Vandals Strike RFK Library

by Sheryl Short

Recent acts of vandalism and theft of material in the Robert F. Kidd Library have caused much concern to library officials. Two related articles were stolen from bound magazines and a section of statistics was cut out of a book with a razor blade. But the concern over these totally senseless acts doesn't just come from the inconvenience they cause the library personnel, but also from the inconvenience they create for the students.

According to Richard Tubesing, Library Director, "Over 50,000 photocopies of our materials are made each year. If even a few people cut out the information they need instead of photocopying it, you will soon have a useless library at your disposal." Think about what this means. Without useful materials, students would have to travel to Parkersburg, Fairmont, or even Morgantown to find the quality of materials available to them at GSC. Also, the quality of their research papers or other work involving periodical research will decrease because of lack of current information.

This also effects the students financially. Replacing stolen or defaced materials can be quite costly. For example, replacing the book with the statistics cut out would cost $22.50, but it is not available anymore-it simply cannot be replaced. You may not realize it, but all students absorb these costs every time there is a tuition or fee increase.

The person or persons who committed these offenses probably think this is no big deal. Well, the Library/Media Center Committee definitely thinks differently and that is why they have decided that any person caught deliberately defacing or stealing library material will be fined $100.00. Hopefully this decision will deter any further vandalism of this kind.

In the meantime, what can be done to stop this? Mr. Tubesing feels that the students need to take on the responsibility of seeing that no other student gets away with this. If you see a person committing any type of defacement or theft, demand that he or she stop or turn the person in to the library official before the person leaves. After all, he or she is vandalizing your materials and decreasing your chances of doing quality work.

GSC Alumni Display Talent

The Glenville State College Alumni Art Show will be held in the Art & Music Building from October 22 through November 30. The show will be open from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. daily and one hour before scheduled performances.

One of the artists participating is Bill Pitzer. Pitzer, a native of Charleston, started his professional career at age 13 doing free-lance cartoons for a coaching magazine. Since that time he has graduated from GSC, started a business, and developed a distinguished professional background. Pitzer's work has been distributed across the United States, and Europe, and has received numerous regional and national awards.

Another distinguished artist participating in the GSC show is Linda J. Chapman Turner. Turner works primarily in watercolor and pen and ink. Her paintings and drawings reflect her interests in people, history and nature. She has received many awards for her work, which can be found in private and corporate collections throughout the United States.

In 1989, Turner was commissioned to develop a painting of the Philippi Bridge as it appeared in 1861. After 10 months of on-location research, drawing and painting, a limited edition reproduction was produced.

Craig Drennen, a 1988 graduate of GSC and a Gilmer County native, is exhibiting mixed media in the 1990 show. Drennen is currently completing requirements for an M.F.A. in painting and an M.A. in art history at Ohio University.

Also exhibiting is W.D. Hopen. Upon graduation from GSC in 1985, Hopen began a career in sculpture. His works include eight major bronze figurative pieces in Louisiana, Ohio, and West Virginia, including two bronze memorial works on the West Virginia Capital grounds. Other commissioned works include carved figures in wood and stone for churches and private collectors.

Also taking part in the show is Joyce Moneypenny Lough. Lough, a 1964 graduate of GSC, is a substitute teacher in the Lewis County school system, and the mother of four children.

A 1967 GSC graduate and a resident of Grantsville, Larry McCallister, is submitting pen and ink drawings of older family members.

The GSC Alumni Art Show is free and open to the public.

GSC Relives 16th Century

Glenville State College's Music Department will celebrate the holiday season by presenting a Madrigal Dinner on December 8-10 at 6:30 p.m. in the Ballroom of the Heflin Student Center.

What is a Madrigal Dinner? Imagine a candlelit 16th century banquet hall, draped with colorful heraldic banners and filled with the aroma of pine boughs. An English court jester beckons the diners to join the festivities; trumpet fanfares announce the courses of the royal Christmas Feast. The music of the court singers fills the hall; wandering minstrels entertain at the diner's tables.

