Glenville State College Musical Talent Featured During Dedication

by Kristi Rogucki

The West Virginia Symphony will not be the only musical talent to shine during GSC's Dedication Week. On Wednesday, September 19, 8:00 p.m., seven of Glenville State's finest music ensembles will display their talent and expertise on the stage of the new Fine Arts Building auditorium.

The evening of musical entertainment will begin with vocal music. Under the direction of Mr. Richard O'Brien, the Glenville State Concert Choir will perform three selections, one of which will be an antiphonal. A choir placed in the balcony will sing to a choir placed on stage. The choir on stage will sing a response, then the balcony choir will again take its turn. The vocals continue in this manner until the song's completion. The Concert Choir will be accompanied by Julie Harbert on the organ and Fred Channel on the timpani.

Following the Concert Choir's opening will be GSC's Chamber Singers. The Chamber Singers, also under the direction of Mr. O'Brien, are a select group of 12 members and will be singing a spiritual.

After the vocal repertoire is complete, Mr. Harry Rich's Brass Choir will perform two selections followed by the Senior Brass Quartet. This quartet of musicians is comprised of Tanya Gray, Gene Collins, Jeff Miller, and Kevin Sears. The next item on GSC's 'Music Sampler' will be Glenville State's Jazz Band. Under the direction of Mr. Phil Rossano, the Jazz Band will delight the audience with three carefully selected Jazz pieces.

After the intermission, the stage becomes Mr. John McKinney's. His percussion ensemble will begin the post intermission show, and the Pioneer Marching Band, under his direction, will complete the evening with a medley of marches.

A $1 donation will be taken at the door at the evening's beginning. This amount, as will any amount collected from people entering the show, will benefit the Bertha Olsen Music Scholarship fund. The scholarship was established in 1969 in honor of Ms. Olsen, and is restricted to entering freshmen, music majors, who display outstanding talent in their field.

Everyone should try to attend at least part of GSC's 'Music Sampler' on Wednesday. The 'Music Sampler' will give the audience a taste of Glenville State's own musical talent, while providing an evening of light and lively entertainment.

Smith Named Business Educator of The Year

Ernest Smith, once one of Glenville State College's finest students, has long been one of GSC's fine faculty. Smith has been an instructor in the Business Dept. since 1970, and has been the chairman of that division for the past fourteen years.

This year, however, Smith's accomplishments and dedication have earned him state-wide recognition.

Each year in Charleston, at the West Virginia Vocational Conference, an outstanding educator in all divisions is honored. At the 1990 conference, Smith was named 1990 West Virginia Business Educator of the Year.

Prior to the conference, Smith had no knowledge of the honor. "When I got there (to the conference) I was dressed in summer casual clothes, and the President of West Virginia Business Education suggested that I might wear something a little nicer. And that was the first time I realized that something special was going to happen," said Smith.

The award was presented by Abigail Reynolds. Reynolds is the State Supervisor of Business Education in the State Department of Education, and one of Smith's former students. "He was well deserving of this award. He has contributed a lot to the field and to the development of Phi Beta Lambda, in as far as leadership and advising. He's truly inspirational," said Reynolds.

Smith was one of the first state advisors to Phi Beta Lambda (the collegiate version of Future Business Leaders of America).

Smith is also the "father" of Office Simulation in West Virginia. Office Simulation is a course in which a group of offices is arranged for students to experience the roles and responsibilities involved in a business operation.

"I'm proudest that I introduced, in West Virginia, the concept of Office Simulation and pioneered it here at the College. Over the years I've taught graduate courses in Office Simulation, and given many talks on the subject, and now the concept is a part of almost every secondary school in West Virginia," said Smith.

Smith's secretary, Deana Barton, has been with him for the past seven years. She related that "he is professional yet compassionate--and that is hard to find in an employer today. And all of us feel that way. He always takes time with everyone in the division--he's just a special person that way."

Dreams Come True With Fine Arts Building

An atmosphere of anticipation and accomplishment hung over the crowd of well-dressed guests. People greeted each other with warmth and smiles. Everyone was here for a purpose--to be present at the dedication of the new Glenville State College Fine Arts Building.

The band was assembled and ready to play. As the group of distinguished guests filed onto the stage, Mr. McKinney, the band director, walked quietly behind them and called the band to attention. The audience and guests on stage stood solemnly, yet excitedly, as the band proudly played our country's national anthem.

After the band completed the national anthem and everyone settled back into their seats, Dr. Billips delivered the invocation. A portion of Dr. Billips' prayer recognized the audience and guests as a "...dedicated assembly of people for higher education."

Upon the completion of the invocation, the program was turned over to Dr. Simmons, President of Glenville State College. President Simmons reported the cost of the new Fine Arts Building as $4.4 million and said "...the facility of the arts would serve the seven or eight counties surrounding Glenville State College."

"Like Linus and the Great Pumpkin..." Glenville State College

has patiently been awaiting the completion of the new building. Dr. Simmons went on to describe the first time he stepped into the new auditorium. "I walked through the second door and I thought it was an optical illusion, but it wasn't."

The next speaker was Espy Miller, Chairman of the Glenville State College Board of Advisors. He remarked that "...the completion of the Fine Arts Building signals a new beginning for Glenville State College... and ... an increased responsibility for the faculty, students, and Glenville residents at large..."

President Simmons again stepped up to the podium and related the story of the building to the audience and the distinguished guests. He explained that, since the 1960's, enrollment in higher education was growing in general and Glenville State College had the same kind of growth, even though there were some limitations in the art, music, drama and business departments.

These limitations were the object of a large effort to improve the College and the reason for the Fine Arts Building. Early attempts to alleviate the problem included renovating Verona Maple Hall to suit the needs of a fine arts program, and consulting an architectural firm for prospective ideas. Both attempts were in vain; either the space was not available or the changes would be too costly. However, beginning with Higher Education Sub-Committee encouragements in 1982, to prospectus writing in 1983-84 and Board of Regents bonding programs in 1985, GSC was eventually awarded $4 million, with legislative approval. With all of the funding formalities aside, the groundbreaking ceremonies for the new facility would be held on May 9, 1987, and GSC would have its Art and Music Building.

New Social Science Programs Planned

by Kristi Rogucki

In order to better prepare students for two growing areas of the job market, GSC hopes to add two new programs of study to its Social Science Division. According to Dr. Delores Mysliwiec, Chairperson of the Division of Social Sciences, the first of these, a criminal justice program, should begin in the spring of 1991. The program will consist of 48 hours of course work, three of which will be a summer field placement. The certification obtained shall be a two-year Associate degree and will be classified as part of the Community College component of GSC. The program has already been approved by the Board of Directors; however, until the WV Joint Commission on Vocational Technical-Occupational Education also approves the curriculum, the program is still tentative. Dr. Mysliwiec believes the program will indeed pass the WVJC-VTOE, and specific course work should begin in January of the spring semester. If the program passes the final stage, Dr. Mysliwiec hopes to add a full-time faculty member, certified in the criminal justice field, to the Social Science Division. This person will assume the position of advisor/teacher for those enrolled in criminal justice.

