Campus Gets Face-lift During Summer Break

The Maintenance Department spent the summer break completing several projects on the campus facilities. The projects ranged from routine lawn care and the painting of dorm rooms to major renovations.

Clark Hall, the Heflin Student Center and the Science Hall were painted and the roofing contracts on the Physical Education Building and Clark Hall were completed.

The Auditorium balcony in the Administration Building has been converted into lecture type classrooms with improved lighting and air conditioning and approximately 75 seats each.

Louis Bennett Hall is seeing the biggest changes in attempts to make better use of that location and space. The Business Office Complex will house Financial Aid, Cashier, Computer Center, Payroll, Purchasing, Accounts Payable, Assistant Business Manager and the Personnel Manager. This consolidation will provide better managerial control and access for students and faculty. Also the Business Division, Sports Spectrum and Nursery were moved from Pickens Hall to LBH.

Two projects involved the Athletic Department in order to get them ready for the up coming football and basketball seasons. The uprights on the goal posts at the Pioneer Stadium were moved 5 feet closer together and almost 1300 feet of drain line was installed to improve the drainage of the practice field. Also, the water damage inflicted upon the gym floor has been refinished and repainted.

David Camiletti, Director of Personnel, said that the work completed was accomplished with the "combined effort of every department on campus and we all should express our thanks for their effort. These projects continue daily behind the scenes and are vital to the overall operation of this college."

Freshman Class Sets Record

The Freshman class of 1991-92 has the distinction of being the largest and most diverse in the history of Glenville State College.

Mack Samples, Dean of Records and Admissions, reported that the enrollment included a representative of every county in the state and showed higher ACT scores to produce a stronger academic base. He said of the freshman, "They were quite tolerant [during Freshman orientation] and exhibited adult behavior and should be commended."

Dr. Billips, Dean of Student Affairs, stated that 434 students enrolled before the first day of classes which bested the previous record set in the fall of the the 1984-85 school year. He suggested that the reason for the increase could be attributed to the economic conditions in West Virginia allowing the college to act as a directive to those students unsure of their career goals.

Petroleum Advisory Group Meets at GSC

The Industrial Advisory Committee to Glenville State College's petroleum engineering technology program met for the first time in several years on Friday, August 16. Thirteen members of the 21-member committee council met on the campus of Glenville State College to review and discuss the School's petroleum program.

According to Dr. P. Lutchmansingh, the meeting's first facilitator and director of the petroleum engineering technology program, the college is looking to the committee for help in several ways. "We want them to critique our program and advise us on the positive things that we need to reinforce and determine any deficiencies we need to address and eliminate.

Another area that we will be looking for help with is transportation for field trips. Most of the service companies like Dowell and Halliburton change their vehicles every two or three years because of high mileage. I am in the process of negotiating to determine the best way to get two, four-wheel drive vehicles and a truck that can be converted into a log truck for the forestry department of the land resources division," said Lutchmansingh.

According to Lutchmansingh, the committee will also be asked to assist with summer placement for the petroleum engineering technology students. He is also interested in summer employment for the faculty, a situation which he feels will enhance and update their professional lives.

During the Friday meeting, the committee entertained the requests of James Bibby to consider the addition of a landman program to the existing program. Shelly Reed, Bill Grottendieck, Bob Radabaugh and James Bibby will receive comments and questions through Bill Rubin, concerning the direction that the landman program will take.

Those who attended the meeting include: A. Edwin Grafton, Chairman of Glenville State College's land resources department; William Grottendieck, general counsel for Trio Petroleum Corp.; Jim Hodges, Appalachain manager for Dowell Schlumberger; Richard Hoffman, executive vice president and chief operating officer for Alamco Inc.; Glenn Knepper, director of engineering for CNG Transmission Corp.; Barry Lay, director of engineering and geology for WACO Oil and Gas Company; Wally Lutchmansingh, director of petroleum engineering technology for Glenville State College; Michael J. Miller, manager of engineering for Equitable Resources Exploration; Gary Nichols, vice president of operations for Hope Gas; J. Lowell Peterson, vice president for academic affairs for Glenville State College; Bob Radabaugh, environmental technician for Trio Petroleum Corp.; Shelly Reed, corporate attorney for WACO Oil and Gas Company; Bill Rubin, (newly elected committee chairman) Appalachain district manager for Atlas Wireline Services; and Steve Turk, regional operation manager for Cabot Oil and Gas Corp.

