Talented Cast Play Romantic

Approximately 70 people attended the opening night of the Glenville State College theatre production of Isn't it Romantic by Wendy Wasserstein.

Solid performances by the leads, Lori Crouter and Jennifer Singletary, were complimented by an equally impressive supportive cast.

Crouter, who played Janie Blumberg, a confused, young, single woman, belloved her lines at an even tempo.

Singletary's facial expressions sparked added emotions and humor to her lines.

The supporting roles stimulated the play's action resulting in a quick pace and timely laughter.

GSC theatre veteran, Kelly Davis Osborne, poured her experience on the stage. Osborne portrayed Tasha Blumberg, an independent, dancing mother.

Donald Pepe, who played opposite Osborne, gave an excellent interpretation of a stereotypical Jewish father.

The leading ladies' men, played by Tim White and Ed Henline, worked well with their opposites, adding a male point of view to romance.

A brief appearance by Russian immigrant Vladimir, played by Gilmer County High School senior Grayson Samples, brought a touch of ethnic diversity to the stage. Even though Samples only appeared in two scenes, his performance left a pleasant impression.

Tracy Samples played the role of an executive mother trying to understand her life and her daughters'.

The set was a little shaky and there were some problems with the taped audio portion of the production. The audience simply could not understand the taped messages from the telephone answering machine.

But, technicalities aside, Isn't it Romantic provided an interesting evening of GSC theatre.

James Tannenbaum

Tannenbaum To Perform At Glenville State College

James Tannenbaum, concert pianist and renowned teacher will perform a recital at Glenville State College on April 14 at 3 p.m. in the Art and Music Building Auditorium.

Tannenbaum, a member of the distinguished Cleveland Institute of Music Conservatory Piano faculty is also the Pianist in Residence at the Willoughby School of Fine Arts. Tannenbaum has won numerous honors and awards including the prestigious Beryl Rubinstein Memorial Scholarship for study at the Cleveland Institute of Music.

Tannenbaum's advanced masters and doctoral piano studies were with Victor Babin and Vitva Vronsky. He has also studied with Marriane Mastics, Pierre Luboschutz, Leonard Schure, Theodore Lettvin, and Mildred Kotora Snyder.

For two consecutive years, Tannenbaum was one of the three pianist selected to participate in the chamber music program at the Blossom Festival School. Subsequently, he has returned to the Blossom Music Center as guest soloist. He is a frequent performer in the Faculty Artist Series at The Cleveland Institute of Music.

The April 14 recital at GSC will include the music of Domenico Scarlatti, Johannes Brahms, George Gershwin, and Serge Rachmaninoff.

The performance is free and open to the public.

GSC Retirees Reflect on Years of Service

Geraldine Taylor and Alice Murphy have a lot in common. Besides being first cousins, they're both native Gilmer Countians, and, come Thursday, March 28, they will both be retiring. After 27 years of serving meals in the Glenville State College Cafeteria, both say they are eagerly looking forward to retirement.

Geraldine and Alice said they've seen a lot of changes during their time at GSC. One significant change has been in the dress code, both in the workers' attire and the students' dress. The workers were first required to wear dresses, then white uniforms, and then pant suits. As for the students, Geraldine said they came dressed for evening meals when she first started work. Alice commented that, "They come dressed in just anything now. Back in the forties, they couldn't come to school with overalls, now they come with holes in them, not even patched!"

Geraldine said she remembered one graduation a student was so excited he threw his tray out the window. Over the years they listened to a lot of complaints about the food, but remembered some students who complimented them on the meals. Actually the food is cooked downstairs in the kitchen and sent up to the cafeteria on the elevator, or dumb waiter.

The cafeteria serves an average of 300 students now, but the ladies said that at one time, back in the seventies, two cafeterias were in operation, serving between 800 and 1000 students. At one time four bakers were busy in the kitchen baking their goodies. Alice jokes that all the workers got fat, so the bakers were fired.

When asked what they planned to do with all their free time, Geraldine said, "I'll be doing a lot of the things I never had time for before, like flower gardening." And Alice responded, "I have a family history book I have to finish that my brother started in 1982. He died in 1985 and didn't get it completed. The fellow who put it together left out three families, so I have to go back and put that in. She started to smile and added, "And then I'm going to look outside of Gilmer County and see if there's another world."

