Glenville State College March 3, 1993 Volume 64 Number 20

March 5 Marks Fiftieth Year as 'Glenville State College'

y Lisa Haye

When Glenville State College was first established by the West Virginia Legislature on February 19, 1872, it was known as the "Glenville Branch of the State Normal School of West Virginia." Twenty-five years later, in 1898, the school was given the name Glenville State Normal School.

As a normal school, the instiution offered wo-year programs for teacher education with courses in history, philosophy of education, methodology and instructional principles. However, preparatory courses for the college were also authorized, and other degrees were offered as well.

On March 4, 1931, the state legslature passed a pill re-naming the school Glenville State Teachers College. During he 1930s, the granting of the Bachelor of Arts degrees were uthorized, and on March 5, 1943, a bill was bassed by the state legislature changing the name of the school to Glenville State College to properly represent the expanding curriculum. This year will mark the fiftieth anniversary of that name.

During the school's first year as Glenville State College, there were only 143 students enolled. Considering the graduating class of 1942 and 73 students, the student body of 1943 was exceptionally small. After the United States enered World War II in 1941, more and more male students joined the armed services. As a result, a najority of the students in 1943 was female.

In a year when American citizens faced ations, Glenville State's tuition was $50.00.

Books cost $15.00, lab fees were $4.00 and the student activity fee was a harsh $10.00. Students who lived on campus payed a little less than $200.00 for room and board and honored a 10:00 p.m. curfew. Commuters were few, mostly from Gilmer County, and many rode to school on the Greyhound buses which ran twice a day.

In 1943, there was no student union, no bowling alley and no national fraternities or sororities. Many students spent their spare time at YMCA, YWCA or downtown at the drug stores drinking fountain sodas. Athletes joined the G-Club, commuters joined the Commuter Club, while others joined the Drama Club or participated in the Holy Roller Court. (Holy Roller Court was a fraternity which, during the year 1942-43, conducted a scrap drive for the war effort and launched a work program to help local citizens with such jobs as working victory gardens, mowing and cleaning lawns, washing windows and helping with spring cleaning.) Very few students had access to a car.

Because of the war, the class of 1943 had no yearbook, and this year, the Kanawhachen will be using the fiftieth anniversary of the school name as the basis for the yearbook theme. Anyone having pictures or interesting information of that memorable year to share with the staff is asked to contact Angie Meadows, editor of the Kanawhachen, in the Mercury Office, extension 290.

Congratulations, Glenville State College, on the fiftieth anniversary of your highly reputable name. You've come a long way.

by Todd Pettit

Prior to coming to GSC, Peyser was employed in New York City as a human resources consultant working with colleges. She enjoyed working with them so much that she decided to make a career change and began searching for openings on college campuses, which landed her in Glenville. Her job as placement officer combines all the things she liked in her old job with the added benefit of working with college students.

Peyser helps students develop job-seeking skills, finds opportunities for students and keeps an eye on the ever-changing job market. She enjoys everything about her job, but her biggest reward is to see seeing students approach the job market with confidence.

Her change in jobs was accompanied by a massive change in culture. Top on her

She also enjoys being able to know her neighbors, go fishing, have a puppy and spend more time with her family. She leaves behind scenes of the homeless, crime and other aspects of fastpace city life that she won't miss. What she does miss is being able to buy fresh flowers year 'round and having a place to shop close by.

Peyser has already taken advantage of her newly-found leisure by acting the part of Heidi in the GSC production of "The Heidi Chronicles."

She encourages students to take advantage of the Placement Office by stopping in and using the resources available to them. She can help students find anything from a suitable career to a summer job.

Public Card Catalog Closed

As of January 1, 1993, the public card catalog in the Robert F. Kidd Library was "closed." What does this mean to you?

- 1. Currently it is necessary to use both a VTLS terminal and the public card catalog to access all the 120,000 books in the library.
- 2. All books acquired since January 1 are accessible only using one of the VTLS terminals.
- 3. All of the books that have circulated January 1 are available only on the VTLS terminals.
- 4. Almost all of the books acquired in the last 10 years, 70,000 volumes, are available on the VTLS terminals.
- 5. The pre-1982 books are available only in the public card catalog until they circulate once. Then they are removed from the card catalog and entered in VTLS.
- 6. Within the next few years, the public card catalog will be completely phased out.

Editorial—

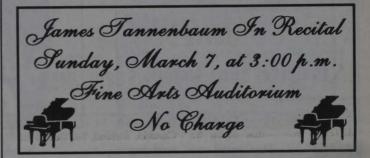

Where are Their Morals?

It's not every week that letters to the editor are written and sent in, especially to a small paper such as this one. However, I feel honored knowing that readers take the time to write about a particular subject. The last letters received, which appeared in the "In My Opinion . . ." column, were written by GSC students who were bothered about the violence that seemed to be spreading throughout Glenville.

When the violence first began several weeks ago, rumor had it that the violence was due to racial and social problems among several coteries comprised of both GSC students and non-students. Whether these rumors are true or not I do not know, but racial problems and social problems are forms of immature thinking.