Stump Retires After 22 Years

August 30, 1991 marked the retirement of Pat Stump from the position of assistant to the Dean of Records and Admissions. A reception was held in her honor in the Alumni House hosted by the staff of the Alumni Office.

She came to Glenville in 1969 and began her career in the cafeteria office and moved to the Financial Aid office. She spent a few years there and then went to the Student Union office. In 1974 she made her final move to the office of Records and Admissions. When asked if she felt she would remain here over 20 years on her first day, she replied quite definitely, "NO."

During her 22 years of service she assumed the responsibility for the Veterans program as well as many other students related functions.

Brenda McCartney, a longtime friend and co-worker reflected that Mrs. Stump enjoyed her work with the students and was very dedicated to serving the college.

Mrs. Stump plans to travel with her husband and visit their children in North Carolina.

Federal Procurement Discussed at GSC

by Lesley Welton

Barbara Weaver, Federal Contracting Specialist with the U. S. Small Business Administration, conducted a briefing concerning the Federal Procurement Assistance Program. The Thursday, September 5, meeting took place at 10:30 a.m. in the Heflin Center's Verona Maple Room at Glenville State College.

Officials attending from Glenville State College were Dr. William Simmons, President, and Raymond A. Oliverio, Director of Institutional Development.

The U.S. Small Business Administration's Federal Procurement Assistance Program has been arranged to meet the needs of clients marketing to, and contracting with the federal government. The four major divisions are as follows: Education and Counseling, Problem solving and advocacy, Teaming and subcontractor assistance, and agency review.

Formal training sessions include marketing procedures, proposal and bid preparation, negotiation and administration, quality control, business management systems and federal cost principles. Individual counseling sessions are also conducted on these and many other subjects.

Simmons, Oliverio, and Weaver discussed a possible conference, "Teaming to Win", to be held at Glenville State College in early November or spring of 1992. They hope to see more involvement from the business students of GSC.

Soviet Struggle Affects All of Us

by Rebecca Hufford

We've all heard about the recent developments in the Soviet Union. Everyday we learn of more changes that have been made. Newspapers, magazines, television, and radio are constantly updating us on the situation. Today's world of instant communication provides us with so much information, it's hard to know what to do with it all; to know how the situation affects us.

To me, it means the beginning of a safer world. As the Soviet Union (or what it becomes) moves closer to democracy, their government will be forced to recognize it's people's personal property and their growing demand for more. This will make the large defense budgets of the past impossible.

Also, the demise of Communism in the Soviet Union has Communist leaders in other nations pondering the fate of communism in their own countries. The U.S.S.R. was known as the leader of the Communist Community. Without them, how long can Communism last?

Maybe the best things to come from all of this are the economic advantages. As the republics gain their freedom and enter the world market their standard of living will rise and in turn ours will also.

The past weeks have been a valuable educational opportunity, and those to come will surely be more of the same. We are living history - take advantage of it because there is more to being educated than sitting in a classroom.

Shelters May Serve Better Purpose Today

Yesterday as I was entering the Administration building at GSC, I saw a sign that many students today probably never notice, or even understand. It was a yellow civil defense sign, indicating that the building housed a bomb shelter. In the early sixties, everyone was building one - nuclear war with the Russians seemed imminent.

My, my - how things have changed in thirty years!

Under Gorbachov, the Soviet Union has undergone radical changes in the past 5 years. Democracy is spreading through the Soviet Union like wildfire. The cold war is over. The Soviet Union has become our ally, and her people are tasting real freedom for the first time since the czars first came to power more than 100 years ago. Nuclear arms reduction treaties have become a reality, and we are finally beginning to really talk to one another.

And all of this hung by a delicate thread for most of the past week. The spectre of returning to a cold war and a renewed arms race was worse than we could imagine - a dreadful, cold, fearful feeling. Would everything Gorbachov had fought for be destroyed and swept away, as the U.S.S.R. returned to a cold war mentality?

The Committee of 8 forgot an extremely crucial element in their planning. The soviet people have had a real and genuine taste of freedom - and they will never be the same. There will be no return to the ways of the past. No longer will they quietly live in fear. No longer will they obey those in authority without believing in their integrity.

One demonstrator outside the Kremlin expressed this very well. "Either we may live like human beings, or we may live like pigs. I choose to live like a human being."

