Jump Rope Scheduled

This year Glenville State College students will be participating in the largest Jump Rope for Heart event ever on March 23 in the GSC gym. Proceeds, made from this will help to support the West Virginia Heart Association. Teams from Sigma Sigma Sigma, TKE, Mercury, and 4-H will be jumping from 9-12 in order to insure a successful fund-raising drive.

Jump Rope for Heart is a special event conducted by school physical education teachers and students who organize the rope-jumping competition.

Glenville State College students who are planning to attend the summer term are urged to mention the classes they need or would like to have to the Division Chairperson of each Division. By doing so, the college can offer the classes that will be of most help to those students who are planning to attend.

MD Week Plans Registration

Peggy Walton and Dee Mallette, co-chairpersons of the Glenville State College Muscular Dystrophy Association campaign, want to remind everyone that registrations for the various events for the Muscular Dystrophy drive will be every week day from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the lobby of the Pioneer Center. These events include the Super Dance, the rock - a - thon, volleyball tournament, bowling tournament, and video game tournaments.

Steel Band To Perform

Hugh Borde's World Famous Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band will be appearing at 8 p.m., March 3, 1983, in the auditorium of Glenville State College. A family group comprised of eight, the Steel Band has appeared throughout the world, including two command performances for the Queen of England.

Originally from the West Indies, the Steel Band has appeared and sold out audiences at 325 colleges and universities. Their list of achievements include a 1972 Grammy Award for their gold album "Liberace Presents," tours with Segio Franchi and Liberate, appearance on major television shows including David Frost and Mike Douglass, performances at major hotels and concert halls, including the Waldorf Astoria, Carnegie Hall, Radio City Music Hall, the Royal Albert Hall of London, and many others.

The Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band is presented by the GSC Cultural Affairs Committee and the WV Arts and Humanities Council. The concert is free and open to the public.

Grades To Be Distributed

Mid-semester is next week and according to the Vice-President of Student Affairs, J. Lowell Peterson, mid-semester grades will not be mailed to the students permanent address, as they were last semester. Because of the budget cuts, the grades will be distributed to the students advisors, to save from the postal costs of mailing them.

Mid-semester grades will be due in the Registrar's Office the Friday of mid-semester week. The grades will be distributed to the student's advisors March 15th or 16th and students can pick them up on these dates. Due to the later dates of distributing grades, the date for dropping classes has been extended until March 18th, to give students ample time to drop a class if they should see it in their grades to do so.

From The Far Wall

(No not the bathroom wall either.) I have been accused of being too standardish, so although I'm not funny, please bear with me. This week, I'm going to be off the wall.

First: Have you ever noticed how many Private Detective shows there are or have been on television? "Magnum," "Simon & Simon," "Barnaby Jones," "Cannon," "Mannix," and "Remington Steel" to name only a few. Now consider their caseloads. Mostly they consist of murder. At this rate, proportioned on this campus, one of every ten students would be a P.I., and all the rest would be either murderers or murderers. During the course of one TV season or one academic year, all the students would be murdered off.

Second: If you can cut-out, paste-up and color, you're way ahead of the game in college. It seems odd, but one of the prerequisites for coming to GSC should be all of those things. Just think about how often students need to do projects, color, and make poster. Maybe on the ACT or SAT test they should make students cut-out, paste-up and color?

Third: Colds. It's cold season so here's some interesting trivia. Children catch more colds than anyone else. People who smoke catch colds often, but the problem with them is that their colds last longer than others. Colds are transmitted more often by a person's hands than a kleenex or coughing. Kissing does not spread colds that easily.

Thank you for letting me have this space to be 'off the wall.' And just always remember and don't ever forget, nothing matters and what if it did. Carron Wilfong

Master's Guide To Marginal Grades

It's the night before a test and you haven't studied; a lot rides on this examination: grades, future choice of graduate schools, the right man to marry. With so many things hanging in the balance of knowledge, one doesn't want to tip the scales too heavily with ignorance.

What to do? Well, friends, I have an answer, and that answer is cramming. I shall, for my first act, define the word cram as applied to this panicky situation using that veritable verbose book, the writer's font of expressive terms, the Webster's Dictionary. "Cram-" to prepare (a person) or review (a subject) for examination usually in a hurried way or comparatively short time, by stuffing the mind with information.

I ask you, does this not sound like a recipe for stuffed turkey? Here are the ingredients: 1) Ignore books, notes and lectures until the day before the test; 2) scoff at those who prepare themselves long before hand; 3) carry an air of disdain to class with you. Note: not so much as to catch the professor's attention should he decide to scan the audience in search of a victim for an answer to his most unanswerable questions (especially if you have faithfully added the first ingredient).