The historic period is the late 16th Century Renaissance of Queen Elizabeth I's England. There will be nearly authentic recreation of costumes, food, music and other entertainments. There will be actors playing leading characters, and musical groups and instruments are involved.

Tickets for this lively night of food and entertainment will go on sale November 26. The public is invited.

Florida Everglades In Danger: Acres of Wildlife Die Daily

by Arson Workman

FACT-The Florida Everglades are among the most diverse wildlife areas on earth.

FACT-Florida is one of the fastest growing areas in the country with 1000 new residents arriving daily. FACT-Over 60% of the original four million acres of the Everglades have been destroyed.

The name Everglades comes from the American Indian word for grassy waters. These grassy waters of the Everglades are under serious threat and are in danger of being destroyed.

The Everglades are home to an extremely diverse group of animals. Alligators, Florida panthers, manatees, and numerous species of birds live within the Everglades' ecosystem. This area, according to National Geographic, houses roughly 1/3 of the animal species on the North American Continent.

Population poses the largest threat to the area. Not only are the Everglades being drained for housing developments, but also to provide water for the nearly 365,000 new residents moving in yearly.

Another serious threat comes from the agriculture of Southern Florida. Pesticides used by the farmers seep into the water supply and pollute the entire Everglade system. The pollution, according to National Geographic, carries anywhere from 10 to 20 times the normal amount of phosphorus and nitrogen. So much that the waters are being choked because of a lack of oxygen, and as many as four acres of wildlife are dying daily.

What will happen to the Everglades? If something is not done soon there will be no Everglades left; they will be destroyed by the end of this century. Along with the loss of one of the most ecologically diverse areas in North America and the extinction of thousands of animals, blind progress, ironically, is destroying what all the development of South Florida depends on- clean water.

There is nothing I can do to help save the Everglades, right? Wrong! The Everglades became a National Park in 1947 and this means responsibility for protecting it is in our hands. Since it is a National Park, the Everglades belong to all of us. Congressmen have the ability to legislate laws designed to protect the Everglades from destruction. Write your Congressional representatives and voice your opinion on how and why the Everglades should be saved.

Pickens Hall Judicial Board governs student conduct.

Judicial Boards: Are They Effective and Fair?

by Kristi Roguch

Conduct of GSC dormitory residents is controlled by a set of rules that are stated in the Student Handbook distributed to all incoming freshmen. Without enforcement, rules are useless. To insure the conduct of students living on campus is satisfactory, Glenville State College has instituted a Judicial Board system of peer judgment, known as J-Board. Louis Bennett Hall and Pickens Hall both have separate J-Boards to deal with problems that arise at each facility.

The J-Board consists of peer-elected students who meet the requirements, such as grade point average, length of enrollment, etc. These students are responsible for handling all who violate the residence hall rules.

The alleged person who appears before J-Board has been notified ("written-up") by a form in the mail. House directors, resident assistants, office workers, and night guards are responsible for reporting offenders to the Board. The offender will learn three things from this form: the nature of the incident, the specific rule or rules violated, and the time and place of the next J-Board Meeting.

Proceedings of the J-Board are comparable to that of a trial. However, the J-Board fails to separate the judge and jury. The Board will decide if the person is guilty of the violation and, if so, will administer punishment. The person may accept punishment or he may choose to appear before the J-Board. If so, he will tell his side of the story and the Board will read the reporting official's written account of the incident. With the exception of the J-Board and the offender, no other students will

by Carmen Wager

Major criticism has focused on the effectiveness of educators in the classrooms. After the Nation At Risk report of 1983 indicated a dramatic decline in the quality of education, the West Virginia Department of Education (WVDE) implemented Policy 5100, which mandated both the Pre-Professional Skills Test (PPST) and the Content Specialization Test (CST) to insure the quality of teachers.