What a shame it is to see names, of especially fellow students, printed in the crime reports column of local newspapers. Perhaps a college course of etiquette and cultural knowledge should be required before completion of a degree.

Immature thinking, resulting in actions of reproach, puts a bad label on GSC as well as the students who attend the institution. Until relation problems dwindle down, immature thinking could be the death of someone.

The men's basketball team finished the regular season in second place, but were upset by the University of Charleston 66-65 last Thursday in the second round of the WVIAC Tournament.

Although they lost, the Pioneers are still in the running for an at-large berth in the National Tournament. They finished the year with a 21-5 record, the best finish in school history since 1972.

Josh Sirch lead in scoring with 14 points, while Mike

Fallon added 12 in the loss to Charleston. Poor shooting was one of the factors in the loss as they made 24 of 70 attempts for a 34 percent field goal percent-

Head Coach Gary Nottingham stated, "We chose the wrong night to play our worst game of the season," regarding the loss to UC, who went on to win the WVIAC tourney.

Announcement of the National Tournament selections will be made next week.

Lady Pioneers End Season With 20-9 Record

ketball team ended their season last Monday with a loss to Bluefield State in the semi-finals of the WVIAC Tournament.

Senior Jackie Myers led in scoring with 14 points, and June Shriver scored 13 and pulled down 10 rebounds. They finished the season with a 10-9 record which ties for the best record in school history.

Seniors Nikki Cale and Jackie Myers played their final games finishing in the top ten in scoring for a career at GSC. Cale finished with a total of 1,979 points in four years and is

The GSC women's bas- the school's leading scorer in history. Myers finished fourth on the All-Team Scoring Lists with 1,455 points.

> Head Coach Russell Shepherd was pleased with the team's performance this year. "We had a good year," he said. "We came on at the end. We will lose two really good players that have been just super, Jackie Myers and Nikki Cale."

Myers and Shriver were named to the WVIAC All-Tournament Team. Shriver also received the Sportsmanship Award, which was voted on by the conference officials. Myers and Shriver won for their good playing and sportsmanship.

Glenville State Students Invited to High Tech Job Fair in Buckhannon

On Saturday, March 27, the North Central Chapter of Software Valley will be sponsoring a High Tech Job Fair. Approximately 20 employers from the area will be interviewing. They are seeking graduates with a bachelor's degree to fill such computing positions as programmers, desk top publishing, computer graphics and the like.

Students from four colleges have been invited: GSC, Alderson-Broaddus, Davis and Elkins and West Virginia Wesleyan. Since attendance is limited to these schools, there should be plenty of time for GSC students to interview with an employer. This is an excellent opportunity for students who are seeking high tech jobs and wish to stay in the area.

The Job Fair will be held at the Bicentennial Motel in Buckhannon from 9:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. During the morning session, employers will be making presentations about their companies and the skills they are seeking; in the afternoon, they will be conducting interviews. There will be a luncheon, and the Honorable Cecil Underwood, former governor of West Virginia and former president of Software Valley Foundation, will be the keynote

Students wishing to attend should register with the Careers Office by March 5. There is a cost of $8.00 per person to attend. Lunch is included in the cost.

If you have questions, call Brenda Peyser or Eleanor Nicholas, extension 118.

Sea Creatures Exhibit on Display in Ad. Building

by Sharon Gladwell

Coastal creatures of the kelp forest are on display on the third floor of the Administration Building.

The exhibit features creatures that live in the kelp forest off the coast of southern California such as whales, sea lions, an eel, anemones, a neubabank and garbaldi fish.

The exhibition was prepared by the Art 360 Applied Art Media and Methods class and instructor George Harper. This subject was chosen to combine art and science.

Billboard paper and shredded paper were the main materials used for this project. These materials were to be thrown away, but instead were used as a means of recycling.

The project will be on exhibit for several weeks. Everyone is invited to stop by and view these creatures.

Movie Review

Nowhere To Run

by Todd Pettit

He rides a cycle like the "Terminator," loves kids like a "Kindergarten Cop," and kicks butt like a "Commando," but Jean Claude Van Damme cannot quite match up to Schwarzenegger in size (Van Damme's 5' 10" to Arnold's 6' 1") or in talent. It's a fact that continues to elude the "Muscles From Brussels" as he plays the clone in a string of low-budget, high-rent pieces of screen popcorn.

His newest movie casts him as a Canadian thief who escapes a prison bus and heads for the wide-open Midwest, where his German-Nazi-Schwarzeneggerish accent prompts a local vokel to ask. "You ain't from around here. are va?" Van Damme sheds his prison blues, dons a cowboy ensemble and takes up homesteading with a knockout widow and her two chipmunklike children. It's a love-themom, tolerate-the-kids love story in the middle of what looks like a misplaced piece of

"Field of Dreams."

The widowed mother (Rosanna Arquette) happens to be knee deep in manure herself (a fact an escaped convict can appreciate) as she fights to keep her acreage away from the greediness of land developers out to make a quick buck. Van Damme arrives to save the day.

Entertainment at its most soppiest, "Nowhere to Run" is the kind of celluloid that's made Van Damme famous and made us fans of his tough action movies.