Four Degree Programs Chosen As GSC's 'Peaks of Excellence'

Four degree programs at each institution in the State College System have been recommended by Chancellor Paul Marion for designation as "peaks of excellence" by the State College Board at its meeting in Charleston on March 11, 1991. According to Marion, "the board committed in its 19-point Plan for Quality and Accountability to identify programs that are especially outstanding or unique as 'peaks of excellence.' Special efforts will be made at the campus level and at the State level to obtain additional funds from private, federal, and state sources to provide further enhancement of these degree programs."

Five programs from each institution were nominated by the President based upon input from faculty members and academic administrators at that campus. According to Dr. Marion, "the list proposed for consideration by the Board includes a diversity of programs that represent excellence."

The programs chosen for special emphasis at Glenville State College are Business Administration, Forest Technology, Elementary/Early Childhood Education, and Secondary Education - Certification in Music Education.

Business Administration is the College's fastest growing program. According to Ernest Smith, Chairman of the Business Division, the success of the program, which began in 1960, can be attributed to the dedication of the faculty who teach in the program. "The faculty are academicians as well as professionals, and they bring that relevance into the classroom," said Smith.

Students in the program graduate with a bachelor of science degree with a major in marketing, management, accounting, or computer science.

The Forest Technology program at Glenville State College is the only program of its kind in the State. The program, accredited by the Society of American Foresters, is nationally recognized as one of the finest programs available. The curriculum, which includes work in an experimental forest, is highly practical. The forest, 733 acres of donated land, is used for a variety of activities including timber inventory, silviculture, wildlife, and harvesting operations. The lab situation is designed to emphasize the practical aspects of forestry and reinforce the theoretical aspects.

The Elementary/Early Childhood Education area of specialization derives its strength from the ability to bring individuals from other disciplines to the process of education, as methods are taught by actual content specialist. The program also offers an on-campus laboratory school which allows students to observe and interact with pre-school children. According to Steven Creasey, Dean of Teacher Education, "The faculty represent a wealth of public school experience as well as academic preparation. And so for various specializations we have people who can bring not only the research and scholarly approach, but also the practical experience of the classroom."

The success of the Secondary Education program with a certification in Music Education is largely due to an excellent faculty, according to Gary Gillespie, Chairman of Fine Arts at GSC. "we didn't have good teachers the students would not stay. And in turn we would not have the facilities that we enjoy. Through recruiting efforts we have been somewhat selective; which means that we have some excellent musicians as part of the student body. And I would not hesitate to put any of our ensembles - big or small - up against any of the other in the State. In addition I am extremely pleased in view of the fact that we are the only four-year college in the State to declare music education as a 'peak of excellence,'" said Gillespie.

Dr. William K. Simmons, president of GSC, offered that "in terms of the 'peaks of excellence,' the selection is never easy and the list that we've ended up with does not in any way preclude the fact that we have other programs of excellence. I am pleased however, with the fact that we have a combination of Elementary/Early Childhood Education and Secondary Education with certification in Music Education. Among the four-year institutions, Glenville is the only one to identify these programs. With the increased awareness of problems associated with a poor economy and the need for specialized programs for children who come from culturally and economically deprived backgrounds, it is likely that a tremendous amount of emphasis will be placed on early education."

The Malemen

Malemen to Perform During Spring Ball

by Angie Kemper

The Malemen, an R&B Pop band from Chattanooga, Tennessee, will be providing exciting music for the Spring Ball.

The band began with drummer Darrell Kelly and bassist Greg Jones in groups such as Martin Dewitt and the M.D's, Soul Express, and 9th Movement. In 1976 the group became Star Child when lead vocalist Gerald Massengill, who had formerly been in the band Black and White, joined the two. The final group, The Malemen, evolved in 1979 when guitarist Michael Hale and keyboardist Dennis Montford were added to the original three.

Aside from his experience in these groups, Jones has provided backup bass for Mary Wells and Chubby Checker, and studied music at Cleveland State College and The University of Chattanooga. Montford also studied music at The University of Chattanooga. The group has released their debut album, Express Male, on Mercury/Polygram records.

The Spring Ball will be held in the Ballroom of the Heflin Student Center on Saturday, April 20 from 9 p.m. to 12 a.m.