In order to be certified by the WVDE, students at some colleges around the state must pass the PPST sometime before graduation. However, at Glenville State College, the PPST must be passed before a student is accepted into the teacher education program. According to Dr. Steve Creasey, Dean of Teacher of Education, the purpose of the PPST is "to validate if teacher candidates have the basic skills essential for teaching." Reading, math, and writing skills that students should have acquired at the high school level are measured by this exam.

Twenty to 25 percent of

WV students are unsuccessful on their first PPST attempts. GSC is experiencing the same rate of success. Problem areas for students are the reading and math components. To accommodate students who are ill-prepared for the exam, the College will offer preparatory courses beginning this spring. GSC is attempting to make up for those deficiencies students may bring with them when they enroll in college.

The content specialization test is another exam a teacher education student must obtain a passing score on before he is permitted to student teach. To eliminate the problem of cultural bias, the WVDE employed ETS (the Educational Testing System) to develop a series of tests specifically for WV students. A specific test was prepared for each subject area to insure students know the material in their field of study. One aspect of the exam which has received much criticism is the fact that students who minor in a certain area must pass the same exam as students who major in that area. For example, a student with a minor in social studies, who has completed only 30 hours of social studies classes, is responsible for passing the same exam as a social studies major, who has completed 54 hours of social studies courses.

Dr. Creasey said this problem has been discussed and many are "very frustrated with that particular element of the test." The reason for this problem can be summed up in one word - cost. The WVDE feels it would be too costly to design separate tests for each content level, although a 5-8 mat exam is given.

Cost may be a problem for the WVDE to endure, but the fees charged to take the PPST and the CST pose problems for students as well. After paying tuition and living costs, the education student must also render $45 for the PPST and approximately $10 for each content test. These astronomical costs would, perhaps, be understandable if the monies were

P.S.: Please Write

Even though you may or may not support President Bush's decision to send troops to the Persian Gulf, the fact remains that these troops are there for an indefinite period of time.

It may be hard for someone who has never been in or known someone in the military to fully understand the depth of the loneliness and homesickness these men and women feel. As a wife of a former Marine, I know what it's like to be separated for military reasons.

My husband had to participate in a deployment on board a Naval ship for six long months. Sometimes I felt as though my heart was splitting right down the middle and all I could do to ease the pain was sit and cry. But at least I had my family to turn to for support when I needed it. My husband had a few close friends to lean on, but none of them could compare to his family.

My separation from my husband was extremely difficult, but I had one advantage that the service people involved in Operation Desert Shield do not have. I knew exactly when my husband was coming home; no one knows when this will end.

So, as someone who has experienced a military separation and has received so many letters ending with "please write soon," I am urging you to please write the members of the U.S Armed Forces involved in Operation Desert Shield. One letter could mean the world to a lonely soldier.

A Mid-East Soldier's Story

The world watches in anticipation as troops in the Mid-East prepare for a confrontation with Kuwait. Reporters from around the globe struggle to capture the spirit of the situation, but none can compare to the actual words of someone who is there. This letter, written by a PFC of the 82nd Airborne, to his high school alma mater, personalizes the Persian Gulf Crisis. The sterile, unbiased words of the media are replaced by the thoughts and emotions of a soldier who waits for combat.

Thursday 2 Sept 90

Dearest Concerned,

Mail here has been quite scarce. When I received a card from those I knew and admired so in what seems like only yesterday, I was tickled to death. We had just returned from an exercise along the Iraqi border, and we were weary from the heat and lack of sleep. Needless to say, your card was a great inspirational lift.

My arrival here on the 8th of August was with three hundred other paratroopers who were the first non-Arabian forces to ever set foot on Saudi soil. This is my second time at making history in less than a year. This fact, coupled with the knowledge that our meager force was the only thing that stood between Hussein's army and Mecca, was quite an exhilaration. For that short period of time, our fates lingered in a madman's palm.

The situation here has settled some, and tensions have eased. We are preparing to move on Sunday. We are being moved there to be held in reserve. Hopefully, this will be a departure station for the return home.

Unless something drastic happens, rotation back to Fort Bragg is inevitable. One of the three brigades may stay and rotate every six months. Hopefully, I'll be back for Christmas. I would love to see a snow-covered forest right now!