The second act entails the organization of books, notes and nerves the night before the test. Assimilate notes taken when you didn't realize what you were doing. These are characterized by large numbers of doodles between important concepts. Skim chapters, reading only what has been underlined - should you have been lucky enough to have bought a second-hand book. If the book is new, read only large - printed words.

"Examinations are formidable even to the best prepared, for the greatest fool may ask more than the wisest man can answer." (Charles Colby Colden)

The last act, hang tightly to this adage like a drowning man to a life preserver as you float through the night on munchies, coffee, cigarettes and a great quantity of the midnight oil.

Best Musical To Date

In staging a popular musical such as "Hello Dolly," one often runs the risk of being compared to professional actors and actresses who have made their mark in film or stage presentations of that particular work. Carol Channing and Barbra Streisand readily come to mind for their unique and inimitable versions of Dolly Levi. Yet this reviewer found a refreshing and dynamic version of the Broadway musical performed at Glenville State College in what must be termed the best musical production of the McKown duo to date.

Technically, miracles were performed with three scene changes on a stage barely big enough for a recital. As a packed house watched, the stage crew moved back and forth between scenarios in what seemed to be an effortless operation. Logistical planning of these moves must have been a nightmare! That a parade replete with juggler, marching band, and aerial artists was able to be staged during the production seems to defy the conditions under which the cast had to work.

Edward McKown again demonstrated his artistic versatility as he conducted the orchestra while playing the piano—a task which is not at all simple. Throughout the musical, McKown's orchestra masterfully supported the players on the stage frequently underscoring significant events and providing needed continuity between musical numbers. It is to the credit of the musicians that often one forgot that the orchestra was there.

Newton Cole's fine choreographic work was evident throughout the evening. The waiters' scene was an expert mix of dance and gymnastics—a delight to the eye. Other choreography in the musical appeared effortless to the audience although much planning had to be involved. Often inexperienced dancers project a stilted look due to their unfamiliarity with common dance steps. None of this formal look was present—all of the dance numbers were performed expertly.

The real stars of any musical remain the singers. The musical numbers in "Dolly" are not noted for their brilliance or compositional artistry. In fact, many pieces tend to be a bit bland. However, Pam Perry in the role of wily, whimsical Dolly Levi was superb. She knew what she wanted and set out to get it! Miss Perry possesses a mature stage presence as evidenced by her poise and beauty. Vocally, she ran the musical gamut crooning tunes ranging from love ballads to marital ultimatums. Bill Anderson (Cornelius) and Randy Lewis (Barnaby) almost stole the show in an unbeatable combination—two country hicks turned into uncontrollable roués. Anderson's vocal quality and execution were particularly spectacular. Kirk King as the gruff, money-hungry Vandergelder showed a vocal endurance not often encountered in a young musician. And who could forget the ever-wailing Ermengarde (Kelly Davis) as she bawled from scene to scene? One could continue interminably detailing specific instances relating to the polish of this musical cast. Of particular note is the manner in which all players remained in character and the fine back-up provided by the musical's chorus.

At one point in the musical Irene Malloy exclaims, "The world is full of wonderful things!" Indeed, Glenville State College is "full of wonderful things" too, as evidenced by the joy in watching students, faculty, and staff in an explosion of creative talent unleashed in the production of "Hello Dolly."

Charles A. Julian

Horace Vandergelder (Kirk King) informs an astonished Dolly Levi (Pam Perry) that the only woman he wants to marry is she.

Act One Fails "Dolly"

The weakness of Saturday evening's rendition of "Hello Dolly" can be summarized in two words—act one! In that first act, the obviously fatigued voices of the leads were weak and, at times, inaudible, at least to us unfortunates in the balcony. The orchestra's attempt to disguise the crackled lyrics of the opening tunes was only partially successful. Additionally, the first three scenes of the production were carelessly punctuated with fumbled blocking, awkward set changes, and uncooperative props.

The redeeming aspects of the opening act were the excellent acting and hyperbolic gesticulations of Cara Keenan (Minnie Fay), the excellent projection of Bill Anderson (Cornelius Hackl), the zany expressions and boisterous bawling of Kelly Davis (Ermengarde), and the zest of the men's and ladies' choruses. Interestingly, the audience responded well to "Motherhood March" and "Before the Parade Passes By," perhaps since these numbers signaled the close of that agonizing first act.