Graduates of the new criminal justice program will be trained in law enforcement and/or corrections aspects of the criminal justice area. This degree will satisfy the minimum skill requirements needed to meet job entry skills as correctional officers or law enforcement personnel. Students interested in the criminal justice program should contact Dr. Mysliwiec as soon as possible. Although specific course work is not yet available, students can enroll in a temporary course of study that will correspond with the criminal justice curriculum.

The second program will be a 2+2 program in behavioral sciences. Students can either obtain a two-year Associate degree, or if they so choose, elect to remain another two years and receive a four year, Bachelor degree.

At this time the behavioral sciences program has enthusiastic support from the employees of the Weston State Hospital. As a result, some course work will be taught at the hospital by a member of the hospital's staff.

Upon graduation, behavioral science associates or majors will be entering a fastly growing field of employment opportunities. The education obtained in this field will allow a person to work in many areas of the mental health world, such as child guidance counselor, parole officer, hospital work (psychiatric ward, etc.) and, the newest field, divorce mediator. While direct course work is not available, it is imperative that students interested in this program contact Dr. Mysliwiec before the end of the fall semester. As with the criminal justice program, students will be temporarily enrolled in courses that will correspond with either of the behavioral sciences programs. Dr. Mysliwiec hopes to have the program through all appropriations stages by the beginning of the next academic year. If this holds true, specific course work in the behavioral sciences field will be offered at that time.

Dr. Mysliwiec feels that these new additions will better serve the students of Glenville State College in their quest for career opportunities and looks forward to their initiation. Current advisors for the program are Dr. Mysliwiec and Dr. Herrlein.

Wymer Views Education From Another Angle

by Kristi Rogucki

Although he has not begun teaching, per se, Scott has been present in a school system since late August. His placement institution is Burnsville Middle School, Braxton County, and he has been active in the classroom of veteran teacher, Mary Talbott. His students range in grades from sixth to eighth, and his subjects span the topics of world geography and cultures to WV history.

A typical day for Mr. Wymer begins at 7:45. As students file into the classroom for homeroom, both he and Mrs. Talbott complete the morning's paperwork, lunch count, absence list, etc. RRRRRR-III-NNN-GGGG, the first bell sounds and it's time to teach! With the paperwork aside, his real job begins. When Scott Wymer moves to the head of Mary Talbott's classroom, he will assume the role of teacher and educator. To some, the authority and responsibility associated with this position are very intimidating. Scott, however, looks forward to the challenge of enriching young minds with the information his field has to offer. He enjoys introducing and explaining concepts that were

While we, the students of GSC, are still busily preparing for the academic rigors of this semester of college life, GSC's student teachers are hastily, and perhaps hesitantly, preparing for another mode of education. Senior history major, Scott Wymer falls into this other group of GSC people, and he, like all of GSC's student teachers, is trading in his textbook for a gradebook. He is now going to try life on the other side of the desk. Beginning Monday, September 17, Scott will become a teacher - a professional educator.

Alumna of the Week: Patricia Leonard

by Kate Jennings

Patricia (Mace) Leonard graduated from Glenville State College in 1961 with a B.A. degree in elementary education. She completed her M.A. degree in Supervision-Administration from West Virginia University in 1965, did her post-grad in Supervision at Eastern Michigan University in 1967, and acquired her Special Education degree from Western Maryland College in 1973. She finished her Ed. D. Doctorate in Education and Administration at NOVA University of Florida in 1985.

While Patricia Mace was a student at GSC she was active in WAA, a reporter and the circulation manager for The Mercury, was copyreader and advertising manager for The Kanawhachen, president of the Zeta Beta Tau Sorority (now Delta Zeta) and was elected as the 1960-1961 "Future Teacher of the Year."

Many honors and recognitions have been presented to Patricia throughout her career in education. She has been the recipient of the Maryland State Alpha Delta Kappa Scholarship (1982-1983). While conducting research for her dissertation, she was selected to represent Maryland as a seminar leader at the Alpha Delta Kappa Southeast Regional Convention in Asheville, North Carolina (1978) and she has represented the Washington County School System as a career consultant to Denver City Schools in Texas (1972-1973).

Patricia was the "founding president" of Sigma Chapter, the first Alpha Delta Kappa chapter of Western Maryland College (1976). She has written a book entitled "Sixth Grade Student Success: 'What Are Some of the Keys?'" It was published in December of 1986 by NASSP (National Association of Secondary School Principals).

While active in college and other academic circles, Patricia has also been active in the community and the church. She is a Sunday school and Bible teacher, a member of the Washington County Hospital Auxiliary-volunteer in pediatrics, a volunteer for the March of Dimes, and a member of the Jaycettes and Jr. Women's Club. She is also a member of the American Association of University Women, Alpha Delta Kappa, Washington County and Maryland Reading Council, National Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development, Washington County Association of Elementary School Administrators, Maryland Association of Elementary School Administrators, National Association of Elementary School Principals, and Secretary of the South Hagerstown High School Band Boosters Association.

Currently, Mrs. Leonard is employed in Maryland as a principal of an elementary school. She has been a teacher in both Wood County, West Virginia and Washington County, Maryland.

Parking Problem?

by Arson Workman

Parking is a problem on most college campuses and G.S.C. is no exception. As most students have realized, GSC is a campus full of cars and there just isn't anywhere to put them.

The total number of parking spaces available on campus is 586. Of these, 524 are unrestricted and available to all students, 52 are marked as faculty and staff, and 10 are reserved for handicapped, house directors, campus police and visitors parking.

A campus survey was done and, of 50 students surveyed, 46 felt that the parking situation on campus was bad. Suggestions on how the situation could be improved ranged from not allowing freshmen to drive to charging more for permits, which would raise money to build more facilities for parking. The College has tried to ease the crunch and, over the past two years, 70 new parking places have been made available.

The Glenville City Police now ticket the area on the north entrance hill of the campus. This was an area that was used by students over the past two years.

The College Planning Committee is currently looking into other areas where parking may be made available, but it is difficult and expensive to find locations for parking in a hilly area. They also looked into a parking garage, but at an estimated cost of 9,000 dollars per space it was far too expensive.

There is a bright way to look at the bad situation of parking on campus. If all the spots weren't full there would be a decrease in enrollment and the College would be suffering.

The new Fine Arts Building dedication week is underway. Many students and faculty have seen the building from the planning stages through to the completed building. The need for the building dates back to the early 70's. Although many government officials have helped the College get the new building, President Simmons has been the guiding force in acquiring this building.