If there is anything anyone would like to know about here, I would be more than happy to reply to any questions. Again I thank you much for your patient teachings and for caring when I needed it.

Sincerely,
A Mid-East Soldier

"Peaks of Excellence" May Help Students' Educations

By Paul Biser

States throughout the nation have become concerned with the quality and accountability of today's educational programs. Dr. Paul Marion, Chancellor of the State College System of West Virginia, is also concerned. He has introduced a 19-point plan to increase the quality of West Virginia's state schools.

Part four of the plan, "Peaks of Excellence," calls for the designation of three outstanding degree programs or special areas at each state college in 1990-91. These programs will receive additional private, federal and state funds. Each college president will recommend five programs, but the Board will select three from the five.

"Peaks of Excellence" sounds like a workable plan. Giving a monetary incentive to individual departments instead of to the college will give an initiative to those people who work directly with the students. Students also need to be made aware of the incentive program because they reap the benefits. Students should help the president decide which five programs he will recommend to the Board. In return for the students' input, the money should be used to buy materials that will enhance students' educations.

Glenville State Football: The Real Success Story

by Sheryl Short

If someone asked if the GSC football team is having a winning season, most people would say no. But what do we take into consideration before answering this question? Usually, how many games have been won compared to how many have been lost comes into the mind of the average person. This type of narrow-minded thinking tends to blind us from the real truth. And that truth is that the Pioneer football team and the group who coaches them are anything but losers.

Take a moment to think about all the changes that have been made within the football program. The players have had to adjust to a completely different coaching staff than last season. As for the coaches, working with a new group of football players, whether the players are GSC veterans or not, compares to working with an all freshman team. Every player has to learn the new plays, practice procedures, and disciplinary methods that the new coaches have brought with them. These would be difficult obstacles for any team and its coaches to overcome and the Pioneers have met them head on and emerged victorious.

Another victory for the team is apparent in the changes in the attitudes of the players. Not only have they developed a more positive attitude toward football, but towards academics and the school, also. The freshman members attend a study hall every night along with any upperclassman who is experiencing trouble in his courses. Brian "Bubba" Hill, student assistant coach, says he has seen more players wearing their Glenville State jackets than he's ever seen in the past. Hill also says that the new motto is "The Pride is Back."

Of course, no team can be victorious without its coaches. The Glenville team has an outstanding group of coaches. Again, the standards by which we judge the success of the coaching staff should not be limited to how many victories they have coached. After speaking with the coaches, I can confidently state that these men care about more than just football. Academics are stressed at all times. Coach Rodriguez does more than just recruit football players; he recruits young men with the ambition to work hard and graduate. These young men will do more in their lives than just play football and he wants to be sure they obtain the skills and knowledge necessary to be successful, productive adults.

The success story would not be complete without giving credit to the students who continually show support and offer encouragement to the team. This includes going to the games, patting someone on the back for a job well done, or being a student tutor. Being supportive gives the team more confidence to play well.

The next time someone asks about the GSC football team, remember to stop and think about all the victories they have scored off the field. Then, you can only call them winners.

1990 Computer Programming Contest Winners Selected

tion in National Computer Learning Month.

to Jayson McIntyre of Clarksburg. Second prize was awarded to David Keoshner from Morgantown and third prize was awarded to James Childers, a native of Nicholas County. Second and third place prizes consisted of a $200 scholarship if they attend GSC. A two-part test determined the winners; the students competed in both a written test and a hands-on exam at the computer.

Twelve high schools from GSC and its community college service area participated in the contest. The service area covers about 350 square miles. Each school was permitted to send one student to compete.

Before the awards ceremony the high school students were treated to a luncheon and were given a tour of the campus.

Concord Defeats Glenville

Glenville State fell to 1-5-1 overall and 1-3 in the West Virginia Conference, Saturday, as they lost their third consecutive game. The homestanding Concord Mountain Lions 5-2 and 5-1 pounded out 419 yards on the ground to post a 53-13 victory over the visiting Pioneers.