Fortunately, act two was a different production altogether! The setting, lighting, singing, and acting were all greatly improved. For example, the artistic setting of the Harmonia Gardens Restaurant; the lively choreography displayed by the red-coated "Waiter's Gallop"; the well-executed tableaux; the exceptional singing of Pam Perry (Dolly), especially in the titular number; the convincing dialect of Danny Bayer (Rudolph); and the continued support of the choruses, Ms. Keenan, Mr. Anderson, and Ms. Davis all combined to allow the production to thwart the "amateurish disaster" which it initiated in act one.

The behind-the-scenes people who deserve commendations are: Linda McKown, director; Newton Cole, choreographer; make-up, headed by Raelen McMillion; the costume crew of Miller, White, Milliser, and Booth; and the orchestra under the direction of Edward McKown. A special citation goes to Kent Woofter for his exquisite scenic and graphic art work.

David J. Thomas

"If I Have To Dig Ditches . . ."

After being blasted for my last play review and my lack of knowledge of "drama," I'm not really sure I should be attempting another review. But since I did see the show, more than once, and asked members of the audience and cast their feelings about the play, I feel I am qualified to write an impressionistic review of HELLO DOLLY.

After reflecting on the three performances of "Dolly" I attended, I have concluded that my favorite feature of the musical was the set. It was absolutely marvelous! Each turn of the scenery helped make the acting more realistic and tolerable. Kent Woofter and his crew should be commended for their creation.

My impressions of the acting/actors and play in general are as follows. Dolly's character was very convincing, facial expression and great singing made her enjoyable to watch. Horace Vandergelder was not exactly convincing. The transition of a hard, mean man, accepting a woman's view was not prominent and I felt that Mr. Vandergelder was generally a disappointment, although he did have a good moment now and then.

Another disappointment was Mrs. Malloy. The character was lacking, but more disappointing was the lack of projection of her beautiful voice.

Delights of the play were Cornelius, Barnaby and Minnie Fay. Cornelius was lively and well cast. Each time I heard "If I have to dig ditches for the rest of my life . . ." I wanted to hug him.

Barnaby and Minnie Fay were cute, but more than being cute they had loads of energy. Their flirting and giggling kept the audience charmed.

Rudolph and Ermengarde were portrayed with the usual professionalism, Ernestina reminded me of Miss Piggy and was hilarious, Ambrose and Mrs. Rose made little or no impression.

The ladies of the chorus were charming, and the waiters, (wow!) were great.

As a whole the dancing was fabulous and all deserve a word of praise for the long hours of practice. Favorites were the waiter's gallop and "Elegance." Newton Cole's contribution to the production, as choreographer, made the show.

I enjoyed the show, but at times I had to cringe at the singing and some of the acting.

Debbie Moore

"But Cornelius we only have one dollar and thirty-five cents," intones worried Barnaby (Randy Lewis) as the ladies (Cara Keenan and Vicki Butcher) prepare to order pheasants.

All students are welcome to study for mid-term exams next week at the annex beside the Baptist Church. Coffee, hot chocolate, and refreshments will be provided.

Lady Pioneers' head coach, Tim Carney, receives congratulations after WVC tournament quarterfinal win.

The 1982-83 Lady Pioneers finished third in the WVC tournament last week.

Carney Reflects On Season

The GSC Lady Pioneers recently completed another fine season with their second third-place finish in the WVC women's tournament at Buckhannon. A 3-1 mark in the tourney left GSC's season mark at 17-7.

Tim Carney, who has produced a sterling 66-24 record in four years as the Lady Pioneers' mentor, was pleased with his team's performance. He remarked, "Overall, we got good performances from everyone. I felt that we had the best defensive effort of the whole tournament, culminating with an excellent defensive effort against Fairmont (in the consolation game). Also, I felt that the championship game was really played in our game against UC on Friday night. We've had the misfortune of being in their bracket the past two years."

On the season as a whole, Carney said, "We had a better season than I had anticipated, record-wise. Our girls played the toughest schedule since I began coaching. There was only one game, at Fairmont, that we were really not in during the season."

With the season now over, Carney and Mark Kozlowski, his student assistant, will turn their attention to recruiting for next year. GSC loses two players, Pam Minigh and Judy Niday, and Carney acknowledged that "It will be tough to fill their shoes."

Lady Pioneers Finish Third In Tourney

The GSC Lady Pioneers completed tourney play last week, and for the second straight year, Tim Carney's squad finished in third place out of 14 teams. GSC ended its season with an overall record of 17-7 (12-4 in the West Virginia Conference).

