Just Because You're Not Paranoid Doesn't Mean They're Not Out To Get You

Paranoia Is Destroyia

Do you look in under the stall doors to see if there is anyone in the bathroom? Do you blend into crowds hoping no one will see you? Do you dress dowdy so you will not stand out as a centerpiece? Do you turn on the light in your car before getting in? Do you turn on all your lights and check your closets before shutting your dorm door? Do you check every room in your apartment before undressing for bed?

Do you check all the shower stalls before showering? Do you always turn on all the lights in a motel room when you are alone? Do you take the out-of-the-way routes to classes, to avoid people? Do you drop classes that you are in where people stare at you?

If you answered yes to any of the above classes, then you are probably paranoid. Paranoia is a disease that afflicts almost everyone that is afraid of being the center of attention.

Do you worry that people watch you when you walk? I know I do. Of course, this might have some direct correlation with the fact that I was once told I walked like a football player. Which brings me to another question. How do football players walk? Do they do it any differently than everyone else? I mean, I know that everyone has their own special quirk (or should I say sway) when it comes to walking. The sways are especially noticable in the tight designer clothes of today. Men are the designers of most of the tight pants and straight skirts, so no wonder, now they can all enjoy sitting at dances and watching women dance. (Of course men also wear their pants rather tight, so the women can also enjoy.)

However, to make a long story short, let's all be thankful that warm weather has arrived and both men and women can enjoy one of the biggest sports on campus....body-watching.

Signs of the Times

There are signs all over and GSC is no exception. Signs, signs, and more signs. Signs like keep out, keep door closed, exit, do not open and so on and so on. These signs may mean different things to different people, but the ones that impress me the most are the President's Office (BMOC himself), the Assistant Dean (the Assistant to the Assistant to the BMOC) the Mercury Office (Vonnice 'Dearest' King within), the Registrars Office (closed spaces that require close eye to eye contact tend to pop out my contacts) and the Financial Aid Office (money always interests me).

Of course there are a few signs that I am mediocre about like File 13, (the Mercury has dedicated a file just for me), Mens, (only in extreme emergencies), Boiler Room, Darkroom (yeah bats are alright), LBH (the name brings upon a fit of hyperventilating), and the cafeteria (food is sometimes served there).

Other things have caught my eye over the past three years here like - No Parking (God, they keep this up even in the daytime and who would want to park in the daytime), Buzz before entering (I'll leave that one alone), stamp out forest fires (an old hot foot) and Out of Order (which is one of the most cruel signs there ever was, just ask the poor sucker who is caught by it).

The only sign I do not feel anything for is class canceled because I can handle something like that, but I am afraid that when I receive my degree it will say person and career canceled. No errors, no balls and no strikes.

Gee Visits GSC

Dr. E. Gordon Gee, President of West Virginia University, told a group of faculty and staff at Glenville State College that the University and the state colleges in West Virginia must pull together and open the lines of communication among the campuses.

"My purpose in visiting all of the campuses is to reduce the amount of tension that exists between the University and the colleges, based on financial resources and educational role and mission," said the new University president. "It's important for us (WVU) to get to know the campuses and realize the importance of the state colleges and the graduate programs we offer."

Gee said that it is the job of higher education to educate students, but the University cannot be all things to everyone. And because of financial constraints, Gee is looking at a leaner and stronger university. "Presently, we are granting 175 program degrees. I'd like to see that decrease to about 140. We need to be more discreet to our role and mission and avoid the areas that we just can't afford."

Gee also met with the members of the Glenville State College Student Congress.

Triplett States Opinion

"One ring to rule them all, One ring to find them, One ring to bring them all and in the darkness bind them."

So ends the runic rhyme of the quest of the rings, undergone by Bilbo and Frodo of the hobbit clan, to save the shire and the world from the evilness of Sauron the Great.

Rob Inglis brought J. R. R. Tolkien's trilogy masterpiece to the GSC Auditorium on April 19, and he opened with the all-important ring and the journey of Frodo to Sauron's mountain. Mr. Inglis quoted lines from The Two Towers and from The Return of the King. He condensed these two books into a two-hour presentation which, indeed, took the mastery and wizardry of Gandalf to task. The only props used were a podium, three chairs, a long cloak (which signified Gandalf), and a funny little hobbit costume that consisted of a brown tunic, green knickers, pointed shoes, and brown socks.

The reading of the lines was excellent, but for all of the characters, a one-man rendition was stretching it a bit far. Also, the apathy on this campus is similar to the menacing Black Riders, who have no soul. Only thirty people showed up for the reading, and of these, only one English teacher attended. Several other teachers attended, but in all respect, it was a poor showing for such an enterprise.

So, for all purposes, the presentation went like everything else on this campus: if it is not required, then the turnout is poor. With these words, I will leave this review: "Yet it is not our part to master all the tides of the world, but to do what is in us for the succor of those years wherein we are set, uprooting the evil in the fields that we know, so that those who live after may have clean earth to till."

Ballot Procedure Outlined

Last week we took a look at the procedures for voting an absentee ballot in the Circuit Clerk's Office. This week we will be discussing Voting an Absentee Ballot by mail. Although they are somewhat similar, the two ways of voting an absentee ballot, (1) in the Circuit Clerk's Office and (2) by mail, are somewhat different.

A person who is qualified to vote a ballot by mail may, not more than 60 days before the election, make application to the circuit clerk for a ballot. The clerk, however, shall not honor any application for a ballot received in the mail after the fourth day before the election. An application form shall be provided by the circuit clerk.

The members of the Armed Forces, students, and others with legal reasons for being away from home and the polling place in which they are registered, may vote an Absentee Ballot.

The circuit clerk shall, between the 30th and the fourth day before the election, mail the applicant: (a) One Absent Voter's Ballot; (b) One Absent Voter's Ballot Envelope No. 1; and (c) One Absent Voter's Ballot Envelope No. 2. The clerk shall not, however, after the 15th day before the election, mail a ballot to an applicant whose address is outside the continental limits of the United States.

Upon receipt of the ballot by mail, the voter shall mark the ballot. A voter who requires assistance in voting, and who has indicated the need for assistance and the reasons therefore on the application, and has had the physician's declaration completed when applicable, may select any person to assist them in voting. No person shall provide assistance to more than two voters in any election in voting an absent voter's ballot.

After the absent voter's ballot has been marked, you take the following steps: (1) Enclose it in Absent Voter's Ballot Envelope No. 1 and seal; (2) Enclose the sealed Absent Voter's Ballot Envelope No. 1 and Absent Voter's Ballot Envelope No. 2 and seal; (3) Complete and sign the voter's statement which is printed on Absent Voter's Ballot Envelope No. 2; (4) Mail the postage prepaid, sealed Absent Voter's Ballot Envelope No. 2 to the circuit clerk of the county from which application was made for the absent voter's ballot.

Any person who has received an absent voter's ballot, but has not voted and returned the ballot to the circuit clerk, may vote in person at the precinct polling place in which they are registered to vote, provided they return the ballot and both envelopes to the election commissioners at the polling place, and request that the absent voter's ballot and envelope be destroyed in their presence, so that they may vote in person. Otherwise, the absent voter's ballot may be challenged.
