Participation Can Help GSC

Everyone has heard tales about the West Virginia Legislature-how hectic it gets at times, and how it seems that not much ever gets done.

Now, for the first time, faculty, staff and student members of colleges and universities around the state are being urged to attend and participate in this legislative session. Many hot issues have arisen in the legislative committees concerning higher education, and now is the time for those concerned with the status of higher education to fight for what they want.

Bills introduced thus far cover such topics as dental/optical plans, faculty/staff development fees, abolishment of the Board of Regents, athletic funds, and parking. There is a variety of bills which should be of concern to Glenville State College.

Hopefully, our active participation in the current legislative session can have an impact upon the Legislature's sometimes shabby treatment of higher education throughout the state. If so, it's about time.

Anyone interested in lending support to the cause during the week of February 13-17 should contact Linda McKown (faculty), Jack Luzader (classified staff), or Penny Clutter (student).

Hilgenberg Resigns

Dr. James F. Hilgenberg, Jr. has resigned as coach of the Glenville State College cross country team. Hilgenberg has been at the helm of the Pioneer squad for six years. During that span, he coached his team to three second-place finishes before claiming three straight WVIAC Championships.

Hilgenberg, an associate professor of history at GSC, cited several reasons for his departure from the coaching ranks. He remarked, "Building a successful program-whether athletic, academic, dramatic or whatever -necessitates considerable time, effort, and commitment. I have given these in the past, but am unwilling - given what I perceive to be the lack of financial support, emotional support and recognition of our past successes as a team- to give these things into the future. There are no incentives and few rewards from GSC to continue."

Also, Hilgenberg added, "There is a right time to get out, and this is it. I've enjoyed it, and will miss it."

Ladies Win Two

The Lady Pioneers rested up last week for a two-day trip to the northern part of the state on Friday and Saturday and the rest did them some good. The ladies came home with victories against both West Liberty and Wheeling.

On February 3, the GSC women scored a 74-68 victory over the West Liberty State Lady Hilltoppers.

The Lady Pioneers were led by Maria Lothes with 18 points, followed by Bunny Taylor with 16, Tina Burkhamer with 15, Kim Maynard with 13, Jewell Rankin with six, and Sonja Bailey, Kathy Knapp, and Janice Hensley with two each. Maynard pulled down 13 rebounds and Taylor passed off five assists and snagged four steals. The ladies shot 42% from the floor and 87% from the free throw line.

West Liberty, led by Mary Kohler with 14 points, shot 71% from the free throw line and 40% from the floor.

Six GSC women scored in double figures on February 4 versus Wheeling College in a 74-65 victory for the Lady Pioneers. Taylor led GSC with 17 points and 10 rebounds. Following Taylor in scoring were Bailey, Burkhamer, and Maynard with 12 each, Rankin and Lothes with 10 each, and Hensley with one. Taylor also completed six assists and Bailey and Lothes each grabbed three steals.

The Lady Pioneers completed 83% of their shots from the free throw line and 44% from the floor, while Wheeling shot 53% from the charity stripe and 44.5% from the floor.

The GSC women played at home on Monday night against West Virginia Wesleyan, but results were unavailable at press time. The ladies travel to Alderson-Broaddus on Thursday, February 9 for a double header with the GSC men and return home on Saturday, February 11 to battle Fairmont State.

Pioneers Go 2-1 At Home

In hoop action last week, the GSC Pioneers lost a close game, won one game going away, and squeaked past their opponents in their final contest of the week to raise their overall record to 12-9 (10-7 in conference action).

On January 31, the Alderson-Broaddus Battlers came to town and handed the home squad a 73-70 defeat. Glenville, up by 10 at the half (34-24), was outscored 49-36 in the second half.

Rich Moore led the Pioneers with 17 points, followed by Clay Young with 14, Matthew Bullett and Kenneth Taylor with 12 each, Steve Linville with seven, Rudy Watts with six, and Steve Morris with two. Young, last week's WVIAC Player of the Week, led the squad with 12 rebounds and Taylor contributed six.

Glenville outrebounded the A-B squad, 39-31. The Pioneers shot 73.3% from the free throw line and 50% from the floor, as compared to A-B's 84.2% from the free throw line and 43.5% from the floor.

Alderson-Broaddus was led by Bruce Smith and Greg Graham with 15 each.

February 2 and a home contest against the Davis and Elkins Senators brought better luck for the Pioneers, who walked away with a 77-62 victory.

In first half action, the Pioneers established their winning margin by outscoring the Senators, 47-32. Second half action saw the Senators trying to play catch up, but the best they could do was a 30-30 tie, leaving them with the loss.

GSC was led by Young with 23, followed by Linville with 15, Taylor with 12, Moore with 11, Bullett with six, Watts and Morris with four each, and Chris Graham with two. Young again led in rebounding, pulling down 13 for the blue and white. Moore passed off six assists and Young grabbed five steals. Glenville shot 55.6% from the floor and 70% from the charity stripe, while the Senators put in 40% from the floor and 72.2% from the free throw line.

