Appalachia Cul. Topic of Samples

Mack Samples, Dean of Records and Admission, was taped as he spoke about Appalachian Culture and Fiddling last week. This tape aired Saturday morning on Public Radio at 10 a.m.

This broadcast, entitled, "To The Point," lasted for approximately sixty minutes. Mr. Samples spoke on the Annual Folk Festival held here in Glenville and the different styles of music played. Old time music and the annual fiddle contest were other topics he talked about.

Susan Laffler was the person who came down last Thursday to interview Mr. Samples in the Robert F. Kidd Library. The one hour presentation was sponsored by the West Virginia Humanities Foundation.

All Organizations are reminded to turn the history of their Organization (100-150 words) in to the Yearbook Office by the end of Feb.

The Campus Co-op is moving to a new location. Beginning Monday, February 7, the Co-op will be located in the old, Faculty Lounge room upstairs at Pioneer Center.

On Monday free cokes will be given to the first 200 customers, so don't miss the opening of the relocated GSC Campus Co-op. Tentative hours are from 9 a.m. till 2 p.m.

The schedule for the Pioneer Center's big screen TV will return to the Mercury next week.

There is currently an Art Exhibit on the third floor of the Ad Building.

1400 Enroll For Semester

Approximately 1400 students are enrolled in Glenville State College this semester, according to Mack K. Samples, Dean of Records and Admission. This represents an increase over last year's second semester enrollment.

Extension classes were cancelled due to budget cuts this semester.

Nominations Urged For SC Elections

Nominations for the new Student Congress members closed today at noon in the Student Services office. A two week campaign will follow. Any nominees who would like publicity in The Glenville Mercury should contact The Mercury and arrange an interview. The deadline for next week's paper is Monday at noon.

Forensic Team Places Second

The GSC Forensics team finished 2nd in the Ruth A. Wilcox Invitational this past weekend. There were 22 teams in the field with only Fairmont notching more points than the Pioneer squad. The 140 point output was paced by Raeleen McMillon's 28 points and Tammy Stalnaker's 20 points.

The 2nd place finish is extremely noteworthy when one considers the other much larger schools in the field such as Penn State, WVU, Kent State and James Madison.

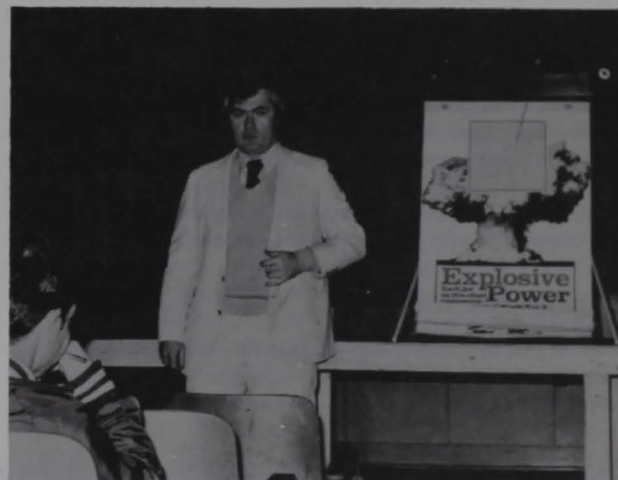

Others who placed in the meet were Kim Evans 17 points, Lou Davidson 14 points (in her first meet), Lisa Taylor and Danny Bayer, both with 12 points.

Tim Brown contributed 9 points, Mike Dotson, 6 and Mark Norman, 6 points. Jo Cooper, Randy Harper, Tammi Igo and Mark Kozlowski totaled 4 points for the team. All members of the team added sweepstakes points which pleased Mrs. Nicholson.

The team also sports seven members who have qualified for nationals at Normal, Illinois later this year. They are Raeleen McMillon, Tammy Stalnaker, Kim Evans, Lou Davidson, Lisa Taylor, Danny Bayer and Tim Brown. Congratulations!

The team's next meet is March 11th and 12th at Shippensburg, Pa.

Mike Kelly, Head of the WV Freeze Campaign, spoke to students concerning nuclear arms.

