parking (on roofs) by requiring little space."

It seems it won't be long before Christmas becomes nothing but an advertising gimic; a great way for the market to cash in on big deals. Christmas has lost all touch of simplicity, and is turning more commercialized. People seem to hustle and bustle around, worrying about what to buy and who to buy for. Wondering if the size will fit or if the price is right. We seem to forget the true meaning of Christmas.

As the season closes in, the true meaning of Christmas gets lost in bright lights, fake snow, and the excitement of wrapped gifts under the cold aluminum trees. Families gather together for a great feast; and for one day children are on their best behavior and inlaws are civil to one another. By the end of the day, people are worn out from keeping happy thoughts in their minds all day.

What happened to the true meaning of Christmas? I feel that our society is slowly changing the holiday of "Christ"mas to Xmas. We are simply looking over a lot of the religious factors tied into the holiday. I wonder how many families dedicate time at Christmas to remember the birth of Jesus, and witt meant for this world. Perhaps the new decade will bring back some of the old religious customs shared on the holidays, and maybe commercialization can take a back seat for awhile.

Book Exchange Scheduled

The Glenville State College Student Congress is proud to announce sponsorship of a book exchange, to be conducted through the first eight days of classes of the spring semester.

The exchange will be a non-profit making service provided by the Student Congress member in order to ease the cost of your college education.

For your convenience, the book exchange will be centrally located in the Student Congress Room at 103 of the Pioneer Center.

If you have books that need to be sold, clean them up, set your own price, and then bring them to the Student Congress Room on January 14th or 15th. Then on Wednesday, January 23rd, come back to the Student Congress Room and collect either your money or your book.

You will be provided with an information sheet that should be completed and turned in with your books; the sheet should include your name, the title of each book you are selling, and the sale price of each book.

This service provided will save you, the student, a lot of time and effort; I urge you to take advantage of this activity.

Lets all work together to make this event a successful one!

David Tebay Student Congress Vice-President

Since finals will not be over until Friday, Dec. 21, there is just not enough time to get grade reports processed and mailed prior to the holiday season. Therefore, grades will not be mailed until Jan. 4. The Registrar asks all students to accept this slight inconvenience in the true spirit of Christmas.

All December graduates who wish to place orders for graduation announcements should do so before leaving the campus at the end of the first semester. This is to be done at the College Bookstore.

This is only for those who are planning to come back in May and participate in commencement exercises at that time.

FOOD WARNINGS ARE QUESTIONED

"Use of this product may be hazardous to your health. This product contains saccharin which has been determined to cause cancer in laboratory animals." This type of labeling has become a daily part of our life. Any dieter can tell you where that quote came. "The Surgeon General has determined that smoking is dangerous to your health." Another cliche that baffles many a person, is found on all cigarette packages. It seems strange, to me, that cigarettes were banned from television for being "dangerous" to your health, yet diet soft drinks still run rampant.

Which brings us to yet another interesting question. Why, if both are considered bad for a person, are cigarettes worded as "dangerous" and diet drinks worded as "hazardous?" And, which is considered a worse fate, "dangerous" or "hazardous?" In my surveys hazardous has been said to be a worse fate. Beware diet soft drink lovers, you're in trouble.

However, have you noticed that in just a matter of a decade the list of cancer causing agents has multiplied? In just a matter of months the pun George Carlin used on The Johnny Carson Show has become true; "The Surgeon General has determined that swallowing salvia in great amounts can cause throat cancer."

A poem for all seasons.

'Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the condo Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse;
The silk stockings with garters were hung up with care,
In hopes that St. Nicholas would soon be there;
The income tax deductions were nestled snug in their beds,
While visions of sacchrin plums danced in their heads;
Momma in her psychodelic kerchief and I in my blue denim cap,
Had just settled down for, like man, a long winter's nap,—
When out on the simulated lawn there arose such a din,
I sprang from the water bed to see if the police were coming in.

Away to the window I flew with a Superman clash,
Threw up my supper and did I give everyone a flash.
The moon, on the breast of the new fallen snow,
Gave an ozone luster of high noon to objects below;
When what to my visine wondering eyes should appear,
But a sport sleigh and eight dwarf reindeer,
With a little head-honcho so lively and quick,
I knew in a moment it must be a hyperactive St. Nick.
More rapid than Concords his coursers they came,
And he whistled and shouted and called them by name.

"Now, Dasher! now, Dancer! now, Prancer and Vixen!
On, Comet! on, Cupid! on, Donder and Blitzen!
To the top of the hot tub, to the top of the wall!
Now, dash away, dish away, dash away all!

As small buildings before the wild hurricane fly,
When they meet with a roadblock, mount to the sky,
So, up to the condo's roof the coursers they flew,
With a sleigh full of goodies--and St. Nicholas, too.
And then in a twinkling I heard on the roof
The prancing and disco dancing to the beat of each little hoof,
As I drew in my head and was stumbling around,
Down the tree St. Nicholas came with a bound.