In a thriller from the beginning to the final buzzer, the Pioneers slipped past the visiting West Virginia Tech Golden Bears on February 4, 66-65.

At the buzzer ending the first half, Tech held a slim 33-30 margin over GSC; but in a seesaw second half, the Pioneers outscored the Golden Bears by four, 36-32, to claim the bragging rights.

Young led the Pioneers once again, notching up 25 markers for the GSC squad and pulling down 12 rebounds. He was followed in scoring by Moore with 14, Bullett with 12, Linville with six, Taylor with five, and Watts with four. Glenville shot 80% from the free throw line and 49% from the floor.

Tech, led by Antoine Scott, with 21 points, was outrebounded by the Pioneers, 38-25.

The Pioneers played West Virginia State at home on Tuesday, but results of the conference battle were not available. GSC travels to Phillipi tomorrow (Thursday, February 9) to take on the Alderson-Broaddus Battlers.

Flack Responds To Letter

A letter from a group of students in the February 1 issue of the Glenville Mercury expressed concern that Glenville State College is not adequately supporting current programs in music, art, drama and business, and furthermore that new program implementation diverts resources from existing programs. Though I understand the students' concern, I do not believe the letter accurately depicts the College's efforts in support and development of programs. Permit me to make several observations.

1. It is true that additional faculty are needed in several areas such as business and education. It is also true that a new facility is needed for business and for fine arts. Glenville State College is making every effort to address these needs. The College has requested from the Board of Regents funding for new faculty positions in computer science, education and petroleum technology beginning in August 1984, and is seeking support from the Board of Regents in completing several capital projects, including a new facility for business and fine arts.

Achieving all of these goals will take time, especially considering current economic conditions in the state. But Glenville is making progress, and has in motion a course of action to obtain a new facility for business and fine arts.

2. Adding new programs does not detract from existing ones. Any new programs at Glenville State College are designed to fit within the role and mission as approved by the Board of Regents. Every five years Glenville State College and the other public colleges in the state develop a mission statement. During recent months Glenville's faculty and administration have been developing a new mission statement which is to cover the period until 1990. The draft of this statement projects that Glenville will continue to emphasize the traditional areas in which it has provided quality service in the past -- areas such as teacher education (including art and music education) and business. The College does, however, anticipate that it needs to provide some new services to the people of central West Virginia in the coming year--services such as health care and needs of area industries. Needs assessment studies conducted by Glenville have indicated the desirability of programs in nursing and petroleum technology, to name just two.

Before any new program is implemented, Glenville State College undertakes a long and careful planning process. Ordinarily it takes two years before approval is given by the Board of Regents to offer a new program. Attention is given to such issues as needs, justification, and available monetary and faculty resources before the Regents grant program approval. In most instances a college will offer a new program only if no or few new resources are needed. For example, the sports management program requires no additional faculty. The petroleum technology program and the proposed nursing program will each require one additional Glenville instructor. Some non-state revenues will be used for faculty salaries in each program, thus reducing financial pressure on the College.

It seems to me imperative that Glenville State, like any living organism, must continually assess, change, revise and adapt itself to the changing environment around it. Only in that way can Glenville thrive and flourish. This does not mean that Glenville will forget or move away from the traditional services which it has provided in the past. The College will continue to do these things it does well. But in areas where change is needed and desired, Glenville State College must not shirk its responsibility. It must offer programs and services the people of central West Virginia need.

Sincerely yours,
Bruce C. Flack
Vice-President for Academic Affairs

Thursday's Conference, moderated by James Kyle M.D., Team Physician for GSC, will include speeches by Earl Adolfson, Randall Hunt, Gary Nottingham, and Ollie Pottmeyer.

The conference is free for GSC students, but if they wish to attend any of the various programs, tickets are available in limited supply at the Co-op. After the advance tickets, sponsored by Student Congress are sold, student tickets will be $7.

The Conference promises to be a source of valuable information to those individuals involved in sports or sports medicine.

Abolishment of Policy Urged

The "class attendance policy" of Glenville State College should be abolished for no less than the following reasons:

1) The policy allows instructors to teach out of the book and employ similarly boring techniques (especially in required classes), as they have a captive audience.

2) Retainer of the policy creates contempt and cynicism for campus authority, which continually ignore this widespread concern.

3) Perhaps most importantly, the policy denies 'freedom of choice', a supposedly previous ideal of liberal college education.

The administration argues, among other things, that it is necessary for the V.A. and other government agencies. This fact does not require that it be used for disciplinary purpose though. The administration also argues that it makes better students. Actually, it makes lazy teachers.

Most importantly, the elimination of the attendance policy will accomplish the following long-term goal. The class curriculum will become more interesting as instructors are forced to not rely upon a policy to have full seats, but challenging and interesting material which will force students to attend.

Education should be stimulating and interesting. An attendance policy works against both of these goals.
