Former Army Officer Named to Head Up GSC Administrative Services

William J. Diehl, Jr. as they can be, he says.

"People and buildings, in that order" is how William J. ("Bill") Diehl, Jr. summarizes his essential focus as GSC's director of administrative services.

Diehl, hired for the college's top administrative post by President William Simmons in late August, directs both the personnel and facilities operations at GSC. "My job is to help the president look out for the welfare of our employees, maintain a quality work force, and maximize the use of our limited resources to make GSC's facilities as functional and attractive The 47-year-old Diehl came to GSC from Davidson College in North Carolina where he served as special consultant to the president following a 26year active duty career as a U.S.

Army officer. His military career included two tours in Vietnam and service in Korea, Europe and the Middle East. He ways he believes the combination of his experience in higher education and the military provide an excellent foundation for the position he now holds at GSC.

"I've had a lot of practice in getting things done in a bureaucracy," he explains. "Don't know much about how the West Virginia state system works yet, but I suspect it's a lot like the federal bureaucracy in many ways. There are policies and procedures that are established for good reason. In my mind, there are two keys to making progress in such a system. First, you don't ever lose sight of the spirit of those policies and procedures. And second, you don't fight the system, but, instead, work within it.

"Oh, and you never forget that the 'bureaucracy' is not a thing. It's people--individual human begins," he adds. "You can overcome a lot of hurdles just by dealing with people as individuals."

In respect to the facilities aspect of his job, the planning, organizational, and priority-setting skills emphasized in the military will "come in handy," Diehl says. "Making the best use of scarce resources has been a lifelong challenge for me," he adds.

Diehl is already involved in planning a number of longterm campus renovation project that have been approved by the president. One of the most important is meeting the requirements of the 1990 Americans with Disabilities Act.

"Our ultimate goal is to make the entire campus accessible to persons who are dis-Continued on page 2

One project currently underway is construction of an elevator in the Heflin Center, and plans are being made to make Louis Bennett Hall more accessible in the near future. There are also plans to improve the chemistry lab facilities as funds become available. Additionally, Diehl will be working with consultants on the development of a college master plan, which he describes as "a long view of the modifications required to make the college as functional and attractive as possible."

One of Diehl's last assignments in the Army was in the Gulf War, where he served as chief spokesman to the media for U.S. Army matters. He volunteered to lead a team of coalition public affairs officers into Kuwait City on the heels of the liberating forces to establish and direct a media support center in the city. Diehl and his team arrived in the heart of the city only hours after the Iragis had retreated. He was, "as far as I know," the first American Army officer to arrive in downtown Kuwait City.

The new director of administrative services says he is happy to be in West Virginia, and particularly at Glenville State College. "The people here are just tremendously friendly, cooperative, and receptive, and I'm honored to be a member of a great team," he says.

Having spent more than cause of peace, Diehl says he has found in Glenville what he has worked to maintain.

"It is a place of peace," he observes.

GSC Says Goodbye to Some Old Friends

by David Riffe

After

Recently students, faculty, two decades working for the and staff members of Glenville State College have noticed the demise of four silver maple trees around the Administration Building. According to Bruce Hathaway, director of physical plant, the trees were becoming a hazard, and it was feared they might fall on someone or on the roof of the Administration Building. Another reason the trees were cut was to give the younger, healthier oaks and sugar maples more space to grow

> Davey Tree Service removed the trees, cutting them up piece by piece and giving the remains to the forestry division. The foresters will cut them up to be used as firewood and use the wood chips for yard mulch for anyone who wants it.

The foresters were invited to come and cut the trees themselves, but the danger outweighed their experience in this type of cutting. To avoid hitting the roof of the Administration Building and the Library, the workers had to climb the trees and cut the tops out and work themselves down.

Knowing that the trees will be sadly missed by everyone, Hathaway said, "The trees were cut with deep regret and a great deal of concern for the feelings of students, faculty, and alumni remembrance of what the campus looked like. The importance of the trees in front of the Administration Building is almost equal as the importance of the clock tower in the memories of our students."