The good people of the U.S.S.R. have learned that freedom is not only worth striving for, and living for; it is also worth dying for. And suddenly this world seems like a much nicer place in which to live.

Come to think of it, bomb shelters never were such a good idea in the first place. Maybe we can convert them all into cellars, and store our food in them. Somehow, their original purpose seems rather antiquated now - thank God.

Teacher Exchange Program Promotes Swapping of Ideas

by Missy Booth

An exchange of ideas took place from August to July 1991. Glenville State College Professor of Art, Charles Scott, took part in a teacher exchange which sent him to Anglia Polytechnic in Brentwood England.

Also involved in the exchange was Johnathon Cooper, who assumed Scott's classes in Art, Color and Design, Photography, Painting and Art Education at Glenville State College.

Guest lecturer was Scott's title in England. His position and his travels enabled him to compare and contrast the teaching methods of the two countries.

Scott reported that because grade books are not necessary, they are never used in English classrooms. A diary, containing the daily schedule of events is utilized.

In American schools the main focus is placed on grades. In England students work toward "information, integration, and application" of knowledge. English Society, as a whole, places little emphasis on letter grades.

Scott offered that the experience has benefited him as well as both institutions involved. An "exchange of ideas" along with different insights prevent stagnation in any culture.

When asked if he would recommend the exchange program to other teachers he responded affirmatively, "I would question any teacher who wouldn't consider making an exchange." He went on to say that a teacher at any level of education may participate by completing an application listing all degrees and books or papers published. The deadline for application is October 15, 1991.

Job Fair Program Dates Set

More than 70 employers have registered to attend the first Operation Native Talent job fair of the 1991-92 academic year. Operation Native Talent (ONT) is a job fair program designed to provide recruiters and employers with a cost effective way of meeting college seniors from almost all of West Virginia's colleges and universities.

Operation Native Talent will be on campus Friday, September 13, 1991. We hope to provide transportation.

The fair is open to all West Virginia college seniors and recent graduates. Students are asked to "dress for success" and bring plenty of resumes.

The program, which is in its fifth year, is a partnership effort of the West Virginia Roundtable, the West Virginia Chamber of Commerce, the Governor's Office of Community and Industrial Development, and the West Virginia College Placement Association.

Scholarship Awarded

Glenville State College student, Damon Wilkewitz received a $400 scholarship from the Ladies Auxiliary of the West Virginia Association of Land Surveyors on August 26.

The scholarship is given annually to a deserving student in surveying program in West Virginia.

Concerning the scholarship, Wilkewitz said, "I was surprised and glad because it helped pay for a school loan and some books that I very much needed. I want to thank the Ladies Auxiliary. I do not think that I could have made it through the semester without their help. I am truly thankful for the scholarship and the honor."

Doll Movie Can't Be Viewed Seriously

by Jim Shock

Yes, Chucky's back! The success of the first two "Child's Play" movies guaranteed that there would be a "Child's Play 3." The third installment arrived in theaters Aug. 30th.

The film picks up eight years after the original "Child's Play." You may recall that Chuck was killed at the end of the previous movies. (Anyone who is a fan of this particular type of film knows that the death of the bad guy is a minor obstacle to overcome in a sequel) Well, rest assured, he is alive and has a score to settle. I won't tell you what strange circumstances lead to his miraculous resurrection but you'll be surprised what one drop of blood from a dead, possessed "good guy" doll can do. I couldn't explain it anyway, and obviously neither could the creators of this movie. Whatever it was that happened, was happening during the credits and when the credits were over, there was another Chucky ready to go.

Chucky, aka Charles Lee Ray, psycho killer and voodoo practitioner, is in search of Andy, the boy from the previous "Child's Play" films. Chucky plans to possess Andy's body so that he won't have to spend the rest of his life trapped in a doll's body. A few murders later the two are reunited, but Andy can't convince anyone at the military school he attends, that there is a killer doll after him. Darn this world of skeptics.

There is really no need for me to summarize the plot in this film because as a general rule, sequels keep the original plot. (If the first two movies plots made millions, why change this one) The location has changed as well as the victims and the way Chucky disposes of them. Don't expect any surprises in this one, like Chucky was abused, thus he has a bad attitude.

The military school adults are stereotypical military figures. The shouting crazed drill sergeant, the do it by the book General who is a veteran of three wars, and a military school wouldn't be complete without a barber who enjoys cutting hair a little bit too much. (He keeps a lock of hair from each of the cadets on his wass as a trophy) These are the kind of characters that you just know won't be around by the end of the movie.