The tenth ranked Mountain Lions won the West Virginia Conference with their fifth conference victory against just one defeat.

With 2:41 remaining in the first half, Concord led just 14-10, but with 1:00 to go, Brian Hamm scored a touchdown on a 3-yd run to put Concord up 21-10 at the half.

The Pioneers' only touchdown came in the second quarter on an 8-yd pass from Mike Kellar to Jerry Schill. The force of this game was once again the Pioneers' inability to defend against the run. Concord's Brian Hamm totaled 159 yards on 22 carries, scoring on touchdown runs of 27, 3, and 29 yards. Also rushing for over 100 yards for Concord College was Chris Hairston. Hairston rushed for 104 yards on just 5 carries, scoring on touchdown runs of 1, 77, and 5 yards.

Offensively for the Pioneers, Kellar was 23 of 53 for 247 yards and 1 touchdown. Kevin Blanding caught 7 passes for 82 yards, while Terrance McGee caught 7 receptions for 81 yards respectively.

Defensively, the leading Pioneer tackler was Linton Turner. Turner had 11 solo and 2 assisted tackles while intercepting a Concord pass.

Total yards for the Pioneers was 27 rushes for 65 yards and 62 passes for 274 yards. Concord had 510 yards of total offense, 419 rushing and 91 passing.

The Pioneers next play on Saturday, October 27 against WV Tech. The contest will be the Pioneers' 1990 homecoming game.

Hart's Headlines

Over the weekend, the 1990 baseball season came to an end. It was the end to a season that had everyone thinking they were baseball experts. Everyone was convinced that the Oakland Athletics would repeat as the World Champions of baseball. Just one week after the series began, the baseball world is in a frenzy.

When the 1990 World Series began, no one expected the Cincinnati Reds to do more than look at the championship rings; today they are wearing them. Who could have expected Billy Hatcher to get hot enough to better Babe Ruth's efforts for a World Series batting average? Who could have expected Jose Rijo to only give up one run in two series victories while earning MVP?

No one I spoke with before the series began even gave Cincinnati a prayer. Even Red's fans had little hope. Cincinnati is a tribute to their sport, proving that anything is possible with a dream. No one can really tell over such a short series if Cincinnati really is better than Oakland, but one thing holds true - the Reds wanted the title more.

Baseball remains today as America's sport, and the Cincinnati Reds proved that a lot of heart can go a long way. That is the philosophy this great country was built from.

VOLLEYBALL UPDATE

The 1990 Lady Pioneer Volleyball team, entering into their final week of regular season play, stands at 7-17 overall and 4-10 in conference play. The squad, which has home matches this week with Charleston, Concord, and WV Tech, has an opportunity with three victories to better the school record of nine wins in a season.