In the mid 70's an architectural firm was brought to the campus to assess space for business and the fine arts. The architects were advised by the BOR staff to attempt to utilize only existing spaces and to build no new structures. The study revealed adequate space was not available to suit our needs. In 1981-82 the BOR employed personnel in charge of college facilities, and they asked for a plan based on new facilities to meet actual needs. GSC submitted a plan for a multi-purpose building. The legislature approved the BOR's proposal for a Capital Bonding Program of $70 million. This program included $6.5 million for a multi-purpose building on our campus.

At a January '85 BOR meeting, President Simmons discovered the $6.5 million allocated for the building had been reduced to $1.5 million. After two hours of entreaty that afternoon, Dr. Simmons succeeded in persuading the BOR to raise the fund to $4 million. Because of the decrease in funds from $6.5 million to $4 million, the GSC planning committee abandoned the idea of a multi-purpose building and reduced the idea to only a fine arts complex. Dr. Simmons' efforts that afternoon guaranteed our school $4 million of the $70 million Capital Bonding Program. Soon the West Virginia legislature approved selling bonds to finance the construction.

Even after the state approved the selling of bonds, President Simmons was required on two occasions to justify the need for the building to the BOR staff. Once again his efforts assured our school the money for the building. On May 9, 1987, the ground breaking ceremony took place. The BOR approved the contract on May 3, 1988.

Dr. Simmons does not regret the time and energy he sacrificed to get this building because, as he says, "The building is a symbol of hope and a sign of progress for central West Virginia." The campus community feels that the construction of this building indicates the State's faith in GSC and its service to central West Virginia.

Student Teaching Meeting

If you are planning to complete student teaching during the Spring 1991 semester, you should plan to attend a meeting on Thursday, September 27, 1990 at 3:30 p.m. in Clark Hall, room 101. Important placement information will be given to you at that time. You should make every effort to attend. Please contact Mrs. Kathy Butler, Director of Field Experiences if you cannot attend.

The deadline for applying for student teaching during the Spring 1991 semester is Monday, October 1. Application forms will be distributed and completed at the meeting.

Also, please remember to apply for your 80-hour evaluation if you have not done so. Students cannot be considered for student teaching placements until an evaluation is completed.

Harper Receives Award

George Harper, distinguished Glenville State College faculty member, received the "West Virginia Heritage Award" at the annual Stonewall Jackson Jubilee. Harper's painting, "Mall Walls," was chosen as the finest work depicting something man-made, accomplished by West Virginians.

Harper is a member of the West Virginia Artists and Craftsmen Guild and Allied Artists of West Virginia. In addition to being both a painter and a potter, he taught art in the Marshall County Schools for six years and has been an instructor at Glenville State College for the past 13 years. His paintings and pottery are represented in many public and private collections in the United States, Europe, and the Far East.

This meeting was the 75th Anniversary Celebration for the Mathematical Association of America. The Association was founded in 1915 at OSU.

Wesley Foundation Service

Chapel service will be held in the Wesley Foundation Tuesday, September 25 from 12:45 p.m. to 1:15 p.m. Participants will be Carolyn Grove, math teacher; Dolores Mysliwicz, chairperson of the Division of Social Science; the Rev. Karen Frank, and Ernie Arnold, student.

Chapel service is held every Tuesday at 12:15 p.m. at the Wesley Foundation. Everyone is invited to come.

Literary Society

The Literary Society will meet on Thursday, September 20, 1990 at 4:15 p.m. in the Alumni Center. Literary Society consists of a group of GSC students who read novels (approximately one book a month) and discuss the novels during the meetings. This organization is not limited to English majors, but involves a variety of students who enjoy reading. Anyone interested in Literary Society is encouraged to attend the September 20 meeting. If you are interested but cannot attend the meeting, please contact our worthy advisors, Mr. deRosset and Dr. Zane, in the Language Division.

Pioneer Marching Band Performs Show

by Carmen Wager

At the call of Field Commander Gene Collins, horns flash in the sunlight, band members clad in blue and white uniforms straighten with pride to their playing positions and the GSC Pioneer Marching Band prepares to entertain their audience.

The Pioneer Marching Band took the field Saturday when Glenville hosted Shepherd College in their first home game of the season. The audience was given yet another outstanding musical performance including new tunes such as "On Broadway," "Captain from Castile," and "Georgia on My Mind." The percussion section was featured in a piece from Disney's "The Little Mermaid." This wide array of styles provided something of interest for different musical tastes.

Although the band is not featuring a flag corp this year, it is still one of the largest marching bands among all four-year colleges in the state. It has over 70 members this season, with many newcomers in the percussion section.

Collins says the talent and dedication members of this band possess give the group "great potential." The fact that everyone has a high energy level on the field is a major influence on audience response. "Everyone is really enjoying themselves on the field," stated Collins. This enthusiasm can be felt in the crowd.

This year's show is fast-paced with a lot of movement. The band strives for an impressive visual show, but according to Field Commander Collins the "ultimate goal is always a great sound."

The Pioneer Marching Band has effectively combined field presentation with a remarkable sound for the perfect combination to please the crowd. According to Collins "entertainment is what it's all about!"

Trash Has Become a Worldwide Problem

by Arson Workman

FACT- Americans produce 133 million tons of trash per year.

FACT- By the end of the century Americans are expected to produce 300 million tons of trash per year.

FACT- of the 133 million tons of trash produced yearly 70% of that is recyclable.

Throughout America and the world, people are starting to ask themselves a question that 30 years ago would not have entered the minds of most people: Where does my garbage go? No longer is "out of sight out of mind" an acceptable response to the growing problem of solid waste disposal in America.

Most trash we throw away is taken to "sanitary" landfills. However, these so-called sanitary landfills have many problems. These range from ground water pollution to breeding grounds for disease carrying mosquitoes. It is for this reason that many people are resisting construction of landfills and many open landfills are being closed around the country. In the city of Philadelphia, 17 landfills have been closed since 1981 for various health hazards. The closing of landfills causes prices of trash pickup to rise due to increased distances that garbage must be transported. Since 1981 the price of trash in Philadelphia has risen from 2.60 a ton to over 100 dollars per ton.

Many cities are mandating recycling programs in a race to reduce the amount of trash dumped into landfills. In Seattle trash is charged by the ton in an attempt to reduce garbage. It appears to be working. Over the past two years, Seattle has reduced its garbage output by 25%.

In the Glenville area, a voluntary recycling program is being attempted and headed by Rick Sybolt, an instructor at the Land Resources Division at GSC. Glass, aluminum, and all types of metal are accepted. A pickup date is scheduled for once a month. Mr. Sybolt says that the plan has been somewhat successful but says that it would be more successful if there were more volunteers involved in the project. For more information contact Rick Sybolt at the Eberle Hall.