Kelly Speaks On Nuclear Weapons

On January 30, at 8 p.m., the students and faculty of Glenville were able to hear a speaker, Mike Kelly, discuss a worldwide matter concerning the freeze and reduction of nuclear weapons. Kelly used a flip chart and explanations as to how much damage nuclear warheads can do.

The fact was brought up that even a "limited" nuclear war would result in death and destruction on a scale without precedent in human existence. Underground shelters offer no protection from the blast; fallout would contaminate the globe for generations.

The point declaring Russia as a superior armed force was pondered and rejected. The US has fewer land-based missiles than Russia, but we have more bombers, more missile submarines and more total warheads. Unlike bombers and land-based missiles, our missile submarines are invulnerable to Soviet attack. According to the 1982 Pentagon Annual Report, "The US and Soviet Union are roughly equal in strategic nuclear power." A conclusion that acknowledges the fact that an attack by one country upon the other will result in the annihilation of both countries . . . not to mention all of civilization.

The President seems to want to push US nuclear power further to try and catch the Russians. It is believed, though, that we are the ones pushing Russia to try and equal our power. A freeze seems to be the only real answer, but it must be in effect soon before more countries become dangerous with nuclear power.

Mike Kelly is a lawyer for the Supreme Court of West Virginia. He is also on the West Virginia Freeze Campaign Committee. This organization has 13 chapters in this state and they recently had a rally in Kanawha County. The freeze campaign committee is interested in ending the arms race with Russia and the first step is to get the WV Legislature to pass a resolution to stop the production of Nuclear Weapons.

Kelly was sponsored by Pi Gamma Mu.

Coping's The Game

What has happened to our campus? It seems that more people are taking part in activities now more than ever. Many of the dances that have been scheduled have been enjoyed by many, over the past year. The semi-formal dance, sponsored by Student Congress was very well attended, with the women in dresses and dress slacks, and the men in dress slacks and ties.

After years of sponsoring many, many activities, organizations are now seeing more people interested in the dances, etc. One factor for this increase is that these activities do not cost the students, and since the country is in such a state of recession, spending less money is popular with every one.

Faculty and staff members are also binding closer together to "tough it out" through the furloughs and layoffs, as the budget cuts pinch everyone's pockets. It is not easy to keep on teaching while you know the state cannot pay you. But true to form, the teachers at GSC are giving the students their "all."

In the past Glenville has been known as the "Friendly" campus. With all the problems plaguing the state currently, students at GSC are gathering closer, and so are the teachers. Maybe GSC will be Family!

This week's slate of games is important to the fortunes of both the GSC men's and women's basketball teams. Both squads face tough opponents and need to play well in order to win.

Coach Jesse Lilly's Pioneers have had their troubles this season. That's obvious. Another thing that is obvious is that the men have shown improvement and even flashes of being a good ball club recently.

That's why the games this week are important to the male hoopsters - they need a few victories to bolster morale and gain momentum as they begin to prepare for the WVC tourney, only a month away.

The women of Coach Tim Carney continue to roll along with a 9-0 WVC record. A win over UC on Thursday would move them into first place in the standings.

The main problem facing the Lady Pioneers is getting psyched for every game - and guarding against overconfidence. They must continue to play well up through tourney time.

Win or lose, both teams need student support. So, let's stay behind them with some Pioneer spirit!

Steve Keenan

All rosters for men's intramural basketball must be turned in to Gary Nottingham on Mon., Feb. 7 by 3 p.m. The rosters should include a team name, a list of players (no more than ten) on the team, and a team captain. A player can be included on only one roster.

Scott Ludwig

Ludwig Tops 1,000

Scott Ludwig, a senior co-captain of the Glenville State College Pioneers cage squad, recently reached a plateau that most college players can only dream of. That plateau was the 1,000-point scoring mark in a career.

Ludwig gained admittance into the coveted 1,000-point scoring club by tallying 36 points against Alderson-Broadus on Jan. 24. The 36 points was a career-high for Ludwig and gave him 1,019 points in about two and a half years in a Pioneer uniform. More importantly, his outburst, which included a record 18 of 19 from the foul line, led GSC to its first conference win of the season.

In his sophomore season, Ludwig scored 292 points as a sixth man. Last year, his junior season, he tallied 436 points as a starter. So far this season, the sharp-shooting guard has put in 305 points in 16 games, and he has at least 11 more games to add to his high point total.