Math and Science Division

by Sheryl Short

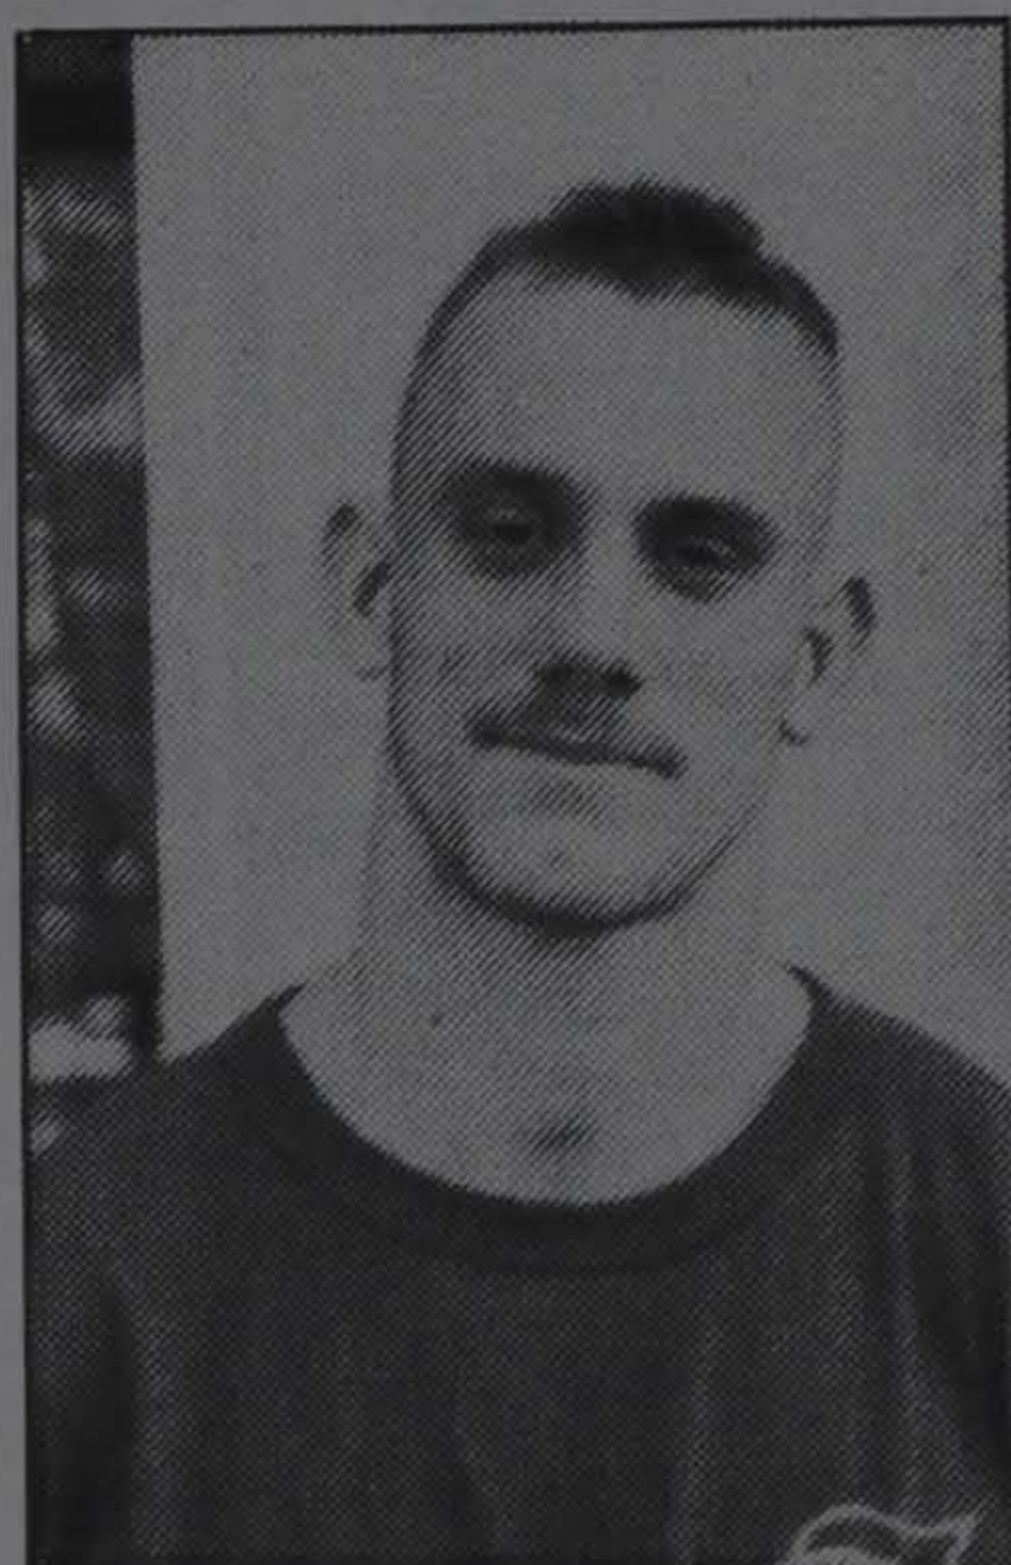

Mention the Math and Science Division to most students and watch them cringe. Both fields of study can be difficult and demanding, but with hard work and diligence, they can be mastered.