Voter Registration Encouraged

Out of about 1.3 million West Virginians over 18 years old and eligible to register, it is shocking that only 881,602 people in the state have actually registered. This means that over 400,000 West Virginians of voting age haven't registered.

In conjunction with this drive, I am encouraging all newspapers to publish the "Countdown to Register" logo in each publication through October 9. By publishing a countdown in prominent place on

by Kristi Rogucki

"Saddam Hussein will fall" declared President George Bush in his September 11 address to Congress. The President feels Iraq's efforts to "wipe an entire country off the face of the Earth" will not go unnoticed; the countries of the world are banding together in order to fight Hussein's aggression. Shortly after the summit with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, President Bush said "a new partnership of nations" has emerged from the Gulf Crisis and the situation "grave as it is, offers a rare opportunity to move toward an historical period of cooperation." Bush feels "a new world order" may be conceived from the crisis, a world that is "freer from the threat of terror, stronger in the pursuit of justice and more secure in the quest for peace - an era in which the nations of the world, East and West, North and South, can prosper and live in harmony." The President failed to mention any new solutions to resolve the Gulf Crisis. He only repeated his previous statements condemning Hussein.

The reason President Bush addressed Congress, however, was to inform Americans on the present situation in the Gulf and, while the world is uniting abroad, the President wants his own country to unite as the deadlock continues. "If ever there was a time to put country before self and patriotism before party, that time is now.

Bush also called on Congress to "get America's fiscal house in order." Tuesday, participants in the talks said that the two sides agreed to increase taxes and fees by $25 billion next year and $130 billion over five years. In order to curb the petroleum deficit, the President emphasized energy conservation, tax incentives for domestic oil and gas exploration and possibly, enhancing the oil drilling in Alaska "without damage to wildlife."

In response to President Bush's report and the Gulf Crisis, House majority leader Richard Gephardt (D-MO); addressed the nation with the Democratic Party's reactions to the President's speech. Gephardt began his address by saying "These are not guests of the host, and the world knows it, the United States will not be blackmailed." Gephardt's words on the Gulf topic remained strong throughout his presentation. He also called upon the nations of the world to unite. He felt those nations who are opposed to Iraq's aggression should at least, if not through manpower, give some "financial" support to US efforts. As he pleaded for international help, Gephardt also asked for internal help. He feels the "wealthy of the nation should help 'reduce the nation's debt.'" teaching them the fundamentals of art. He held this position for five years. He continued his teaching at St. Osyth College of Education as a lecturer, specializing in print making and textiles. He then applied for a senior lecturing position in art education in Brentwood-essex, where he has worked for twelve years and is still presently employed. Not only is Cooper a lecturer, but he arranges times for his student teachers and teaches advanced art courses in the Art Department.

Recently, Cooper spent time visiting relatives in Florida where he enjoyed meeting people. He said, "This is an ideal way for me to learn more about the country by working here." Cooper and his wife both applied for positions here in the states and were both accepted. He is living in Summerville with his wife and 10-year-old son.

Cooper said, "the facilities here are very high standing; the Media Center and Fine Arts Building are most impressive." He said the professors have been very helpful and the students are very friendly.

When school is out in May, Mr. Cooper wants to do some personal research concerning art teaching methods. He plans to do some traveling around the United States before returning home to England.

Jonathan Cooper brings knowledge from abroad to the art students on the Glenville State College campus, while he enjoys a year of American culture.

Cooper, who comes to GSC through a Fulbright teacher exchange program, will be teaching art and photography classes throughout the school year.

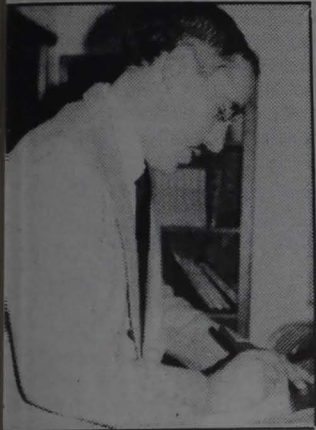

Cooper is originally from a small town called Frinton-On-Sea, which is approximately 18 miles outside of London. He graduated from Lofestoft School of Art in London. He held his first job in a secondary school where he catered to eleven through sixteen-year-olds, foreign to students before they entered the classroom.

As for advice to prospective student teachers on the subject of teaching, Scott says, "Remember how you were when you were in seventh grade, or sixth grade, how you expected things to be examined. Explain things to your students on their terms, and in an interesting way they will understand. . . Instruction with action is important for the success of any teacher. . . A teacher must try to be enthusiastic in order to be effective."

Respect is also a major factor in the success of a teacher. One of the students at the Middle School discovered Mr. Wymer's nickname and addressed him as such. Wisely, Mr. Wymer corrected the student and, thus, preserved his status as a respected future instructor and present professional. "Be friendly, but don't become their (the students') friend. When you become their friend, you lose their respect." This is a statement Scott heard throughout his education at GSC and he seems to agree with the concept.

Scott eagerly looks forward to his teaching experience and does not overlook the amount of preparation and work that goes into the task of teaching. He is beginning to see teaching as a very demanding profession. From his early experiences, he urges student teachers of the future to go to their placement schools early to observe the styles of the teachers they will be temporarily replacing. Observe that teacher's techniques both in the classroom and on the paper of his or her lesson plans. Be prepared for anything. Scott's biggest concern is not having enough material to cover the entire class period. He feels it is a good idea to have more than enough activity than too little activity. In answer to this, he says to try to "get ahead as far as lesson plans and classroom preparation go, and above all, don't be afraid to ask questions." In Scott's opinion, when you as a student teacher enter the classroom, yes, you are an instructor but, at the same time, to your supervising teacher and to yourself, you are still a student; this atmosphere is simply an expansion of your own quest for knowledge as a student.

So good luck to all Glenville State student teachers, and in the words of Scott Wymer, "Enjoy and learn, for this is a learning experience."

Outstanding Student

by Kate Jennings

Paula Rexroad, a senior at Glenville State College, is a double major in physical education (K-12) and social studies (5-8)(9-12). Her overall grade point average is a 3.4.

While attending GSC, Paula has been active in the following organizations: Delta Zeta Sorority, 4 years; Ladies of the White Rose, 1 year; Student Congress, 1 year; intramurals, 2 years; Panhellenic, 3 years; PE Majors Club, 3 years; Pi Gamma Mu, 1 year; Kappa Delta Pi, 1 year; Athletic Committee, 1 year; office worker, 2 summers.

Paula has also been the recipient of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges, 1 year; Outstanding Young Woman, 1 year; and has been on the Dean's List numerous times, last year with a 4.0.

