Input From 6,000 Citizens

HEAT Calls for Improvements in Higher Education Service

The report of the Higher Education Advocacy Team (HEAT) includes a number of specific recommendations for improving the service to West Virginia provided by higher education. The 17-member team developed the report over a six-month period based on a number of meetings, input from approximately 6,000 citizens at regional hearings held throughout West Virginia and testimony from two national higher education experts. As specified in the joint resolution adopted by the West Virginia Senate and House of Delegates in the 1992 regular legislative session, the HEAT report has been provided to Governor Gaston Caperton and the Legislature in preparation for the 1993 session.

The report concludes that "additional state funds must be appropriated to state colleges and universities in West Virginia to attract and retain qualified staff and faculty members." To achieve this goal, the Advocacy Team recommended that the Legislature should appropriate additional state funds over the next three years to bring average salaries for faculty members and non-classified staff to the averages at similar institutions in the SREB region and for classified employees to the average for similar position in West Virginia and other appropriate employment markets.

Other recommendations in the report are designed to increase access to higher education for the citizens of West Virginia; assure that state colleges and universities are accountable, efficient and productive as possible; and assure that the quality of education and work-force preparation meets the current and future needs of the State. For example, a number of specific recommendations are provided to increase access by reducing financial, geographical, attitudinal and academic barriers for the citizens of West Virginia. Many of these recommendations involve closer cooperation between public schools and institutions of higher education, expanded use of distance education technologies, and efforts to make institutions as "student friendly" as possible.

"Additional state funds must be appropriated to state colleges and universities in West Virginia to attract and retain qualified staff and faculty members."

--HEAT Report

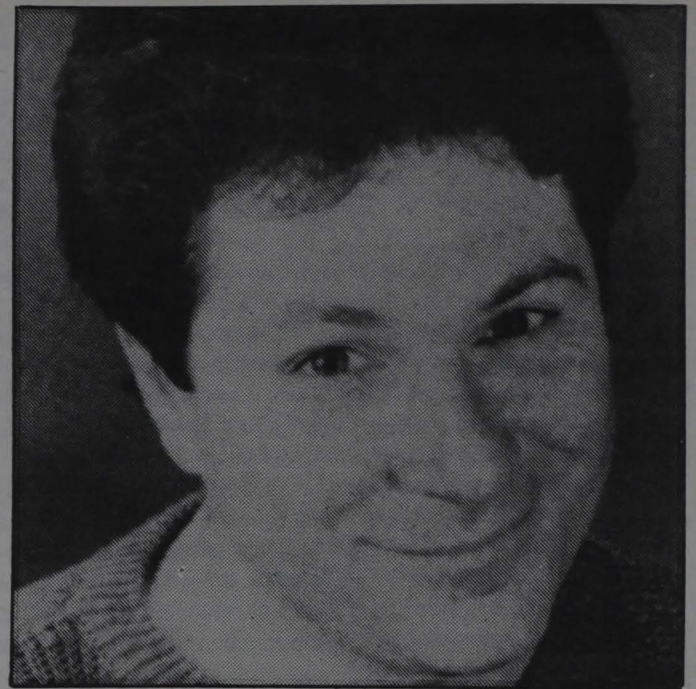

Recommendations related to accountability, efficiency, and productivity include eliminating degree programs that are not cost-effective, assessing student learning of the general education core curriculum, conducting follow-up studies of graduates and employers of graduates, depending more on post-audit financial accountability, providing state funds to each governing board in a single unclassified appropriation, charging out-of-state students the full cost of instruction, and setting minimum statewide standards for assessing and placing entering students in either college-level credit courses or non-credit developmental courses. The report also recommends that the average number of student credit hours taught by faculty members in West Virginia should be at least ten percent above the average for similar institutions in other states and the ratio of full-time state-funded non-instructional positions to FTE enrollment should be at least ten percent below the average ratio for similar institutions in other states.

The report also includes recommendations to improve the quality of education and work-force preparations, including stressing associate degree and "tech prep" programs, closer programs and internships for students in work settings, and mechanisms for feedback from employers to institutions of higher education concerning the skills and education needed by graduates. The report also recommends the need for careful studies of supply and demand for graduates of various degree programs in the work force and for institutions to adjust the number of graduates produced in relation to the number needed in the job market.