"Child's Play 3" is good because it doesn't take itself seriously. I enjoyed it, because I didn't take it seriously either. Anyone who goes to this movie with the attitude that dolls don't kill people will probably think it's pretty stupid. But after all, we go to the movies to be entertained and escape the realities of life. I do suggest that you see the first two movies or at least see this one with someone who knows what's going on, because this movie doesn't explain much, probably because sequels are designed to appeal to the fans of the previous films.

If you liked the first two "Child's Play" movies, you'll undoubtedly like this one. Even if you've never seen these films, I think you'll be entertained, and at times even scared, if you keep an open mind.

GSC's Child Learning Center Holds Open House for Parents

by Tracey Moats

On Thursday, August 29, from 7 - 8 p.m., the Glenville State College Child Learning Center held its informal open house, allowing parents of enrolled children to view the facility, familiarize their child with the center, and meet the staff. The Child Learning Center (CLC) is in the basement of Clark Hall and will open Tuesday, September 3 for the Fall Semester.

The CLC is a program in which children ages 4 and up can enjoy learning skills including Social, Emotional, Physical, and Cognitive Language. The program provides a variety of activities designed to enhance the child's willingness to learn.

Kathy Butler, Associate Professor of Education, and Pam Cain, Assistant Professor of Special Education and Early Childhood are the 1991 - 92 Directors of the Center. Shelley Hardman and Elaine Utt, both Glenville State College students, are acting as lead teachers, with Gail Balcourt, Ellen Mullins, and Linda Jarvis, also GSC Students, assisting them.

The CLC not only benefits the children who attend the program, but it also benefits the students at GSC. The center provides students taking Early Education and similar courses with valuable hands on experience. The CLC serves as a laboratory for these students, allowing them to observe the children and their behavior patterns.

The program is open to the public on a first-come first-serve basis to children who will have reached at least their fourth birthday by September 1.

Hours for the CLC are Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m.-12 p.m. The center will not be open on Fridays to allow the children to participate in the four-year-old program which is being offered for the first time by Gilmer County Schools.

The colorful walls and variety of toys, games, and learning aids add to the center. When asked what she thought about the Child Learning Center, Joelle Harris, a child participant in the program responded, "I love this place!"

Student Teachers Prepare for Assignments

by Missy Booth

Eleven local counties have opened their schools to 57 of Glenville State College's student teachers. The new teachers, who have completed their course work with a minimum 2.5 grade point average, have passed the Content Specialization Test as well as the Pre-Professional Skills Test.

Mid way through this semester their positions in primary or secondary institutions will require them to assume all the responsibilities of a permanent teacher.

Connie Fisher, a May 1991 Glenville graduate, completed her student teaching and is now employed by Glenville Elementary. Fisher expects to move to the Sandfork School system soon. She considers her experience in Student Teaching to benefit her greatly, as it offered first hand experience.

Director of Field

Experience and Head of Student Teaching, Kathy Butler, commented that the general consensus after student teaching is positive. Butler indicated most students feel they learn the most in their final semester in the field.

A meeting has been scheduled for Thursday, September 19 in room 101 Clark Hall. All those interested in the program are encouraged to attend.

Student Marketing Competition Slated

Undergraduates at the nation's top colleges and universities will vie for a $1,250 first prize scholarship, along with second and third prizes of $500 and $250 respectively, being offered by the Point-of-Purchase Advertising Institute (POPAI) for its annual Student Marketing Competition.

POPAI's 1991 Student Marketing Competition offers sophomores, juniors, and seniors and North American colleges and universities the challenge of integrating point-of-purchase (P-O-P) materials into a marketing program for a hypothetical line of baby toiletry products with "real life" marketing objectives and constraints.

"With this competition, tomorrow's business professionals can delve into the world of marketing, and examine the critical role that point-of-purchase plays in the total marketing mix," said John M. Kawula, President of POPAI, in announcing the competition. "Students have the opportunity to exercise their marketing talents and investigate P-O-P as a stimulating career possibility."

Each entry will be judged on a number of criteria, including meeting the stated marketing objective within given budget parameters, making significant use of in-store display activity, and demonstrating originality and creativity. Also, the presentation must be clear and concise, demonstrate an understanding of the P-O-P industry and use relevant marketing information for the product.

Marketing and P-O-P industry professionals will serve as judges for the competition.