When away from Glenville State College, Paula helps with Special Olympics and attends the Low Gap United Methodist Church in her hometown, Cairo, West Virginia.

Paula believes one of the reasons she chose to attend Glenville State College is that... "it's one of the best schools for education in the State of West Virginia."

"Our Town" Opens Thursday

by Nancy Wayne

"Our Town," the play by Thornton Wilder, will be performed on September 20-21 as part of the Fine Arts Building dedication.

Director Dennis Wemm sees this play as a very good one to help inaugurate the new building. "It is an all-American play," he says, "and leaves a good feeling with the audience and the performers."

"Our Town" explores the events of life that make up being a human with strengths and weaknesses.

Several of the 18 cast members from the GSC production are from off-campus. Wemm is attempting to expand the GSC actors group to include people from the community, as well as from the campus.

Nancy Wemm, production coordinator, says she is looking forward to the performance, which includes not only the experienced GSC actors, but also some new faces who are performing on a college stage for the first time.

Even though any play rehearsal involves setbacks and normal problems, Director Wemm is pleased with the "Our Town" rehearsals. "The rehearsals are going very well. The 'off book' - the point when lines are memorized - is the best we've done," he says.

Wemm continues that the accomplished veteran actors are performing up to their standard strong performances. Mercedes Richmond is co-director. Some of the other actors are Dana Spade, Kris Rogers, and Janet Rogers, with Edie Flemming as the character Mrs. Gibbs; Jim Shock plays the town drunk and Dennis Wemm is the Stage Manager character.

Director Wemm says that the roles of Emily and George are being done by senior Chris Jamison, and Duane Chapman, sophomore. "Chris, as Emily, manages to carry well the age range of the character from 12 years old to 23 years throughout the play. She brings good sensitivity to the role." Duane Chapman has been in the role of George for just a few days, since the other person cast for the part was replaced. "Duane is doing really well and working very hard," says Wemm.

Nancy Wemm serves as head carpenter to create the props in the play. Even though very few props are needed in "Our Town," chairs, ladders, and rose arbors will have to be supplied for the play. Wemm enjoys working with the students from the play production class who will help to build the props. "I like to work with students who've never had a hammer in their hands," says Wemm.

Dress rehearsal for the play is scheduled for Sunday, September 16.

Homecoming '90 Approaching

by Nancy Wayne

The Homecoming Dance, featuring the band MAXX, will be held from 9:00 p.m. to midnight in the ballroom of the Heflin Center on October 27.

This year the activities budget for the school year, as reported by Student Congress President Scot Montgomery, is $23,400 for programming and $10,800 for activities. This funding is based on the number of full-time students.

The Student Services funds provide finances to hold, not only Homecoming events, but others as well, for the enjoyment of GSC students and staff and the community at large.

On December 6, a Music Video Dance will be held from 7:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. in the Ballroom.

Some other performers listed on the school calendar are paid for from Student Congress funds, as are the movie videos shown in the snack bar each week. In the spring, GSC Week is held. A dance for freshman orientation is provided before the fall school term.

Homecoming activities at Glenville State College are a special highlight of the events sponsored and coordinated by the Student Congress every school year.

On October 22, Monday, Brian Husky will open the Homecoming Activities Week by performing his guitar music in the Amphitheater at 6:00 p.m. Free soft drinks and pizza will be provided by Student Congress funds.

A campus-wide picnic will be held October 25 in the Amphitheater from 4:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m. All food will be supplied.

On October 25 at 6:30 p.m. Larry Goldstein, a mime clown, will perform in the auditorium of the Administration Building.

The parade will be held with the GSC Homecoming Queen and her Court being featured, along with floats and other organizations' entries.

During Homecoming, October 27, the GSC Pioneer Football Team will play WV Tech in a game at 1:30 p.m.

A Look Into The Market Place: The Successful Interview

by Carmen Wager

You've passed all the required courses, paid tuition and fees for the last time, and there will be no more early morning classes. Relieved? Proud? You should be. But, now that you've become a college graduate it is time to utilize your education and hit the job market. That first interview can be very exciting, yet frightening, as you come face to face with the interviewer and try to convince him you are the right person for the job. Here are a few survival tips for that all important debate in the working class.

There is no clear-cut, right way to conduct yourself in an interview. The key is to be aware of the job-interview style of the organization with which you are interviewing and to be well-informed about the company. Poise and intuition are important components of a successful interview, but you need to go a step further. Find out as much about the company as you can. Go to a library and check references such as the Standard & Poors indexes. These list basic statistics such as number of employees, sales volumes, products the company manufactures, etc. Show even more initiative and get the company's annual report or search for news about the company in back issues of the newspapers. Be sure to know the names of the chief executive officer and the vice-presidents. Arm yourself with as much information as possible. The more details you give, the more likely they are to remember you.

Being well-informed is essential, but don't get too many facts and figures to keep track of. A false assumption about the dreaded interview is that the interviewer will bombard you with tough questions designed to either make you or break you. In most cases, this is far from the truth. Oftentimes, the interviewer is nervous, too. You should strive to create a good rapport with the interviewer. Let the interviewer know you are comfortable (even if you're not). Don't depend on him or her to keep the conversation going. Talk about the weather if necessary, bstrike up a conversation as soon as possible. According to Career Futures, "50 percent of the employment decision is made in the first 30 to 60 seconds after a candidate begins the interview." Remember, you only get one chance to make a first impression.

There are some basic traits interviewers look for in a candidate. Researchers say sincerity, warmth, good eye contact, self-assurance and a polished personal style are the most important. They also urge a candidate to respond to questions eagerly, as long as you don't pretend to know more than the interviewer does. On the other hand, don't 'fake it.' They interview many people and will recognize insincerity immediately. You should also ask questions. John Johnson, president and CEO, says that failing to ask questions is one of the most common - and fatal - mistakes job candidates make.

You must be careful of the questions you ask. For example, if you're interested in how long the work day will run, you might ask "What's a typical day at this firm like?" Don't say "I have aerobics a 5:30 daily. Will that be a problem?" Yes, that's a problem. The interviewer will construe you as a clock-watcher. He is probably looking for a dedicated person who is willing to put in extra hours.

At the conclusion of the interview, the interviewer will probably thank you and tell you when you might expect a response. This is your last chance to show how eager you are about the position. Tell him to call you anytime if any questions arise. You might even ask if you can call him for an update on the selection process. Taking it one step further, you should put a piece of paper in the typewriter or turn the computer on as soon as you get home and write a brief note to the interviewer. Express your thanks and restate what you have to offer the company. A company is much more likely to hire someone who shows initiative.

Student Congress' Goals Set

by Nancy Wayne

The Student Congress is busy with meetings about Homecoming activities for October 27 and with coordinating requests from organizations to help serve the needs of GSC students.