He was dressed all in blue sable from his head to his foot,
And his clothes were all varnished with ashes and soot;
A bundle of toys he had hung on his back,
And he looked like a peddler, just opening his pack.
His eyes how they twinkled, his dimple (I won't say where) how merry!
His cheeks were like roses, his nose like a cherry;
His pouty little mouth was drawn up like a bow,
And the beard on his chin was as white as the snow.

The stump of a "pipe" he held tight in his teeth,
And the acid smoke of it enclosed his head like a thief.
He had a broad face, and a chubby little belly
That shook like an earthquake, when he laughed, like abowlfull of jello jelly.
He was a little obese and plump, a right jolly old elf-And I laughed when I saw him, in spite of meself.
A wink of his eye and a twist of his head
Soon made me put down my gun, knowing I had nothing to dread.

He spoke not a word, but got down and got busy,
And filled all the stockings; then he turned in a tizzy,
And thumbing his finger aside of his nose,
And giving a sneeze, up the tree he rose.
He pogoed to his sleigh, to his team gave a whistle,
And away they flew like the down of a thistle;
But I heard him shout, when he drove out of sight:
"Happy Christmas to all, and to all a good night!"

SCORE And ACE Profiled

SCORE, the Service Corps of Retired Executives, and ACE, its complementary Corps of Active Exectives, have long been valued and important extensions of the SBA's management assistance program. SBA's can work jointly with these two volunteer programs if they run into any problems which they feel they need assistance with.

As for faculty participants in SBI, perhaps the most satisfying aspect of the program is seeing their students completely involved and "turned on." There is an immediacy about the SBI Program which students continue to find engrossing. The problems of their clients tend to become their own problems. The resultant realistic problem—solving atmosphere provides a richly rewarding learning experience for both students and faculty.

Manley Offers A Hairy Solution

by Carron Smith

Have you ever seen the magazine ads about creams and potions to help hair grow back on your balding pate? "Those creams and potions won't work," states Dr. Louis J. Manley, a hair transplant specialist. Dr. Manley maintains a private practice in Glenville as a licensed osteopathic physician and surgeon, is the Gilmer County Medical Examiner, and medical director of GSC. Dr. Manley is also director of the Ad-Nu-Hair Clinic, a transplant business he has operated since his moving to Glenville from Michigan 10 years ago.

Dr. Manley is one of only a few physicians in the tri-state area that does hair transplants. Dr. Manley uses the "cookie cutter" method of transplants. Dr. Manley has two offices now open, one in Charleston and another in Bluefield, with plans being made for a third to open at Huntington in January. In August. of this year, Dr. Manley launched an advertising campaign for free consultations in Charleston. "Doctors are traditionally conservative about advertising," he says, "and I was as timid as the rest of them. It was my clients who persuaded me."

Dr. Manley uses the "cookie cutter" method which involves a slender metal tube called an Orentreich transplant punch. The surgical instrument was named for its New York Doctor/Inventor, Dr. Norman Orentreich.

But why is it called the "cookie cutter" method? The Orentreich method involves removing a small A circle of skin from the bald area and then filling the hole with hair follicles punched from the back of the scalp. "The plugs are excised in much the same manner as cutting cookies out of dough," explains Dr. Manley. Each session takes about two hours and grafts about 50 plugs, with 5 to 15 new hairs emerging from this number of plugs. The procedure must be spaced at least a month apart. Most men require no more than four grafting sessions. It also should be noted that this procedure does not work on women, due to the fact that women go bald all over their head and a man goes bald in a pattern.

There is little pain involved in this process. The entire procedure takes place in Dr. Manley's office under a local anesthesia. The transplanted roots will begin to take root and grow new hair in two or three months.

Friendly Moving Day Set For January 20

Friendly Moving Day is once again upon us. Friendly Moving Day will be Sunday, Jan. 20, from 6-11 p.m. No moves can be made prior to this day or time, or forfeiture of the right to move will be the result. All moves must be agreed upon mutually and no one can be forced or asked to leave their original room assignment.

The following will be the procedure for moving: both parties must report to the resident hall office and file a request form no later than Jan. 18, 1980, at 12 noon. After a record is made of the change and new keys are issued, the student may return to their room and move into new room assignment. The former room key must be returned to the office immediately. Contact your resident assistant and have your new room assignment inventoried. It is also noted that men may not move between resident halls.

Friendly Moving Day, to establish the status of your room as a single or double occupancy. If a roommate moves out of your room on Friendly Moving Day, you have three alternatives: you may move into another room with a student who needs a roommate to establish double occupancy; another student (without a roommate) may move into your room to establish double occupancy; or you may elect to keep your room as a private room by going to the Business Office and paying the prorated balance due on a private room. You must then show the receipt for such payment to the House Director. After Friendly Moving Day adjustments, any student losing a roommate will not be held responsible for his replacement or the responsibility for paying for a private room.

Electronic World Visited

We decided last Wednesday night to shut off the TV, and listen to the radio and pop popcorn, and have an old-fashioned evening at home. This we did, and discovered we lived in an electronic world so intensely, that to have an old-fashioned evening at home was fooling ourselves.

The radio that we listened to, was called -radio-, but in reality it is nothing resembling the radios of the 40's or 50's. This radio is equipped to pick up long distances, it is wired for stereo sound, and set to receive AM, FAM, or FM stereo stations. It also has a tape player and phonograph as component parts.