Students at GSC can obtain a bachelor of arts degree in math or science education or a bachelor of science in biology or chemistry. They can also work toward degrees in nursing, medicine, or pharmacy by utilizing pre-professional courses in the different fields.

Student Standout: Jerry Schill

To many people, football season is synonymous with autumn. One student who can appreciate the spirit of the season is this week's

by Kate Jennings

Student Standout-Jerry Schill. Schill knows a lot about football; he is a starting wide receiver for the Pioneer Football Squad.

Not only does he dedicate time to the football team, but he devotes time to his studies as well; his GPA is 2.8. Schill is a junior majoring in business.

His hobbies include drag racing, intramurals, and, of course, football. When he isn't enjoying his hobbies, playing football, or going to class, Schill is active in the Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity where he is Rush Coordinator. He also works in the LBH office and helps with the GCHS football squad.

Schill hails from Brookside High School in Sheffield Lake, OH. He chose GSC because "it is small, friendly campus with great educational facilities and a great staff and football program."

Schill is presently engaged and will be married next summer to Mindi Pickens, also a GSC student.

hear the proceedings. After this stage, the student is dismissed. The J-Board will decide if punishment is needed and, if so, what that punishment shall be. Guilt and punishment are voted on by the J-Board members. The offender is recalled to the room and the punishment is rendered. Punishment varies with the nature of the offense, and ranges from a warning, to work detail, to being campused. After two warnings, if an offender fails to acknowledge or obey the decision of the J-Board, the Committee of Student Life and Welfare will be notified and they will deal with the case.

Students living in the dorms have mixed feelings concerning the J-Board system. Some feel students do not have the authority to pass judgment over their peers. These residents feel house directors should decide what should be done in each case. Others feel the system needs to have a policy outlining the punishment for each offense at each level. At this time, punishment is based on what J-Boards of the past and present have done in similar cases. Residents of both facilities feel this lack of a set policy allows individual differences and prejudices to interfere with the distribution of punishment. Another complaint students have are the elections concerning the J-Board members. They feel the elections are conducted in an unorganized manner.

There are advantages to the J-Board system. J-Board members and other students feel the system is effective and minimizes the number of residence hall violations. Some like the idea of a peer judgment as opposed to a faculty or administrative one. One student commented, "...we are all adults here...the decisions of the J-Board should be viewed and respected as such..."

various groups G.E.S. will encourage the campus of GSC and the surrounding community to do their parts to help protect the environment.

The main goal of G.E.S. is to initiate a recycling program on campus. Many college campuses around the state, as well as the country, are implementing recycling programs and GSC hopes to join in. The recycling program will hopefully begin in the coming weeks. If all students and faculty do their parts, the plan can be successful.

For the Homecoming weekend, G.E.S. is sponsoring a "cram-it" contest. How many of your friends can fit into a compact car? Well, why don't you try it and find out? If your group can get more in than any other, you win free pizzas. The "cram-it" car will be located at the football field during the game Saturday, so come on and see how many people you can cram into the car.

Some long-term goals for G.E.S. include joining in the effort to preserve the world's rain forests, and wildlife. If you would like to help make a difference and get involved with G.E.S., come to a meeting on Tuesday, October 23 at 4:00 p.m. in Clark Hall, room 202.

College System Chancellor, Paul Marion, introduced a plan for quality and accountability, which was adopted by the West Virginia State College Board of Directors. Dr. Marion calls for the linkage of high school curriculum and programs to college-level performance. By reporting to high schools on the college progress of their graduates, Marion hopes to show secondary-level schools the strengths and weaknesses of students coming from their individual school systems.

Both WVDE and Glenville State College are doing their parts to assure that only qualified teachers go into the classroom. In our fast-paced society, education is the core of all future advancements. To insure we produce students who can fulfill their roles in society, we must first educate good teachers.