Scot Montgomery, president of the Student Congress, said groups should be working now on ideas for Homecoming parade entries, floats, and banners for the October 27 Homecoming with WV Tech.

The theme of homecoming is "The Beginning of a New Generation." The events include the nomination of the homecoming queen and princesses, September 17-21. Nominations are being accepted in the Student Services office. Elections will be held in the Heflin Student Center October 3-4.

The Congress is also planning the Homecoming parade and dance, the banner contest, and the 10K road race. Contact any Congress member if you have questions. Tony Evans can give information about the road race.

Phi Beta Lambda, the business majors group, requested that the Congress check on the need for more trash receptacles on campus. The PBL is doing a visual survey and will present the results to the Congress, which will make the decision about where to put the containers.

Other officers for the Congress are: vice-president, Gary Messenger; secretary, Sandra Kell; treasurer, Cheryl Amos; and parliamentarian, Mary Conrad. Faculty advisor is Dr. Alfred Billips, Dean of Student Services.

A meeting is held every Wednesday at 5:00 p.m. in the Heflin Student Center, room 103, and is open to students and faculty.

Augusta Heritage Center Hosts Celebration

Ringin' banjos and red-hot fiddling will greet the brilliant foliage of a West Virginia autumn next month, when the Augusta Heritage Center hosts its first-ever "October Old-Time Week" celebration in Elkins.

A concentrated series of old-time music classes, concerts, and jam sessions, the program will be held October 22-28 on the campus of Davis & Elkins College.

Leading the week will be a bevy of top traditional musicians, including multi-instrumentalist Bob Smakula, bass and banjo player Joe Fallon of the group Critton Hollow, and the Wildcats, a high-energy trio featuring Rafe Stefanini on fiddle, singer/guitarist Carol Elizabeth Jones, and banjo player Stefan Senders.

Instruction will be divided between individual instrumental workshops and ensemble sessions. Classes will include beginning to advanced levels of fiddle and banjo playing, plus back-up guitar, string bass, and vocals training, all aimed at achieving the classic string band sound.

Providing a direct link to the taproots of the Appalachian tradition will be guest visits by some of West Virginia's foremost old-time players, including legendary fiddler Melvin Wine and fiddle/banjo player Frank George. Evenings will include singing sessions, special workshops, and jam sessions till the wee morning hours.

A weekend mini-festival caps the program, offering a showcase of student bands, an evening old-time dance, staff concert, and a Sunday gospel sing.

Fine Arts Building con't from pg 1

As Dr. Simmons' speech continued, he described the building as a symbol of "... hope and was a read...." to which "...Glenville... central West Virginia hung...the building is a special building in a lot of ways. We should be proud of what we have and this building couldn't be here if a lot of people didn't helped."

Dr. Simmons paused a moment before he introduced Philip Reale, the first of a number of distinguished guests who had in some way helped the Fine Arts Building dream become a reality.

Mr. Philip Reale told the audience the "work that went into this facility was the work of many...and this really isn't a ceremony, it's really a beginning of an opportunity for this college and the community..." He also stated that Dr. Simmons is the one responsible for this facility and he deserves the "thanks" from everyone and this facility should be looked at as a "...commitment that schools like Glenville State College would be the body and soul of higher education in West Virginia."

In his remarks, Louis Costanzo III remembered Luanna Smith as part of reason the Fine Arts Building is complete and tearfully said, "I know somewhere in heaven she must have a smile on her face."

Delegate Marjorie H. Burke of the West Virginia House of Delegates told the audience that the "...funds are yours, your tax dollars brought back to central West Virginia."

Don McIntyre followed Delegate Burke with the comments, "...this certainly is the biggest statement made in central West Virginia...a real community center where the people will come and congregate..."

Finally, Dr. Steve Haid, Secretary of Education and The Arts, took the podium, looked to Dr. Simmons and commented, "...to him everyone owes a tremendous debt of gratitude. Let's look forward to years and years of productive value out of this facility."

Dr. Simmons once again took the podium and asked Dr. Gillespie, Chairman of Fine Arts, to approach the stage. Dr. Simmons presented the keys of the Fine Arts Building to Dr. Gillespie who accepted the keys on behalf of the faculty, staff and students of Glenville State College.

Dr. Simmons turned his attention to the audience one last time and said, "... many, many thousands of works of art will be produced in this hall and many concerts will be held...students don't just need a technical education, they also need the humanities."

Dreams are like models, waiting to be assembled at Glenville State College. The people of GSC and the surrounding areas will be the benefactors of this new building for now, and for years to come.

18-Point Plan Introduced

State College System Chancellor Paul Marion presented his plan for quality and accountability to the State College System West Virginia Board of Directors at their September 17th meeting.

Dr. Marion's plan for quality and accountability calls for review of institutional missions, selective approval of new degree programs, the establishment of minimum standards of cost effectiveness for existing degree programs, designation of peaks of excellence, and freshman assessment and placement.

The Chancellor's 18-point plan includes reports on student achievement to be provided each year by the Chancellor's office to the State Superintendent of Schools for dissemination to each high school principal, county school superintendent, and school board chair concerning performance in college of the group of graduates from each high school. The report will include the percentage of graduates placed in developmental courses as college freshman. Similar reports will be provided to the presidents of state and private institutions concerning the performance of students who transfer to institutions in the State College System.

In order to encourage "at risk" students to attend college, Marion's plan calls for college sponsorship of an annual program for high school students. Under the Chancellor's plan, each college will also work with school districts in its area to develop at least three academic alliances involving college faculty members and high school teachers in the same academic disciplines.

Continual improvement of teacher education, the development of student retention and completion programs, strengthening of community college services, implementation of activities related to economic development and review of intercollegiate athletics are also part of the plan. If adopted, each college will be encouraged to make special efforts to increase private and federal funds by 5% over the previous year, beginning with the 1991-92 academic year. Each college will make special efforts to increase private funds for student financial aid and the Board will request increased funding for the West Virginia Higher Education Grant Program.

In other action, the State College System Board of Directors will also distribute $1,665,000 of additional salary funds to provide salary increases for faculty and staff. At the recent Special Session on Education, the West Virginia Legislature appropriated funding to provide all full-time faculty and staff who have not yet received at least a $1,000 annual salary increase as a result of the July 1st and August 1st increases to be raised to that level. The bill also requires that all full-time faculty receive an additional $1,000 salary increase.

The Board will also consider the allocation of funds for faculty development efforts, acceptance of the new Shepherd College physical educational building as complete, approval of a contract for the campus master plan at West Virginia Institute of Technology, and report on the Task Force on Faculty Salaries and Resource Allocation.