In My Opinion . . . Worby Deserves Apology

Editor.

It may be naive to hope that we will ever have political campaigns that are based solely on thorough discussions of substantive issues and proposals that are presented in complete detail. Surely, however, we are sufficiently civilized to conduct campaigns without vicious personal attacks aimed at one's opponents and their families.

One day after Charlotte Pritt announced her write-in candidacy for governor, instead of giving voters specific details of what she would do, she attacked First Lady Rachael Worby. Even though Ms. Pritt admits that she doesn't know Ms. Worby, she felt justified in calling her a "exotic bird" who mistreats public employees. Pritt even got in a racial slur by saying Worby treats state troopers..."as if they were down on the plantation."

And what is the basis for these brutal accusations? Rumors that have been denied in writing by one of those troopers.

This is the same gubernatorial candidate who, in a pitiful attempt to support the right to bear arms, said that she keeps a loaded shotgun under her b because Governor Caperton people had been harassing h (naturally, no proof was o fered); then, following her lo to Gov. Caperton in the p mary, she called herself "hellcat" that would make him feel as though he were in "Fat Attraction" (a movie in which woman becomes obsessed with a man and tries to kill him).

Oh, ves, Charlotte Pr also feels that Ms. Worby lack "grace and dignity."

All that is accomplished by these vicious, baseless a tacks is to hurt innocent peopl discourage good people for entering politics and (let us hop demonstrate that the person i suing the attacks is wholly un suitable for public office.

Rachael Worby has serve the people of West Virginia well both in her capacity as musi director and conductor of th Wheeling Symphony and a First Lady. She deserves a pub lic apology from Charlotte Prit

Voters deserve much mor from candidates for public of fice.

Mock Election Results

In the mock election held on campus last Friday, the incumbents were victorious with Gaston Caperton and George Bush winning their races by a slim margin. Caperton drew 131 votes, while Cleve Benedict drew 125. In the presidential race, Bush squeaked by Clinton, 129 to 122.

Faculty/staff gave the presidential race to Bill Clinton while students chose Cleve Benedict over Caperton.

We suspect the vote in Heflin Center may have been tampered with, as the poll was left unattended for two hours due to an unexpected emergency. A large number of Benedict/ Bush ballots appeared to have been placed in the ballot box at the same time.

Thanks to all who voted. Now, be sure to go to the polls next Tuesday where your vote will really count.

Editorial

by Sharon Gladwell

Last Friday, October 23, the Mercury sponsored a mock presidential and gubernatorial election. While we were making plans for the election, negative thoughts were going through my mind. What if it turns out to be a flop? What if we don't get a good response?

When I went to the poll to work, though, I was impressed. All of my negative thoughts turned to positive ones. Almost everyone who passed by the polling place stopped by to cast their vote. Even students who only had a few minutes before their class started stopped by. Several people had even clipped the ballot out of the last issue of the Mercury and had voted before coming to the polls.

I want to thank each person who voted. The faculty, staff and students made our mock election successful. I also want to encourage every registered voter to show up at the election polls on November 3, and I want to challenge those who aren't registered voters to seriously consider registering. Your vote can make a difference.

For many years now, 72 ear-old Jack Woodyard, a rominent citizen of Gilmer ounty, has been a big suporter of Glenville State Colge and Pioneer sports and has pent quite a few years collectng memorabilia and attending ioneer games.

For the last 40-some years, loodyard has attended all of SC's home football games, and or the last 20 years he has atnded both home and away ames

Woodyard has lived in lenville all his life and has ways had a great love for orts. He played football in eventh and eighth grades, played four years of high school football and basketball and ran track. He never missed a football practice during the football season and was named an allstate player.

Woodyard went on to GSC where he played football until he had to quit to fight in World War II. After the war ended, he worked forty years as a route man for the Glenville Post Office, which gave him the opportunity to meet many Glenville residents and college students.