All contest entries, accompanied an official entry form, must be postmarked by Friday, December 13, 1991. For further information, contact Ronit Bialer, Education Relations Manager at POPAI, 66 North Van Brunt Street, Englewood, NJ 07631, (201) 894-8899.

PICA NEWS

Commuters are the last to know. That is how it has been in the past, but now we have the opportunity to unite and get the facts first hand. There are many issues that pertain to commuters which are being discussed and decided upon by people who do not commute, therefore they can not have the commuters best interests in mind. Now is the time for you to voice your opinion. It is time for the largest group on campus to reign over it's own affairs. Let's find out the facts. Where does the money for parking go? What benefits and facilities are directed at commuters? Does the college actually take the commuters interests to heart? Simple answers to simple questions. That's all we ask.

PICA meeting Tuesday, September 17th, at 12:30 p.m. in the commuter lounge. All commuters welcome!

Marion Outlines Successful First Year Goals

Having recently completed his first year as Chancellor of the State College System of West Virginia, Dr. Paul Marion described the past year "as productive for the System and exciting for me." A native of North Carolina, Marion held a variety of administrative positions in higher education in California, Colorado, Great Britain, North Carolina, and Arkansas before coming to West Virginia in June of 1990.

As part of a 19-point Plan for Quality and Accountability adopted last fall by the State College System Board, a mission statement for the System has been adopted, standards have been established for the assessment and placement of students in the basic skill areas, limits have been placed on spending for intercollegiate athletics, and a plan has been implemented for the delivery of comprehensive community college education. Also, four degree programs at each college have been designated as "peaks of excellence," special activities have been initiated to develop closer ties with the public schools, a funding formula has been adopted and then refined, and a structure has been developed for the coordination of telecourses and other distance learning activities. As a result of a special study of existing degree programs, the Board will consider a recommendation at its meeting in September to eliminate a number of programs that are not cost-effective.

According to Marion, "the focus for the State College System has been and will continue to be on how we can make the most efficient use of limited resources. State colleges in West Virginia provide quality undergraduate education, but it will be difficult to maintain this level of quality without increased funding for faculty and staff salaries, equipment, library holdings, and other educational purposes."

The State College System, which was created as a result of the higher education reorganization legislation of 1989, consists of Bluefield State College, Concord College, Fairmont State College, Glenville State College, Shepherd College, Southern West Virginia Community College, West Liberty State College, West Virginia Institute of Technology, West Virginia Northern Community College, and West Virginia State College. The System is governed by a 17-member Board, and the Chancellor serves as a chief executive officer for the System with a president responsible for the administration of each of the ten campuses.

Chancellor Marion stated that, "under the Plan for Quality and Accountability, each institution has developed special activities to increase student retention and graduation rates, expose students to international issues and information, assist with the State's economic development, and increase the number of minority students and faculty. Also, each institution will initiate measures to assess student learning of the general education core curriculum, beginning with the fall 1992 semester."

Humane Society Offers Warning

College life can be very lonely, and many students believe that adding a pet to their curriculum will take away the blues, but the Humane Society of the United States (HSUS) says pet ownership should be a lifetime commitment, not a short-term fling.

"At first a dog or cat might make an empty dorm room seem like home or a fraternity or sorority seem more like a family," says Phyllis Wright, HSUS vice-president for companion animals. "But, once the glow of new pet ownership has worn off, and students become involved in studying and other activities, the pet may find himself wondering where his next meal is coming from."

Wright says student's should not think of pets like a textbook that can be traded in or thrown away at the end of the semester. Instead, pet owners must make a lifelong promise to feed and care for the animal.

"Animals can not take care of themselves," Wright said. "They depend on people for food, shelter, companionship, and veterinary care."

Wright says the bottom line is long-term commitment. Do you see yourself as this animal's owner in five years? In ten years? As a student, you can no longer expect someone else to pick up the burden of responsibility for your pet.

"Animal shelters are already overcrowded," Wright says. "Students only add to the problem by getting a pet on a whim. There's no reason to own a pet unless you are willing to take on the responsibility for the rest of its life."

of this year's freshman due to the recruiting efforts of Coach Rodriguez. And while the changes at WVUP created a drop in the overall enrollment, the Summersville Center remains to draw a significant number of students.

The future of Glenville State College, with its low tuition and always expanding programs, is likely to remain a positive force in the state educational system.