During the last two seasons, Ludwig has gained national recognition for his shooting accuracy. In his junior season, the 6'2" Ludwig led the NAIA in field goal accuracy at one point in the season. So far this season, he has stayed near the top of foul shooting percentage in the widespread NAIA.

Ludwig, from Ripley High School, is the first Pioneer to enter the record books with 1,000 points since Don Bullett did it two years ago.

Women participating in intramural basketball should check the schedule in the Scott Wing office of Pickens Hall to see when their teams are scheduled to play.

A meeting will be held Wed., Feb. 2 at 3:30 p.m. in the Little Theatre for those willing to help with GSC Week and Field Day. All help and ideas will be greatly appreciated.

Ladies Demolish State

The GSC women's basketball team remained unbeaten in West Virginia Conference play with a 97-55 shellacking of West Virginia State last Tuesday. With the convincing win, the Lady Pioneers moved to 11-2 over-all and 9-0 in the WVC.

"We received good performances from everyone," said coach Tim Carney. The figures support that statement, too. GSC, which coasted to a 45-28 lead at half, had five players in double figures in the scoring column. Also, the Ladies shot 48.8 percent from the floor and outrebounded WVSC by ten rebounds.

Maria Lothes hit 20 points and pulled down ten caroms to pace the victorious effort by Glenville.

Kim Maynard added 15 points, 12 rebounds and five steals, Pam Minigh had 15 points and six boards, Sonja Bailey had 11 points, and Bunny Taylor had ten points, nine rebounds and nine assists.

Also, Tina Burkhamer and Judy Niday scored eight each, Cathy Starcher scored four, and Laura Dabney, Sharon Hayes and Robin Phipps had two apiece.

The GSC ladies were to have played A-B on Monday, and they will host the University of Charleston in a key contest Thursday, Feb. 3 at 7 pm. Also, the Ladies will play at West Virginia Tech Saturday. Carney pointed out that "All the games are tough at this stage, and we'll just have to take one at a time."

Bowling Team Defeats Top University Squads

The Glenville State College bowling team defeated two universities in its last two outings. First, Morehead State fell victim to GSC's fine playing on Jan. 22. Then, Marshall came up short against GSC on Jan. 29.

Glenville won both matches over Morehead, 2,386-2,319 and 2,438-2,170 in total team pinfall. John Waldeck's average of 172.6 was tops for the Pioneers. Also, Ron Carpenter averaged 170.5, Jeff Stanley 157.5, Earl Belle 156.8 and Anthony Cochran 147.0.

The Pioneers performed well in an upset of Marshall. GSC won both matches, 2,670 - 2,465 and 2,714 - 2,484 in total team pinfall. Again, John Waldeck led GSC. He averaged 195.0. Ron Carpenter was at 178.8, Anthony Cochran 178.0, Earl Belle 177.9, Jeff Stanley 174.8 and Wes Johnson 134.0.

The two wins allowed GSC to finish with a 7-5 record and second place in the Southern Intercollegiate Bowling Conference.

Cagers Split With Foes

A 1-1 record in games last week moved the GSC Pioneers' season slate to 3-14 overall (1-12 in the West Virginia Conference). GSC beat Alderson-Broadus Monday but lost to West Liberty Friday.

GSC 92, A-B 80

The Pioneers built a 48-37 lead at intermission and held on for a 92-80 victory, their first WVC win.

Scott Ludwig's 36-point, 14-rebound, 5-assist game led Glenville to its victory. Clay Young added 23 points and four steals, and Kenny Taylor put in 22 markers and had eight rebounds.

Also, Randy Anderson had six points and five assists, Rich Moore scored three, and Roger Kirkpatrick tallied two.

West Liberty 65, GSC 62

Against the Hilltoppers, GSC led throughout the first half, which ended with GSC up, 36-34. West Liberty outpointed the Pioneers, 24-22, in the second half to tie the score at 58-58 and send it into overtime.

West Liberty scored first in the overtime period and held the upper hand the rest of the way to post a 65-62 win.

For the Pioneers, Clay Young finished with 21 points and eight rebounds, both team highs. Scott Ludwig added 14 points, Kenny Taylor had eight points and eight rebounds, and Randy Anderson, Rich Moore, Roger Kirkpatrick and Steve Morris scored eight, five, four and two points, respectively.