GSC 91, Shepherd 65

Glenville met Shepherd in the first round of the tourney. The Lady Pioneers assumed control early with an 18-4 lead, but Shepherd clawed back to within 23-22 with 7:23 left in the half. GSC went back into control, however, and held a 46-33 lead at half. During a very physical second half, the Glenville women increased their lead to the final tally of 91-65.

Five players, paced by Pam Minigh's 18 points, hit in double figures. Bunny Taylor and Kim Maynard scored 17 each, and Maria Lothes and Laura Dabney had 11 apiece. Maynard cleared ten rebounds, while Minigh and Lothes had nine each. Taylor had eight assists.

Also, Tina Burkhamer scored seven, Judy Niday scored six, and Sonja Bailey scored four points and had six steals.

GSC 66, Wheeling 60

In another physical game in the quarterfinals, GSC nipped Wheeling, 66-60, to advance to the semifinals.

Glenville was up, 33-28, at intermission and held Wheeling off in the second half for the win.

Senior Pam Minigh continued to lead GSC. She tallied 17 points and hauled down 15 rebounds. Also, Bunny Taylor had 15 points and five steals, Kim Maynard had 14 points, 11 rebounds, and six blocked shots, Maria Lothes had 11 points and 13 boards, Sonja Bailey had eight points and five assists, and Laura Dabney scored one point.

UC 72, GSC 64

The semifinal match between GSC and the University of Charleston was a rematch of last year's which UC won by a single point.

The Lady Pioneers played UC tough in the first half and found themselves down by only 37-33 at halftime. GSC stayed close through part of the second half, but UC, using strong inside play, began to pull away gradually and built up a 15-point lead. By the end of the contest, Glenville had cut the deficit to eight but could get no closer. The final score was 72-64.

Pam Minigh's 26-point, 13-rebound performance was tops for GSC. Bunny Taylor scored 19, Robin Phipps six, Kim Maynard and Maria Lothes five each, Tina Burkhamer two, and Laura Dabney one.

GSC 65, Fairmont 53

The Lady Pioneers whipped Fairmont, 65-53, in the consolation game on Saturday to claim third place. The win avenged an 82-61 Fairmont win over Glenville two weeks ago.

GSC held a slim, 33-31 lead at half but outscored Fairmont by ten in the second half to record the win.

Glenville had a 61-42 rebounding edge. Both squads shot 37.7 percent.

Bunny Taylor and Maria Lothes put in 16 points apiece to lead the Pioneer women. Pam Minigh closed out a fine tourney with 14 points and 12 rebounds. Kim Maynard added 13 points and 11 rebounds. Robin Phipps and Judy Niday chipped in four and two points respectively.

Tournament Notes

Pam Minigh and Bunny Taylor were named to the All-Tournament team for the Lady Pioneers, who collected the third-place trophy. Minigh averaged 18.8 points and 12.3 rebounds per game, while Taylor averaged 16.8 points, 5.8 rebounds, 4.3 assists, and 3.3 steals.

GSC's crowd was awarded the spirit award. Jeff Propps and Poncho Richards produced the first-place banner "The 'Ville Will," while Diane Sharps' banner claimed third place.

As post-season tournaments approach, basketball teams begin honing their skills and getting mentally prepared to handle the pressures that arise during these tournaments, for they want to advance as far as possible.

Usually, the teams are playing in an environment foreign to them and need as much support as they can get, not just from coaches and other players but from spectators, also.

GSC has an abundance of these loud, boisterous fans. The Pioneer cheerleading squad, annually among the cream of the crop at the West Virginia Conference Tournament, leads these fans in their various chants and yells (except for a few specialties by rooters like Fred Parsons). When a game is close, the crowd support generated by the cheerleaders plays a big part in the games outcome.

Tim Carney, head coach of the Lady Pioneers, will attest to that statement. After the WVC women's tourney in Buckhannon, Carney exclaimed, "We had the best crowd support of all the teams, not only during the tournament, but also throughout the season. The fans really helped in our game with Wheeling." Someone else must have looked favorably on the GSC crowd, because it won the award for "best crowd spirit" at the tourney.

Good luck to the cheerleaders and the crowd this week at Charleston (as well as the team), and keep up the good work. Your efforts are appreciated!

The GSC Pioneers, led by veteran coach, Jesse Lilly, and leading scorers, Clay Young and Scott Ludwig, were to step into West Virginia Conference Tournament action yesterday with an encounter with the Shepherd Rams. GSC is rated 13th in the WVC, while Shepherd is fourth.

If victorious over Shepherd, GSC will play again on Thursday, March 3 at 1 p.m. against either Concord or Davis and Elkins. The Pioneers have lost a total of five games to those three opponents this season.