"We obviously do need to increase our salaries and give citizens access to higher education," says William Simmons, president of GSC. Simmons went on to say that the implementations in the report are reasonable and will need some financial support.

Simmons plans to work more on amplifying the message that students need to stay in school and be given the chance to graduate.

Hypnotist Tom DeLuca

A Performance That Will Put You To Sleep

by Sharon Gladwell

Comedic hypnotist Tom DeLuca is known by many college students nationwide for his power to tap into his volunteers' personalities and bring human foibles to the surface, and this evening he will be performing at GSC.

A blend of stand-up comic and a practitioner of "imaginism" best describes DeLuca. He reveals to his audience the common traits that we share and how powerful the human imagination can be. His show also reveals the fun, fantasy and wonder hidden in the attics of the minds of the volunteers, while at the same time never embarrassing his subjects. DeLuca's suggestions to his participants range from speaking like aliens from distant worlds to posing in body building competitions to believing they are the world's greatest dancers.

DeLuca has performed on several television broadcasts from harder news programs like CBS "Nightwatch" to lighter entertainment shows like CNN's "Show Business Today" and "Live With Regis and Kathie Lee" to network morning fares. And because of his unusual and popular performances, he has twice named the College Entertainer of the Year.

"For the second consecutive year we had to turn people away from Tom's show. There was a line off 100 students long waiting to get in 45 minutes before the doors were to open. At the end of the show it was difficult to get students to leave, as they wished for Tom's show to continue," raved a student from Xavier University.

DeLuca will perform in the Administration Building Auditorium at 8 p.m., and no admission will be charged.

College Degree More Valuable, but Graduates Are Less Prepared Reports Poll

Reprinted with permission from The State Journal, from their January 1993 issue.

Seventy-two percent of West Virginia business people say a college education is more valuable today than it was a decade ago, according to the latest Key Centurion Business Poll.

Only 20 percent of respondents said a four-year degree is worth less in terms of career opportunities than it was 10 years ago.

But, about 44 percent said today's college graduates are less prepared to enter the work force than they were a decade ago.

The Key Centurion Business Poll is conducted for Key Centurion Bancshares, The State Journal, WSAZ-TV and WTRF-TV by Ryan-McGinn-Samples Research Inc. Telephone interviews for this survey were complete during December 2 to 9 with 209 West Virginia business people.

Among other findings, the poll discovered that a majority of West Virginia business people believe there currently is a greater need for employees with four-year degrees rather than workers with vocational training or high school educations.

Employees with a general four-year degree are needed more than those with more technical four-year degrees, respondents said.

In addition, four-year colleges are perceived as doing the best job of preparing their graduates for the work force in comparison to vocational schools, community or two-year colleges and high schools.

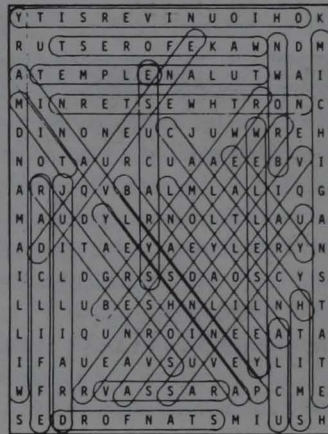

For this edition of The Key Centurion Poll, researchers are 95 percent certain that any aggregate percentage point won't be more than 6.8 percentage points--plus or minus--off the mark if each member of West Virginia's business community had been interviewed.

Only 27 percent of West Virginia business people rated high schools positively in terms of preparing students for the work force.

About 50 percent of West Virginia businesses provide educational incentives and/or training programs for their employees.

A majority of respondents said West Virginia's business community has input in the direction taken by the state's colleges and universities. Nearly eight out of 10 business people said they would like to become personally involved in devising educational programs for the state's colleges and universities.

Answer to today's puzzle.

What Type of Employees Are Needed the Most in the Work Force Today?

Celebrate Women Awards Nominations Sought

Recognize and honor those women who shape the state and nation as women achievers. The Eighth Annual Celebrate Women Awards recognize outstanding women from the following categories: arts, traditional handicrafts, business, education, government/public service, labor professional, science, sports and volunteer service.

Anyone may nominate a former or current West Virginia woman. The Celebrate Women winners will be honored during the West Virginia Women's Institute Saturday, May 15, 1993 at the Charleston Civic Center.