The Heidi Chronicles

by Mack Samples

Those of us who struggled out into the "Frigid February" evenings last week and took in "The Heidi Chronicles" were treated to some first rate entertainment. Such events are, of course, one of the best reasons to work around a college. You can take in a play, a concert or an athletic event with very little effort and at a modest cost

This particular play gave us a good look at those who struggled with the changing forces of life in the '60s and '70s. The generation which came along after "Happy Days" decided that life was all wrong and set about to change it.

Brenda Peyser, her maturity and experience evident, was superb as Heidi, the typical Pepsi generation woman who decided that the supporting role that women had played for centuries was wrong. Grayson Samples, though handicapped by his youth, did a credible job as Scoop Rosenbaum. Scoop recognizes what is happening around him and probably supports all of the changes, but he is not ready to be a part of it yet. He gives lip service to the "movement" but prefers to take the conservative route for himself.

David Miller handled a very difficult part well. Bringing homosexuality out of the closet has proven to be a much more painful task than bringing women out of the kitchen. Modern women have pretty much put their chins forward and taken their lumps. But many homosexuals have retreated to the closet, not quite willing to accept the abuse being hurled at them. The supporting cast was very good, and the tech people did an outstanding job. Nancy Wemm is to be commended for a great effort.

It is unfortunate that much of the humor went over the heads of the mostly young audience. Those of us who witnessed the gut-wrenching changes of the '60s and '70s, who saw the cities burning on television, who saw the protests turn ugly and who smelled the tear gas on college greens, caught the humor and had a better appreciation of the play itself. But there was something for everyone to enjoy.

Finally, that not too pretty era of our country produced some mighty good music, and we got to relive some of it. Was it Wayne deRosset who did the sound track? If so, he finally did something worthwhile.

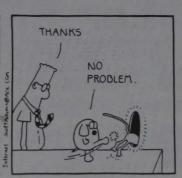

Editor's Note: A review of "The Heidi Chronicles" by David Graham will appear in the next issue.

Trying to find suitable housing off campus is like trying to find a parking space at noon on campus. Your landlord chain smokes, considers the Beatles "too loud" and says, "no pets--too unhygienic" as if we're supposed to believe a mold-eaten floor and a soggy carpet are signs of clean-

But I was tired of dorm rooms and rules that seemed established during the Middle Ages, so I began the search for my ideal place. In truth, I was searching for freedon--peace, liberty, justice and the American way-mainly involving girls and how to get them to home.

"No girls," the landlord snarls. "And no alcohol," she announces ominously.

We've reached the end of our tour, surrounded by a lumpy couch and bare walls. I think of a monastery

"No thanks," I say.

For a hundred dollars more, I can have a scrubbed cubicle situated between other scrubbed cubicles downtown. The landlord here is like Telly Savalas, and his demeanor doesn't exactly dispel the image of a psycho killer. But, this, this, I tell my friends, is

"A chair here, a throw rug there and my Budweiser poster on the door. Pure class," I think. "It's perfection."

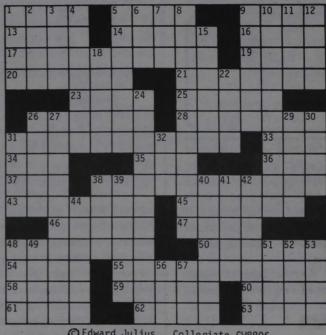

Later, I find out perfection does not fit within my budget.

With my ego shot out of the clouds, I meander restlessly through other apartments. Too ugly. Too damp. A green tinged sofa thoughtfully left by previous tenants. A new form of penicillin sprouting in the toilet. I open a cabinet door and see dead cockroaches sprawled in heaps across

My God, do I actually want a place where the cockroaches die? I think, then I close the cabi-

So it's back to the dorms I go, hi-ho. Back to the Middle Ages. Freedom fleetin', it was nice knowing you.

Careers Office Activities

Got a resume? Feel prepared for an interview? The Careers Office can help you. For the next few months, workshops will be offered to help you write a resume and strengthen your interview skills. The workshops being offered

- · Resume Preparation: Workshop helps you write a resume that will capture an employer's attention.
- · Mock Interviews: How do you prepare for an interview? What do you say at an interview? What don't you say at an interview? We will focus on presentation skills, a key component of successful interviewing. Interviews will be videotaped so you can see yourself in action--before you meet with an employer.
- · Confidence Building: Nervous when you meet new people? Terrified of interview situations? Feel that your skills are not what an employer wants? This workshop will help you learn why you should feel good about yourself, recognize the qualities that make you unique and valuable, and develop techniques to help you relax in pressure situations.

· Business Etiquette: What is the protocol in a business setting? Who is in charge? What do you do at a business luncheon? How do you organize a committee's work? This workshop focuses on the practical, but usually misunderstood, aspects of working in any organization.

All workshops are "hands on" and fun, as well as informative. Sessions have been scheduled to allow each of you the opportunity to attend before the semester ends. Call the Careers Office at extension 118 to sign up; we need to know in advance if you're coming.