Leading scorer, Clay Young, goes up strong for two points against West Virginia State.

Pioneer Men Complete 1983 Regular Season

GSC's men's hoop squad edged West Virginia State last Tuesday, then fell to Salem on Saturday, snapping a three-game winning streak and ending its regular season with an 8-19 record (6-17 in the West Virginia Conference). The Pioneers finished in 13th place in the league and were scheduled to play Shepherd yesterday in the first round of the WVC tournament at Charleston.

Thanks Extended To Lambda

Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity,

Thank you is not nearly the specific message that needs to be expressed at this time. When your organization adopted HELLO DOLLY as a social project, I was delighted that a fraternity was interested in a college theatrical production. However, as the performance dates drew near, I became thrilled with the organization and dignity that became apparent.

Lee Loy was a gracious coordinator of the entire project. The brothers who served as ushers were handsome, well-dressed, polite, and seemingly very interested in the show. I am pleased to be able to say this about a group of GSC young men.

The reception held for the cast on Saturday night following the performance provided delicious food and a marvelous way to unwind.

I want Lambda Chi to know that I sincerely thank you -- Mr. Vance Weekley and all the charming men of Lambda Chi -- for your attention, your time and your treasury.

Yours most gratefully

Linda McKown

Sexually Transmitted Diseases Discussed

Common colds, dieting, and many other medical problems are prevalent among college students. One medical problem that is often overlooked in college is that of venereal disease (VD), more recently renamed sexually transmitted disease (STD).

According to Diane Kyle R.N., of Kyle Clinic, there are over 200 different types of sexually transmitted diseases. The most common types in college students are gonorrhea, herpes, trichomonas, NGU (nongonococcal urethritis), and chlamydia. All of these can be treated with the exception of herpes, which can only be symptomatically treated.

Gonorrhea in males is usually painful; some symptoms are burning with urination and a discharge. In the females there may be no symptoms or there may be a discharge. The treatment for gonorrhea is antibiotics by injection or by mouth.

Herpes is symptomatically treatable, meaning only the symptoms can be treated. In both the male and female a painful, crusty lesion is a symptom during the active period of herpes and there are no symptoms in the inactive period of herpes. Genital and oral herpes are sexually transmitted and if caught will recur throughout one's life. Also, herpes simple cold sores around the mouth, can be transmitted by kissing or touching the sores.

Trichomonas usually has no symptoms in the males. A green frothy vaginal discharge with a fishy smell is a symptom found in females with trichomonas. Treatment is oral medication and both partners must be treated even if only one has symptoms.

NGU (nongonococcal urethritis) occurs in males only. Burning with urination and no discharge are the symptoms. Chlamydia is the counterpart disease, in females, to NGU. Chlamydia occurs in females only and a urinary tract infection and/or vaginitis are some of the symptoms. Both diseases can be treated by oral antibiotics.

Gonorrhea and herpes can both be passed on to an unborn child, if the disease is active during birth. If venereal diseases are not medically treated, sterility can result in females. Sterility is also possible in the males but it is less common. Another risk of not seeking medical attention is the harm it could do to an unborn child as well as the chance of spreading the diseases.

"I've seen fewer cases of sexually transmitted diseases at GSC than other college campuses where I've worked," commented Diane Kyle, of Kyle Clinic. However, sexually transmitted diseases are still one of the major health problems on college campuses. Also, on small campuses (STD's) seem to spread faster and people are more reluctant to seek treatment.

The Kyle Clinic advises students who are concerned about having a (STD) should seek medical attention immediately. Treatment can usually be obtained at no charge to the student seeking medical attention. All records are kept confidential at the Kyle Clinic but all sexual contacts must be revealed so that treatment can be administered and a spreading of the (STD) can be eliminated.

New Kits Available

As an opening reminder, the Media Center is open during evening hours 6 p.m. till 8 p.m., Monday through Thursday. Any student teachers needing help may find assistance during this time.

The review for this week is kit 1227, "Computers: From Pebbles to Programs." This is a Math Matters Program for grades 5-8. Included in this kit are three filmstrips, three cassette tapes, and a teacher's guide.

Part 1 deals with the idea that people always tried to find better and easier ways to do things. But ideas for machines were often ahead of technology. The first machine that could actually be called a computer was built by Howard Aiden of Harvard with the help of engineers from International Business Machines (IBM).

In part 2, one of the points is how programming languages were developed because it was difficult to write instructions in binary machine language.

Finally in the third part, the way computers affect us today is discussed. Computers do many jobs that people used to do, because computers can work faster. For this reason, new uses are being discovered all the time.