Nomination forms must be completed and postmarked or before Monday, February 1, 1993. Nomination forms and award information may be obtained by calling or writing: West Virginia Women's Commission, Building 6, Room 637, Capitol Complex, Charleston, West Virginia, 25305, (304) 558-0070.

THE WESLEY FOUNDATION at GLENVILLE STATE COLLEGE proudly announces a celebration of BLACK HISTORY MONTH

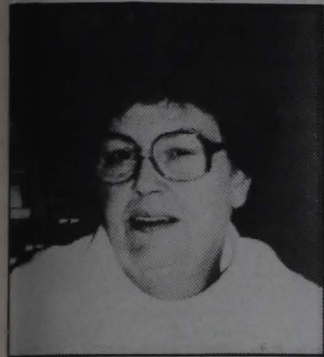

Please join us each Tuesday evening during the month of February as we celebrate Black History Month with a catered meal and a guest speaker, beginning at 6 p.m. each Tuesday evening. Our first speaker on February 3 will be William I. Hairston, one of the first black GSC alumni. Dinner will begin at 6 p.m., followed by Mr. Hairston's address at 7 p.m. All activities are entirely free; but please stop by the Wesley Foundation or call us at 462-7569 if you plan to attend, so we can get an accurate count for dinner.

We're looking forward to seeing you on the 3rd.

Operation Native Talent Job Fair Set for February

Despite a still recovering economy, approximately 60 employers have registered to attend the second Operation Native Talent (ONT) job fair of the 1992-93 academic year. ONT is a job fair program designed to provide recruiters and employers with a cost effective way of meeting college seniors from almost all of West Virginia's colleges and universities.

The day-long job fair will be held Wednesday, February 3, 1993 at the Charleston Civic Center. Hours for the job fair are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m..

The fair is open to all West Virginia college seniors and recent graduates. Students are asked to "dress for success" and bring plenty of resumes. "The recruiters who attend the fair will have the opportunity to meet and interview more than 600 seniors from a variety of disciplines and degrees," said Robert Kent, chairperson of the ONT steering committee and Career Placement Director for West Virginia University.

College placement officers from all of the state's colleges and universities have been participating in the planning and promotion of the fair, Kent said. "The placement officers will publicize to their respective students the names of the employers who will be at the fair and the types of positions they will be seeking to fill."

Lady Pioneers Post 5-1 Record Since Break

The GSC Women's Basketball team has been active since Christmas as they have compiled a 11-6 overall mark.

On January 5, the women traveled to Parkersburg and coasted to a 71-41 win over Ohio Valley College. Nikki Cale led with 24 points and June Shriver added 12 points and 8 rebounds.

On January 7, they traveled to the University of Charleston and won on the road 80-74. Cale again scored 24 points, while Jackie Myers added 23 points and 12 rebounds, and Shriver added 19 points.

The women hosted Wheeling-Jesuit on January 9 and lost for the first time in the new year by a 97-102 count. Cale once again led the way as she poured in a game high 29 points.

The Lady Pioneers turned around on the road as they won their third consecutive road win over Concord with a score of 83-69 on January 11. Cale scored 25 points, as teammates Myers scored 23 points and hauled in 17 rebounds, and Christy Fitzwater recorded 18 points.

The women's team made it with 4 wins in 5 outings on January 13 as they beat Salem-Teikyo at the Pioneer Gym with a score of 84-69. Connecting on 6 of 11 three-points shots, Cale scorched the nets for 31 points, and Lori Slaughter tallied 15 points.

The Lady Pioneers were dealt a loss on January 14 by Fairmont State on a last-second three-pointer to lose 78-79 at the Pioneer Gym. Cale and Myers led the scoring with 28 and 17 points respectively. Slaughter turned in a fine all-round game scoring 13 points and grabbed 16 rebounds.

On January 18, the women hosted the University of Charleston and lost 62-83. The squad, plagued by the flu, struggled in their shooting, as they shot on 37 percent from the floor for the game. Cale scored 17 points and Shriver chipped in with 14 points.

On January 20, the squad traveled north and battled Salem-Teikyo coming up short by a 63-70 count. Poor shooting led to the loss as they only connected on 33 percent of their shots and still many players were hampered by the flu. Myers scored 17 points while Shriver scored 16 and pulled down 11 rebounds.