In 1980, Woodyard began operating the End Zone Club, a history museum of Pioneer sports that is partly supervised by the athletic department. A lot of the collection contains statistics and photographs of Pioneer sports (football, baseball, swimming, basketball, bowling, track, golf and cheerleading), homecoming queen and princesses, coaches, newspaper clippings, game balls and other memorable items.

Woodyard spends most of his day working in the End Zone Club, usually five to six hours every day except on weekends. During this time he adds updated material to the End Zone collection. His collection of Pioneer sports starts with the first year that sports were played at GSC in 1908.

Although the things he has collected are for the End Zone Club, Woodyard also has his own collection. In high school he began making scrapbooks which are also on display at the club building.

Not only is Woodyard a member of the End Zone Club, but he has been a member of other clubs and organizations as well--American Legion, FFW, Disabled American Veterans, Masonic Lodge, Thirty-two Shriners, Fire Department, Lions Club, Farm Bureau and the Methodist Church.

Meet the GSC Mascot

by Jason Fisher

Will James, the Pioneer mascot, is a senior majoring in computer and information systems. A native of Cisco, Texas, James moved to Beckley in his junior year in high school where he competed in track and cross country. He also competed at the state meet in both sports.

Upon his arrival at GSC, he also participated in track and cross country. His senior year, however, he chose to be the mascot in order that he could better support the Pioneers. He will also be the Pioneer mascot during basketball season.

On those warm fall afternoons when there is a football game, wearing the Pioneer outfit can sometimes be a very hot job, but Will feels that it's worth the heat to be able to cheer on the GSC Pioneers.

A Halloween Ghost Story

Arts & Entertainment

The following story, written by Pat Ireland, originally appeared in The Glenville Mercury in October of 1985.

The interest in Sarah Louisa "Sis" Linn seems to surface each year during the Halloween season as everyone who is even vaguely familiar with the tale becomes an instant authority on the eerie facts of the lady's demise.

The few hard facts available concerning what really happened that Halloween night in 1919 paint a picture perhaps more chilling than the imagination can provide. Sarah L. Linn did, in fact, live and die in a house that stood where the parking lot for the Health Building and Clark Hall is now located.

Betsy Wilson, a GSC student who researched the Linn story for a presentation in speech class, has interviewed Maysel Luzader who lived in the house shortly after the murder. The house was subsequently torn down to allow for the building of a residence hall for the college, Verona Mapel Hall, which in turn gave way to the parking area we are familiar with. This also coincides with courthouse records which indicate that Linn owned Lot 2 in Glenville, valued at $1,700.00, which she inherited when her mother passed away and the rest of the family moved to Charleston.

Sarah used the house as a boarding house for college students and was apparently fairly well-to-do for the time as she left an estate of $9,593.24. She was well-educated for a woman of the period having graduated from Glenville Normal School in 1877--incidentally the only member of her class.

The mist surrounding the circumstances of "Sis" Linn's death has done much to create the legends we hear each year; however, in truth, we only know for a fact that her estate was appraised and settled in Gilmer County. No record of her birth or death exists in county files. Local residents who were alive at the time of her death believe that the reason for the lack of concrete information is that the incident was hushed up to protect prominent local families. One story has it that Linn was beaten to death with a stick of weed by four young men from Glenville. Robbery does not seem to have been the motive as her effects list a gold watch and other personal property including $29.63 in cash found in the home.

Many stories circulate about the spirit of Sarah Linn walking restlessly about the GSC campus. Legend has it that as her assailants were never identified and charged, she cannot find peace. Her grave site behind Clark Hall has become a traditional Halloween gathering spot for students curious about the supernatural. Over the years members of the Mercury staff working late at night and custo dial staff arriving early in th morning, have reported strang sounds not easily explained i the Clark Hall building. Ther have also been reports of woman in a white dress appear ing in Clark Hall windows.

Articles have appeared in both the Charleston and Parkersburg Sunday papers re viewing the Halloween aspects of the Sarah Linn story, and Dr James Gay Jones included he tale in Appalachian Ghost Sto ries and Other Tales. But, in the end, perhaps the real story is the fact that a woman died mysterio ously, and almost nothing exists to show that anyone cared