Athletes Hit With Drug Issue

by Greg Alfred

Random drug testing of collegiate athletes has become an ever increasing epidemic in today's world. All organizations, including the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA), team physicians and trainers and college boards should be prohibited from mandating drug testing of collegiate athletes because the tests are discriminating, illegal and very inaccurate.

Due to the death of Len Bias (Bias was an All-American at Maryland when he died from an overdose of cocaine) and the belief that steroid usage is on the rise, the NCAA has been trying to come up with a solution to the increase in drug usage among athletes. The most common technique is random drug testing. The NCAA contends that these tests are for the welfare of the athletes, while actually the NCAA is trying to protect its public image. The NCAA may mean well, but it is harming the reputation of too many athletes.

One bad point for random drug testing is that it discriminates in two different ways: many collegiate athletes are being required to take random drug tests while public officials and service personnel are not. While an athlete will only harm himself by using drugs, there is no way even to estimate the amount of people that can be harmed by doctors, and dentists high on drugs. Few people would like for a doctor who is to perform open heart surgery on them to be smoking marijuana an hour or two before the surgery begins.

Random drug testing is discrimination in itself. Since this drug test is random, not every college athlete is tested. The NCAA controls who will be tested, and that is where these tests become more of a "political issue" instead of a one-hundred percent full-proof testing system.

In the controversial book Personal Fouls it is said that Charles Shackleford, the center for NC State, didn't want to win the opening game of the tournaments because if they did win they would have to have a drug test. Shackleford did not want this because he would've tested positive. Ironically, NC State did lose their opening game.

These random drug tests are also an invasion of privacy. The Fourth Amendment of the United States Constitution states that "The right of the people to be secure...against unreasonable searches and seizure...and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause..." Mandating someone to give up their bodily fluids (such as in urinalysis) and then running tests on these fluids is clearly an illegal search and seizure.

Another reason that can be offered to abolish random testing is that the tests are very inaccurate. If a person is tested positive for illegal drug usage when the hardest drug he or she has ever had in his or her life is aspirin, then there will be some problem. A person's future, career and individual reputation can be ruined.

I do not agree with the NCAA's drug testing system. Many people feel that if you are against drug testing, you must be for drugs. This is not true in my case; I am just against the drug testing system.

GSC Support Group Provides Comfort to Students

by Sheryl Short

I don't think most students on campus are aware that, during this semester, a support group was formed to aid students with friends or relatives serving in Operation Desert Storm. This group consisted of four members and a counselor. Although the group was very small in number, it served a very important purpose.

At the beginning of each meeting, each member shared any news she had received since the last meeting. Sometimes-- most of the time-- no one had heard anything. But when a letter had been received during the week, even when it was a month old by the time it reached the states, everyone in the group enjoyed the news. One person's letter gave hope to the rest of the group.

Probably the most important function of the group was that it gave everyone involved a chance to share her feelings. Most of the time these feelings were fear, uncertainty, and anger. But knowing that someone else shared the same angers and had the same fears was a comfort in itself.

When the fighting finally stopped, the group's purpose changed. Then, three members of the group had to wait for a letter or phone call from their loved ones telling the members that they were coming home. The news didn't come quickly for any member of the group, but it did finally come. One member's fiance is home, another's brother is coming home this week, and the other's brother called to let his family know he was out of harm's way, at least temporarily.

Although the group was small in number, it served a huge purpose in helping at least four people on campus deal with their feelings concerning Operation Desert Storm. I hope, in the future, if the need arises this type of group support can again be a part of campus life at Glenville State College.

Student Standout: Steve Barr

Steve Barr, a sophomore majoring in Land Surveying, is this week's student standout. Steve is from the Buckhannon area and graduated from Buckhannon-Upshur High School.

Steve has been on the Glenville State College Dean's List every semester and has a 3.9 overall GPA. He has also received the Land Surveying Scholarship and will receive the Alumni Foundation Land Surveying Award this year.

While in the Land Surveying program, Steve was a member and treasurer of Glenville State College's chapter of the West Virginia Association of Land Surveying. Last summer he worked for Davis Land Surveying in Weston.