Pioneers Extend Winning Streak to Six

The GSC Men's Basketball team has compiled a 12-3 record and is off to their best start since 1972. In the process, they have won their last six games.

The men started the new year on January 6 at Salem-Teikyo and lost with a score of 67-71. The Pioneers were ahead by eleven points at half-time, but shot only 25 percent in the second half from the floor. Steve Shuff led the way with 18 points, and Joe Hampton added 16.

On January 9, the squad hosted top-rated Shepherd College and lost, 78-91. Shuff was again the high point scorer with 18, and Bruce Boldley scored 14.

The Pioneers traveled to West Liberty on January 11 and won, 90-86. Hampton scored 23, and senior Dedsi Sanders chipped in with 21.

On January 13, the Pioneers hosted the Falcons of Fairmont State and cruised to a 69-43 win. Boldley led all scorers with 20 points.

The Pioneers were on the road on January 16 at Elkins to battle Davis & Elkins College. The Pioneers blew open a close contest in the second half as they won, going away with 90-64. Mike Fallon and Saunders each scored 15 leading the way as six pioneers scored in double figures.

On January 18, the men hosted Mercyhurst, Pa., and posted an 86-77 win. Boldley scored 18 as Shuff added 17 points.

January 20 found the men hosting the WV Tech Golden Bears coasting to a 92-64 win. Shuff led the Pioneers in scoring with 15.

The Pioneers made it six in a row by beating Alderson-Broaddus and escaped with a win of 62-61 win at Alderson-Broaddus last Saturday. Fallon led the Pioneers as he scored 12 points.

Head Coach Gary Nottingham is pleased with his team's playing and progress but feels they are capable of playing better. Student fan support was also a concern as he felt that students should offer more support to the players as they are currently rated number two in the WVIAC.

John Mark Walkup to Present Piano Recital Sunday

by Tim Marks

Anyone who has walked through the Fine Arts Building has likely heard the clamor of several instruments being practiced at once. Listen a while longer and you will notice the sounds being replaced by new ones as music majors leave for other classes and are replaced by others. After all the rooms are quiet, one sound remains -- a piano. Night after night you can find John Walkup at his piano bench.

In addition to his responsibilities as a music teacher, Walkup makes it a rule to practice four to six hours every day. Why? Because on Sunday, January 31, at 3:00 p.m. he will give his first recital as a teacher at GSC. He will perform pieces by Mozart, Mendelssohn, Rachmaninoff and Ginastera.

He began planning the program in the spring of 1992. This recital is important to him because it is a step towards his goal of realizing his full musical potential. "Unfortunately, reaching that level is an ongoing process and you must have discipline," says Walkup. The recital is also important because it gives his students a chance to hear some of the things they are asked to do. When asked if the added responsibilities of teaching make it more difficult to reach his goal as a musician, he said, "It is difficult while teaching but there is time. It takes discipline to find practice hours."

Performing at Glenville State is certainly nothing new for Walkup. He spent five years as a music major at GSC and gave many solo performances during that time. Returning to the stage as a teacher is different. "As a teacher it is different because you must tell yourself the things to do to deliver a good musical performance. It isn't more intimidating, but the desire to deliver a musical performance is certainly there."

After graduating from GSC Walkup taught for six months in public schools before accepting an assistantship at the University of Illinois where he received his master's in piano pedagogy. He is now in his second year of teaching at Glenville State College. Walkup, who is also an avid football fan, says not to worry about missing the Superbowl, for he will start playing at three and will finish by four.

Movie Review

A Few Good Men

by Todd Pettit

The title says everything; with a cast that includes Tom Cruise, Jack Nicholson, Kiefer Sutherland and Kevin Bacon, "A Few Good Men" is one of the finest ensemble pieces on screen, fueled by more testosterone than a beer commercial. Throw in a tough-as-nails lieutenant (Demi Moore) and directions by "Misery's" Rob Reiner, and this ultimate courtroom drama is a likely Oscar contender.