Gilmer Citizens File Grievance

On March 7, 1990, teachers in five counties walked off the job. By March 8, teachers in 47 of West Virginia's 55 counties put aside their pens and papers for picket signs as the first West Virginia teachers' strike was in full swing.

Teachers protested being 49th in the country on the pay scale and the fact that the teachers retirement fund was already $300 million in debt.

As tensions between the teachers and the Governor grew, State Superintendent Henry Morockie decided to close schools state-wide March 15 and 16, for what he referred to as a "cooling off" period. On Saturday, March 17, the West Virginia Education Association and the West Virginia Federation of Teachers agreed to end the strike when legislative leaders said they would ask Governor Caperton to call a special needs session to address long-term education needs.

During the period of the strike, those teachers who participated in the work stoppage were docked pay. As a result, over $10,000 of unincumbered funds remain with the Gilmer County School Board.

Superintendent James Lambert made the following recommendations regarding the distribution of the fund:

1. The total $10,456 be distributed back to the schools on a per pupil basis. This will insure that all students will receive instruction and benefits.

2. The principal and staff of each school will determine the expenditure of the money in accordance to the needs of their school...

3. Regular county purchasing procedures will be followed....

The recommendation of Lambert was denied. The Board chose to accept the recommendation of the Gilmer County Education Association, represented by John Wolfe.

Wolfe's proposal included: dividing the fund among all teachers involved in the work stoppage, and allocating those monies to the schools pro-rated, based on the number of teachers who struck.

While this plan would pay Gilmer County High School an average of $12.04 per pupil, it would pay Sand Fork $0.57 per pupil.

As a result of this inequity, three groups filed grievances against the Gilmer County Board of Education.

Those filing the grievances included: four elementary school principals, a group of Sand Fork elementary school teachers, and a group of parents, residents of Gilmer County (219 persons).

The grievance filed by the citizens of Gilmer County expressed concern over the favoritism shown by the approved allocation of funds, and recommended that the funds be appropriated to all county schools on a per pupil basis. By motion, the Board denied the grievance.

At a hearing on May 17, 1990, in Charleston, WV Department Superintendent, William Perry heard testimony concerning the matter. A decision is expected in 10 days to two weeks.

Legislative Opportunity

Dr. Wesley Phelan announced today that application may be made by students interested in participating in the Frasure-Singleton Student Legislative Program. This program provides an opportunity for students to observe for one week the West Virginia Legislature during the 1991 regular session.

According to Dr. Phelan, students work on a one-to-one basis with legislators. They observe committee meetings, floor sessions and hearings. Legislators are available to answer questions, explain strategy, and discuss procedures. The scheduled activities include discussion sessions with members of the executive, legislative, and judicial branches of state government as well as lobbyists and the press.

The program is open to full-time sophomores, juniors, and seniors who have completed one course in government or political science. Housing, two meals and transportation while in Charleston are provided by the program. All other expenses must be absorbed by the participants.

Interested students should contact Dr. Phelan, LBH 237, for applications and further details about the program. Applications must be returned to the faculty program sponsor by October 10.

Osteopathic School to Recruit

The West Virginia School of Osteopathic Medicine will make a recruiting visit to Glenville State College on September 25, 1990.

David Hufford, Ph.D., associate professor of microbiology at WVSOM, will present, "Eradication of Smallpox," at 12 p.m.

Following the lecture, Dr. Hufford and Angela Heavner, admissions counselor for WVSOM, will be available between 1 and 2 p.m. to answer questions about osteopathic medicine and career options.

WVSOM is a fully-accredited four-year osteopathic medical college in Lewisburg, dedicated to training family physicians for West Virginia and rural Appalachia.

For information, contact Angela Heavner, admissions counselor for WVSOM, at 1-800-356-7836.

Hart's Headlines

As the boys of summer reach autumn, it is time for twenty-two teams to go home, and four teams to make their quest for a world championship.

With under twenty games to go, the question amid baseball fans today is who will be those four teams?

The Cincinnati Reds will hold off the Los Angeles Dodgers, in becoming the first team to remain in first place the entire course of a season and winning the National League West Division. The National League East race will come down to a final confrontation between the Pittsburgh Pirates and the New York Mets. The Pirates will not only win the division, but will offer Bobby Bonilla and Doug Drabek as MVP and Cy Young Champion.

In the American League the Oakland A's and Boston Red Sox will repeat their 1988 league championship form, with the same result. The American League MVP will be given to the powerful Cecil Fielder of Detroit, while Oakland's Bob Welch will win the Cy Young award. With everyone's talk of the Oakland Athletics repeating as world champions, I am going to predict the Pittsburgh Pirates to meet and defeat the Oakland A's in the 1990 World Series.

Tallman Earns Medalist Honors

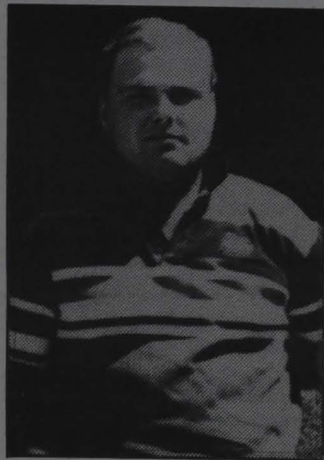

Senior Greg Tallman captured individual medalist honors Saturday, as he carded a five-over-par 147 at the two-day Washington and Lee Invitational.

Tallman edged Greg Sayers of Radford College by three strokes. Sayers carded an eight-over-par 150, respectively.

The Pioneers finished as runnerup in the two-day event, as they shot a team score of 620, twelve strokes behind champion Radford College.

Other scorers for Glenville State are as follows: Ben Moore 80-76-156; Mike Stills 80-75-155; Brian Carney 77-85-162; and John Buser 92-85-177.

The Pioneer golf team will see action again October first and second in the Ferrum College Invitational at Hillsville, Virginia.

Shepherd College edges Glenville State

Glenville State fell to (0-2) overall and (0-1) in conference play Saturday, as they dropped their home opener to Shepherd (2-1), (1-0), 23-13.

In a contest that the Pioneers won every statistic but the final score, Glenville State faithfuls saw a preview of things to come. The Pioneers outplayed Shepherd in every phase of the game, but fell prey to costly mistakes.

With the game scoreless in the second quarter, Shepherd quarterback Jim Signora hit Justin Duhaime with a 25-yard touchdown pass. The point after attempt failed. With the score 6-0 in favor of the visiting Shepherd Rams, Dean Pyzik closed out the scoring in the first half with a 38-yard field goal. The halftime score favored Shepherd 9-0.

In the third quarter, the Pioneers saw many scoring attempts squandered because of costly mistakes, while the Rams added to their lead on a Signora to Snyder 23-yard touchdown pass. With a successful extra point, Shepherd led 16-0.