Upon graduation, Steve would like to pursue a career in land surveying or a similar field. He also hopes it will be in West Virginia so he can hunt and fish in his spare time.

Video Craze Changes Our World

by Tracy Samples

A man strolling to his car after the "Welcome Home Troops" parade in Glenville last Saturday, dropped his video camera. Instantly there was an enormous realization of how important video cameras have become.

A few months ago The Rocky Horror Picture Show was released on home video. The movie had appeared in theaters for years, attracting a "cult-like" following. Since the home video release, theaters have stopped showing the flick. Have home videos ruined our lust for adventure?

Home video even found its way into crime. The video taken by an onlooker during the beating of a black motorist in Los Angeles by police officers has sparked emotions across the country. Justice would never have happened without the timely video.

Couples used to bicker in front of movie theaters about which movie to see out of seven choices. Now couples enter video stores and encounter hundreds of movies to argue about.

Most kids today have their entire lives, from birth, captured on video tape. Most college age people have to rely on grandma's recollections of what your mother went through during birth. Now grandma can sit in the recliner, put in a video, aim her remote control and BAM - instant memory in color.

There are so many subtle ways video usage has changed America. However, the world will not know for years if the impact will be constructive or destructive. No doubt someone will catch the whole scene on video - preserved to be examined at a later date.

Post-War Kuwait Offers Jobs in Reconstruction

by Chris Harper

"Each day the job service of West Virginia gets 30 to 40 calls concerning the jobs in Kuwait" said Jim Salario, Director of W.V. Job Service. "The listings that we have," Salario said, "are for sheet metal workers, for helicopter pilots, and mechanics."

The slow economy and the unemployment rate has spurred an interest in the job possibilities in Kuwait. Because of this interest the W.V. Job Service and Senator Jay Rockefeller, along with the employers from West Virginia, met in Charleston on Monday, March 25th to compile a packet of information to be used by the W.V. Job Service in screening possible employees, and to teach the W.V.

firms how to deal with the people of Kuwait.

The Kuwaitis have a two-stage reconstruction plan. In the first 90 days, the focus will be on emergency relief and damage assessment. Food, water, medicine, and communication will be highlighted. Contracts for this phase worth over 500 million dollars have been signed by U.S. companies.

The second phase of the Kuwaiti plan will be for the next 90 days and will include detailed damage assessment and design work. The hardest hit area in Kuwait was the Kuwaiti oil fields. The oil field reconstruction is being directed by the Kuwaiti oil company office in London. The intensive rebuilding will go on for years and the Bechtel Corporation has been selected as the program manager.

"The rumors run wild about the amount of money being paid for workers," said Salario. "We heard of wages amounting to $200,000 a year and that's not the only one." Each job advertisement should be checked out completely before any money is exchanged. "So many con-men have jumped on the Kuwaiti rebuilding band wagon," Salario said, "that people should call the Department of Labor or the attorney General if they are in doubt."

Alumnus of the Week: John James

by Elizabeth Dotson

John E. James has been chosen Alumnus of the Week. James is a 1957 graduate of Glenville State College where he belonged to the Campus Fellowship and was a member of the Student Education Association in which he was president for one year. He also received the International Relations Club's Social Studies Award. After graduating from GSC James was drafted into the Army for two years. After that he attended Ohio State University and received his M.Ed. in 1964.

James returned to GSC in 1965 as an Assistant Professor of Education. He was tenured in 1970 and in 1971 was promoted to Associate Professor of Education. As a teacher at GSC, James taught many education classes including Human Development, reading courses, Educational Psychology and Learning Theories. He was head of the sponsorship for Student Education and was ticket taker for the athletic department.

James resides on Mineral Road with his wife Sharon James, who is an elementary school teacher. They have two sons, Jeff, a graduate of WVU and Doug, a freshman at WVU. James also plays the piano for the First Baptist Church in Glenville.

On April 27, Alumni Day, James will be honored with a reception from 3-5 p.m. in the Verona Maple Room of the Heflin Center. All friends, alumni and former students are invited. James' retirement from GSC will be official September 1, 1991.

The Glenville State College Concert Choir, with the help of the Central West Virginia Community Chorus and the Lilliput Orchestra, performed George Frederick Handel's Messiah. The remarkable performance was enjoyed by both the audience and the musicians.