 On Monday, GSC was to have played at A-B. Then, on Wed., Feb. 2, the Pioneers will play UC. On Fri., Feb. 4 and Sat., Feb. 5, Glenville will play Bluefield and West Virginia Tech, respectively. All of these games are away contests.

Doing the choreography for the upcoming "Dolly" Newton Cole brings his outstanding talents to the Dram Dept.

A Phase Becomes A Reality For N. Cole

By Cara Keenan
As a small-town girl, I came to Glenville State College prepared for what I thought it had to offer: nothing. I was not, however, prepared to leave my hometown location, which is just a forty minute drive from Charleston. For an appreciator of fine arts in West Virginia, Charleston is, pardon the expression, "almost heaven." I mean, Charleston was the home of Newton Cole! I knew that Glenville, in all its splendor and beauty, was not near anything. I was going to go stir crazy.

The first thing I did as a freshman was to try out for a play. I got the part and as rehearsals came and went, I decided that Charleston was not the only place in the state with a bit of culture. Of course, Newton Cole was still there, but you can't have everything.

As time went by, I was exposed to various artists on the GSC stage. The Student Congress arranged dates for the Tommy Dorsey Band, The Appalachian Dance Theatre, The Harry James Band, and Maynard Ferguson, just to name a few. Bravo, or brava, depending on the gender of the Student Congress President at the time.

This all warmed me to Glenville State, but as the saying goes, "There's no place like home." By the end of my second semester here, I was ready to head home.

(What stopped me? Well, miracles of miracles, my idol... need you ask? ... was hired to choreograph GSC Theatre's spring production of "Hello Dolly!")

Now I know that some of you, heaven help us, may not know who Newton Cole is. If that happens to be the case, I can help. Cole is the director of the West Virginia Dance Theatre in Charleston. My story begins here.

Newton Cole always wanted to dance. As far back as he can remember, he was asking for dance lessons. At first his father discouraged him and said it was "just a phase." Cole, however, was persistent in his pleas and when he was six was allowed to take classes. What had changed his father's opinion of dance classes?

(The year Cole turned six was the year members of the Green Bay Packers football team enrolled in ballet classes.)

Maybe the phase would burn itself out in time if it were indulged.

By the time Cole was eighteen years old, he was still going through "a phase." He had been dancing for 12 years.

After graduation from high school, Cole went to Morris Harvey and majored in music. He did not dance for the year he attended Morris Harvey.

Following his brief college career, he enlisted in the Navy. During his enlistment, he danced with the Norfolk Ballet. Until this time, his dance training had consisted mainly of jazz and "hoofing." When he went to New York after his period in the Navy, he worked with the American Dance Machine. The ADM is a dancing unit that recreates the original choreography of Broadway musicals. This incorporated both the jazz and the ballet that Cole had learned during his "phase."

Sports Confab. Hosted Today

Woody Hayes, former football coach of the Ohio State Buckeyes, will be the featured speaker at the Sports Medicine Conference at Glenville State College, February 2-3, 1983.

Several areas of concentration will feature speakers from throughout West Virginia and Pennsylvania, including West Virginia University strength coach Dave Van Hallanger, Mountaineer team physician Douglas Bowers and former WVU quarterback Oliver Luck. Four specific sessions will focus on strength program consideration, returning after neck injury, neck injury prevention and developing a successful high school training program.

Hayes will speak on the coach's role in injury prevention at the conference banquet at 6:30 pm, February 2 in the ballroom of Pioneer Center. Hayes served 28 years as head football coach at the Ohio State University. Only Amos Alonzo Stagg, 41 years at Chicago, and Bob Zuppke, at Illinois for 29 years, coached longer in the Big Ten.

Under Hayes, Ohio State football achieved a degree of excellence unmatched in the University's rich athletic history. Winning seasons and conference championships were a familiar part of the Buckeye football scene under Hayes.

Newton Cole takes part of the cast through rehearsal for the upcoming production of "Dolly." Cole, the director of the West Virginia Dance Theatre in Charleston will lend his talent to what appears to be one of the major highlights of the semester.