Glenville State failed to get on the board until 8:44 remained in the fourth quarter. At that point, the score showed them down by 23 points, after Chris Hill returned a blocked punt for a Shepherd touchdown.

Although the Pioneers attempted a furious rally late in the fourth quarter, it proved to be too late. Quarterback Mike Kellar threw touchdown passes of 19 and 20 yards to Greg Lawrence and Aaron Simpson; that only signified the Pioneers ability to move the football.

For the day, Mike Kellar, the sophomore quarterback from Shinnston, completed 26 of 50 passes for 319 yards and two touchdowns. Terrence McGee led all receivers with 98 yards on 9 receptions, while Aaron Simpson gained 84 yards on 5 catches. Rushing on the day saw Frank Myers gain 50 yards on 12 attempts.

Defensively the Pioneers were led by freshman Rodney Fox with 14 tackles. Also shining for the Pioneers defensively was Frank Myers, with three quarterback sacks.

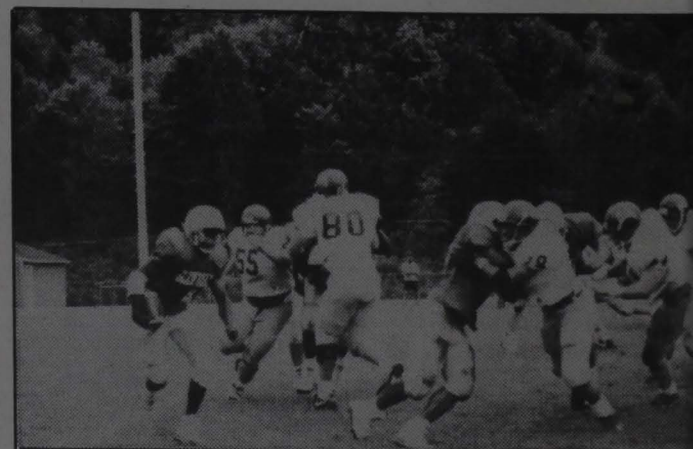

Glenville State outgained Shepherd in total offense, 435 to 304, but was intercepted three times and was penalized seven times for 57 yards.

The Pioneers have a lot to be proud of. It showed a lot of character to come back from your mistakes and challenge to the very end of the game. The team showed a lot of bright spots and continues to improve and play competitive football.

Glenville's next opponent will be Sept. 22 against Cumberland College of Kentucky. Their next home game will be October 13 against Fairmont State.

Organizational Update

Forestry Club News

The forestry club met September 4, 1990 for a picnic. There were 51 people in attendance. Officers were voted on and are as follows:

President - Cindy Brake
Vice-President - Randy Louk
Treasurer - Jeff Hosaflook
Secretary - Leslie Jennings

The forestry club will sell firewood again this year. Also Christmas trees will be sold at Christmastime. Plans are being made for a white-water trip and archery tournament.

PBL

The second meeting of the Phi Beta Lambda chapter of Glenville State College occurred on September 11 at 12:45. Attendance was taken and the PBL creed was recited. The treasurer's report was given with a current balance of $65.92.

The homecoming candidates chosen by the members present were:

Cheryl Amos - queen
Tonja Clark - senior
Leslie Farley - senior
Debbie Russell - sophomore
Dotty Starcher - freshman

There was no junior princess nominated. The Constitution of PBL was passed out and several points were emphasized to the new members. The possibility of a float and/or a banner for Homecoming was discussed. It was brought up that the members should look for new sites for trash cans around campus for Student Congress. The sites will be determined at the next meeting.

The next PBL meeting will be on September 25 at 12:45 in room 100 of the Administration Building. All business majors are welcome.

American Chemical Society

The Student Affiliates of the American Chemical Society met on Thursday, September 6, 1990, in room 400 SH.

We reviewed the Chapter attendance and activities of the 1989-90 academic year. We discussed possible trips for the upcoming year and decided that the organization should make a banner for the GSC Homecoming in October.

We are planning our annual fall luncheon to be held in the Science Hall later this month. All chemistry majors or related disciplines are invited to attend.

Membership is open to all chemistry majors or related disciplines.

Sigma Sigma Sigma

Tri-Sigma Sorority would like to congratulate Cathy Harbert on receiving the Outstanding Student award. We're proud of you, Cathy! Tri-Sigs would also like to encourage any girls interested in joining to attend Formal Rush. If you cannot attend Formal Rush, please watch for posters later on announcing our rush parties. If you are not sure whether or not you would enjoy sorority life, come to the parties anyway. The purpose of our rush parties is for you to get to know what a sorority is like. All girls are welcome!

Scholarships Available In Marketing Competition

September 5, 1990, Englewood, NJ - Undergraduates at the nation's top colleges and universities will vie for a $1,250 first prize scholarship and a $500 second prize scholarship being offered by the Point-of-purchase Advertising Institute (POPAI) for its annual Student Marketing Competition.

POPAI'S 1990 Student Marketing Competition offers students the challenge of integrating point-of-purchase (P-O-P) materials into a marketing program for a hypothetical consumer product with "real life" marketing objectives and constraints.

In announcing the competition, John M. Kawula, President of POPAI, said, "This program is designed to expose students to the world of marketing and the vital role that point-of-purchase advertising plays in the total marketing mix. Through this competition, we offer tomorrow's leaders a chance to exercise their marketing talents and investigate P-O-P as a stimulating career objective while they're still in the classroom."

Each entry will be judged on a number of criteria, including meeting the stated marketing objective within given budget parameters, making significant use of in-store display activity and demonstrating originality and creativity.

Marketing and point-of-purchase industry professionals will serve as judges for the competition.

Last year, several top schools, including University of Wisconsin, Loyola Marymount, Adams State College, University of North Dakota and Georgia University, incorporated POPAI'S annual Student Marketing Competition into their course material.

The deadline for entering the competition is December 14, 1990.

One entry will be selected as Student Marketing Program-of-the-year and will be announced at POPAI's Annual P-O-P Conference to be held March 3-5, 1991, at the Marriott Harbor Beach Hotel, Fort Lauderdale, Florida. All entrants will be notified of the winners.

Full-time undergraduates sophomores, juniors and seniors attending accredited colleges and universities in the United States are eligible. For further information, contact: POPAI, 66 North Van Brunt Street, Englewood, NJ 07631, (201) 894-8899.

POPAI is the only nonprofit trade association exclusively committed to serving the interests of advertisers, retailers and producers/designers involved in point-of-purchase advertising. Founded in 1936, the association helps members make point-of-purchase advertising dollars work effectively; serves as a source of timely and reliable information; provides continuing education; keeps members abreast of public policy issues; promotes the P-O-P industry through intense public relations campaigns and represents its members at national and international conferences.