Tim White, member of the GSC Concert Choir, said, "It was an uplifting experience to have the orchestra in front of us while we performed the magnificent piece..." His opinion seemed to be shared by the entire choir, and members of the Lilliput Orchestra also expressed enthusiasm.

The Lilliput Orchestra has performed many operas, musicals and oratorios since it was founded in 1979 by its music director, Donald Riggio. The orchestra tours West Virginia, although its base is in Charleston. It also performs children's concerts which it has

Greg's Inside Edition

Duke vs. Kansas in April, 1991 in the championship game of the NCAA's. If someone would have told me this a couple of weeks ago, I would have thought that it was some sort of April Fool's joke. This was no joke, however, as the Blue Devils from Durham North Carolina defeated the Jayhawks by the score of 72-65. For Duke to make it to the finals they had to get through UNLV, who was considered to be one of the greatest teams of all time. Duke pulled off one of the greatest, if not the greatest, upsets of all time by defeating UNLV 79-77. If UNLV would have defeated Duke and Kansas, they would have gone down in history as one of the best teams ever to play. With the loss to Duke, they will now go down as one of the best college teams not to win the championship. Kansas pulled off three upsets to get to the final game. They defeated Indiana, Arkansas and then North Carolina.

Play Ball: The 1991 baseball season is now underway with the first game being the Houston Astros against last years champions the Cincinnati Reds. Some big names will be wearing different uniforms this year. Daryl Strawberry is now playing for the L.A. Dodgers while Tim Lincecum is now wearing a Chicago White Sox uniform. Kirk Gibson is back in the American League this year with the Kansas City Royals. Bo Jackson has found a new team. The Chicago White Sox decided it was worth the gamble and signed the hobbled two-sport star. My predictions for each division of baseball this year: N.L. East- 1) Cubs 2) Mets 3) Pirates 4) Expos 5) Cardinals 6) Phillies; N.L. West- 1) Dodgers 2) Reds 3) Giants 4) Padres 5) Braves 6) Astros; A.L. East- 1) Blue Jays 2) Red Sox 3) Orioles 4) Brewers 5) Tigers 6) Yankees 7) Indians; A.L. West- 1) A's 2) Royals 3) White Sox 4) Rangers 5) Angels 6) Mariners 7) Twins. The Dodgers will play the A's in the world series with the A's winning the title for the second time in three years.

The hockey play-offs are underway. There are only five teams that don't make these particular play-offs.

The first of the four majors in golf begins Thursday, April 11, in Augusta, Georgia. This tournament is known as the Masters. Nick Faldo will be vying for his third straight green jacket.

Nursing Degree Provides Many Options in a Rewarding Field

by Sally Smith

Nursing is a career that has been around since the beginning of time. However, much has changed in the profession of nursing. More opportunities are available, not only in a hospital environment, but in the community as well.

Glenville State College offers a Bachelor of Science degree in nursing. The first two years as a nursing major are spent at GSC and the last two years are spent at The University of Charleston. Currently, 32 students are enrolled in the program.

While at GSC, the student's course load consists of such classes as nutrition, chemistry, human anatomy, bacteriology, concepts of nursing, pharmacology and physiology, which helps them prepare for their career. They also learn how to give health assessments, physical exams, and how to take care of a person in the hospital, or in the community.

However, their learning goes outside of the classroom as well. They practice their skills in area hospitals such as Calhoun County Hospital, Stonewall Jackson Hospital, and Ameri-Care Nursing Home.

Upon graduation, many options are available to nurses. They have a choice to work in hospitals, communities, schools, or perhaps go on to graduate school and become specialized in an area of nursing.

Due to the shortage of nurses, salary has nearly doubled for those in the profession. As a result, one can expect to earn between $20,000-$30,000, depending on the area.

According to GSC nursing instructor Dr. Mary Louise Brown, "Nursing is a rewarding profession. There are opportunities to get one's PH.D. or to become an educator or administrator. Nurses are no longer hand-maidens to physicians. I believe a B.S. should be the minimum that one should pursue to be a professional nurse. I wholeheartedly support that concept."

When considering a career in nursing one should ask, "Do I enjoy working with people and helping them? Am I good in the subjects math and science?" If the answer is yes, you may just want to consider nursing as a career choice.