Code Red, a relatively harmless practice by Marines to punish unit members who are less than adequate, turns into murder at a Cuban war base, and two young Marines are arrested. Their defense turns out to be a wisecracking Navy attorney (Tom Cruise), a year out of law school. He is prepared to plea bargain the Marines until a lawyer (Demi Moore), hungry for respect in a "man's world," convinces him the outlawed Code Red was ordered by superiors illegally. Their investigation eventually brings a gung-ho colonel (growling, grizzled Nicholson-superb) to the stand, a move that could have both attorneys court-marshalled while searching for the truth.

The tension between Cruise and Nicholson, between the old Guard and the new, is a convincing generation gap as these two stars go for each other's throats in a pretense of acting. They're entralling in their roles as mutually despising military men, flip sides of the same coin (one of them could be thanking the Academy in a few weeks), and their skills save "A Few Good Men" from becoming too pretentious to be entertaining.

In-House III Features Works of Art Majors

by Tim Marks

Glenville State College's art majors will be displaying their works in the Art Gallery of the Fine Arts Building until February 5. The exhibit is called In-House III and marks the third such exhibit since the new Fine Arts Building was opened.

In-House III gives the art majors a chance to see their works in a gallery setting while allowing the rest of the students to have exposure to their art works. Among the featured artists are sculptist Terry Fisher and Ellie Wilson who received a tuition waiver for her work.

Many of the works will be for sale by the artists. If anyone is interested in purchasing a piece of the art, they should contact Debbie Starcher in the Fine Arts Office. Payments should be made by check, but cash will be accepted.

The Gallery will be open for viewing between 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. on weekdays, and also one hour before scheduled performances.

If the gallery is locked during these times, someone in the Fine Arts Office will be glad to open it.

Organizations

Delta Zeta

The Theta Xi chapter of Delta Zeta wants to welcome everyone back this semester. The Delta Zeta sorority had a formal meeting on January 14. In this meeting we discussed an agenda for the upcoming months.

Congratulations go out to Kari McCallister, Tina Mann and Tammy Bush for finishing successfully through pledging. Initiation is all that is left, and it's just around the corner.

To all girls who are interested in a sorority, Formal Rush starts January 31 at 8:00 p.m. in the Ballroom. There will be tables set up in the Heflin Center January 25 to 28 to sign up for Formal Rush. For those of you girls who are interested in rushing, Formal Rush will give you a chance to learn and get familiar with sororities. Through the week of Rush Week there will be night activities starting at 8:00 p.m. sponsored by one or both of the sororities.

For all you girls who have been wanting to get involved in extra activities, this is a great opportunity and you'll get to meet many other girls. We hope to see you sign up and see you on January 31.

A reminder to all Delta Zetas: we have a Panhellenic meeting Thursday, January 28, at 12:45.

Happy Birthday, Claudia! We love you!

Baptist Campus Ministry

Hello, from BCM. Since this is our first chance to get back in touch, we hope you all had a good Christmas break and that all of your classes are going well.

Our first meeting of the semester was held January 26. We joined in praising Jesus Christ. We also discussed plans for this semester. Any new ideas the campus community may have for Christian activities are welcome.

Our weekly meetings will continue to be on Tuesday nights in the Verona Mapel Room. The time has been moved up to 7:00 p.m., however, so students can have time to both fellowship and do their homework on the same night.

Committed Christians on campus are encouraged to attend our weekly Bible Study on Thursday evenings starting this week at 8:00 p.m.

We look forward to seeing previous BCM members as well as new faces. Bring a friend and relax within our uplifting fellowship.

Tri-Sigma

Welcome back, everyone, and good luck as the second semester begins. Our Sigma Christmas party was held on December 16. We had a great time exchanging gifts, Christmas caroling at the local nursing home, and wrapping gifts for the children in the Gilmer County Head Start Program. A special thank you goes to Wal-Mart of Weston for their donations, to Sandi Jones and Christel Hoffman for their extra time spent getting the gifts for the children and to all members and pledges who helped with these activities in any way. We love you!

A reminder to all Sigmas that a Panhellenic meeting will be held Thursday, January 28, at 12:45 p.m. in the Administration Building Theatre.

ATTENTION ALL GIRLS! Formal Rush will begin Sunday, January 31, and will end Sunday, February 7. This is your chance to join a sorority. Look for signs on campus for more details.

Come out and support the GSC basketball teams as the Pioneers take on WV State February 3 and the Lady Pioneers take on West Liberty on January 30 and WV Tech on February 1. All these games will be played at home. Good luck teams!