I went into the kitchen to pop popcorn. This was done in a special designed popper for use in microwave and set the electronic panel to start the microwave. In three minutes, I took the popper out, popped high with white popcorn. I set a small dish of butter into the microwave and set the electronic timer for 45 seconds to melt the butter.

The nightly talk show was on and callers were calling in with comments for the show host to remark in his one-sided manner.

The first guest was a representative of toy parties in the Pittsburgh area. She said her biggest toy seller this year was an electronic cash register. The numbers were digital and it had its own tape printed for the child to see.

The other guest was a representative of a toy outlet in Pittsburgh, which had several stores. He said the most popular toys in the stores were electronic games, either hand-held, or large ones. The larger ones were games of pinball or baseball or football.

I looked at my husband and asked, "How can we have an oldfashioned evening in an electronic world?" Illa Jean Boggs

One-Act Pluys

The cast members of this spell-binding play are: Mark Harry as Lester Floyd, Chuck Rutherford as Willie Overton, Sandi Gainer as Estelle Floyd, Carole Norton as Mrs. Harrison, Karen Brady as Miss Woods, Mark Spaur as Harold Mayhew, Tammy Stalnaker as Paula Larkin, Donna Bumgarner as Miss Grace Hillman and Albert Skidmore as the Chief of Police.

The third of the three one-act plays is "Beast of a Different Burden." In this play Gladys is pushing thirty, and desperate. Her kid sister is getting married soon, and not only is Gladys still single, but she can't even find a date for the wedding. The prospect is humiliating; Gladys will do anything to get herself a man.

Enter Peter, the new next-door neighbor. He's in his early thirties, attractive, continental, charming, and unattached. He's also a bit...well, strange. He'd love to be close to Gladys, he's been lonely all his life but he has one small problem that gets in his way. He's afraid that people won't like him, just because he's a vampire. Not a practicing vampire, of course, he hasn't done that in years. But he's self-conscious, and guilt-ridden and terribly neurotic. And he has several very peculiar habits.

Despite Peter's little short comings, Gladys is determined to get her man. And eventually, love, and a little blackmail, conquers all.

The characters of the play are: Gladys-Nancy Sutton; Peter-Tim Brady and Tommy-Randy Gibson.

So if you are looking for an exciting evening, come see these three unusual plays on Dec. 18, at 8:00 in the auditorium. Admission is free.

"Generally transplants are more interesting to those between 25 and 45, but I had a consultation the other day with a 16-year-old." Dr. Manley also noted that his oldest client was 74, and a retired judge. "So," says Dr. Manley, "it is never too late."

Graduates Added

There are three additions to the list of Dec. graduates. These students are: Gary David Nangle, from Washington, with a Bachelor Degree in Social Work and a minor in Sociology. Two will graduate with an Associate Degree in Science: Gloria Diane Hanlon, from Vienna, in Ornamental Horticulture and Elizabeth M. Fidler-Straley, from Glenville, in Social Service Technology.

New Program Announced

The Division of Business, with President Simmon's approval has a new program (SBI-Business Institute). S.B.I. works in conjunction with SBA (Small Business Administration) whose regional office is in Clarksburg, WV. SBI was initiated last fall by President Simmons, Dean Peterson, Mr. Ernie Smith and Mr. Owen Stanley who acts as faculty coordinator at G.S.C.

The Small Business Institute, sponsored by SBA, calls upon the resources of progressive schools of business to furnish management assistance counseling to members of the small business community who are-usually-either SBA clients or recipients of government contracts to disadvantaged firms. The program is a mutually beneficial one. To the participating schools, it offers a practical training ground for their students, which supplements academic theory by permitting them to address live problems in a real business environment. State-supported schools are provided with valuable-and measurable-community service opportunities which townspeople and state legislators will appreciate. To small business owners, it furnishes valuable counseling assistance they could not otherwise af-

Glenville State College has been assigned five cases in this area to work with. Two of the cases are in Parkersburg and three student counselors are assigned to each case. The three students from GSC who are assigned to one of the cases in Parkersburg are: Richard Hall, and Bruce Swender. The student counselors observe and evaluate various problems in small business and come up with possible solutions. The on-site approach is possibly the most exciting aspect of the SBI program to the students who participate in it. Students today are much concerned with relevance in education. Many of them ask "Will these courses prepare me to make actual decisions when I am confronted with real prob-They feel a need to test their knowledge through an exercise which requires solutions to real problems, not by a textbook case which may be statis or even contrived. Through SBI, students are given an early opportunity to test their ability to use problem-solving tools in actual problem situations.

The annual Christmas luncheon will be held in the Language Division Wednesday, Dec. 19 at 12 noon. Dr. and Mrs. Espy Miller and Mr. Carl Kerr have been invited as special guests. Members of the English and Speech faculty will also attend.

The annual Mercury Christmas Party takes a new slant this year. The party will be a dinner to be held at the home of Mrs. King, the advisor. Gifts will be exchanged. The party is an event of Sunday, Dec. 16 at 4 p.m.
