An Evening with Rachael Worby and the Wheeling Symphony

by David Graham

The phone rang, it was Dr. Gillespie. "If you're going to interview her, now would be the best time." Oh no, the moment. I had been looking forward to this all week and now the big moment had arrived.

I grabbed my notes and headed down to the Fine Arts Building where Rachael Worby awaited. I kept telling myself the first steps of interviewing over and over: introduce yourself, thank the person for the time they are giving you, and most of all be polite.

When I arrived she was in Mr. Wemm's office talking to some members of the Wheeling Symphony. I waited in the hall, thinking, "be polite, don't make a fool of yourself." Finally she motioned for me to come in and the interview began. Rachael Worby is such a dynamic person; I immediately felt at ease.

Explore Diverse Cultures at the Second Annual Multicultural Fair

by Kim Groves

Find out just what other cultures can offer you. The second annual Multicultural Fair will be held on the Glenville State College campus September 20 through September 23.

The fair will cover important issues of multicultural education through a variety of activities, including international food seminars, folk dancing, and lectures.

The coordinators of the events are Deanna Foxworthy and Brenda Wilson. According to Mrs. Wilson, "the idea of the fair is to explore the question of how we can live together as a society."

It is important for everyone to increase awareness so we can live peacefully with cultural diversity, without judgments and assumptions.

Several educational activities are scheduled throughout the week. An Indian Food Seminar is scheduled for Tuesday, September 21 at 7 p.m. Tickets are limited. Please contact Kelly Osborne at extension 119 for information.

An International Food Fest is scheduled for Thursday, September 23, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the Amphitheater. This will give you the opportunity to sample a variety of foods from diverse cultures.

Other activities scheduled for the week include a panel discussion and film on multicultural issues. Mrs. Wilson says the film, Daughters of the Dust, which will be shown in the Little Theater in the Administration Building, is "the kind of film you won't get to see elsewhere."

Humanities scholars involved in the seminars and the panel discussion include Dr. Leander Jones, a professor of Black American Studies at Western Michigan University; Norman Jordan and Chari Lucero who are both visiting instructors at West Virginia University; Laura Martinez, a human service advocate with the Michigan Department of Social Services; and Dr. Vijaya Rao, professor of Sociology and Social Work at West Virginia Wesleyan.

Coordinators Deanna Foxworthy and Brenda Wilson stress the importance of cultural awareness and urge all of you to attend. They can be reached at extensions 300 and 303, respectively, for information.

The Multicultural Fair at Glenville State is funded in part by a grant from the West Virginia Humanities Council.

The banner outside Heflin Center welcomes all for the Multicultural Fair, September 20-23.

The Real Story on Stafford Loans

by Holly Wilkewitz

If you are reading this, chances are you are one of approximately 650 students impatiently awaiting the arrival of your Stafford Loan.

So, what's the deal with the loans, anyway? Why are students having to wait until mid-October? A talk with Financial Aid Director Mr. August Kafer revealed some informative answers, and one other thing--the financial aid office is not at fault.

First of all, Glenville State College must go through verification of each recipient's file. This may take only three to five minutes per case on the new computer system, but sometimes this is still not quite quick enough. This is due to the fact that only one computer can be used, and there is only one computer hooked up to the Pennsylvania office that gives the go-ahead on the check after verification.

Why is there only one terminal? Because it costs GSC $25 a month to hook up to the main terminal for a full year contract.

This kills the idea of using the computer only at the busiest times, mainly the first few months of the fall semester. And the GSC budget just can not take an extra $300 a year.

Also, each file must be approved by specific guidelines set by the federal government--major guidelines. These guidelines are in two "handbooks" about a foot thick each, plus a "summary of changes" handbook about eight inches thick. The classic "red tape syndrome" is in full swing.

Another aspect greatly slowing down the process is the horrendous amount of calls that come in to the office everyday. Ms. Carla Conley, who actually does the verification, has to stop for a phone calls sometimes 30 times a day, everyday. Everytime a student calls with questions, that's one or two people who now won't be getting their files verified until a day later. This really starts to add up. Mr. Kafer asks that students please hold off on calling for at least a couple of weeks with loan questions.

If you are a first time borrower, your file must wait 30 days before going through procedures according to federal government guidelines. This also causes delays.

So, what can be done? Very little, really, except waiting for the checks. Nothing is being done to upgrade the office and, as noted earlier, with budget constraints, there are no plans for another computer hook-up.

In the meantime rent is due for many students. For others, there are no books for classes. And, with the emergency loan funds depleted (except for $25 loans) there is no help to be found.

The Financial Aid Office has tried to do its best. But with more and more students on campus--resulting in more and more loan recipients, the problem may only get worse. "We thought we did a fairly good job," Mr. Kafer said. "But we just have too many loans."

If its any consolation, Fairmont State is having the same problem, as well as other campuses throughout the nation. Ms. Conley is taking into consideration worst case scenarios when approximating the estimated time of arrival of your check. Chances are it will be early.

So, back to the question of what can be done. The only ray of hope for all this red tape is the proposed Federal Direct Student Loan Program derived by the Clinton Administration. This will allow student loans to come directly from the government, cutting out several steps of the verification process; thus, cutting down on the amount of time it takes you to get your check in hand. And, hey, that's all you ever wanted anyway.

CAN YOU READ THIS?

Here's a frightening statistic: 47% of Americans cannot read English well enough to fill out a job application. That means that almost half of America can't read a textbook, directions, a newspaper, or my column. Half of America has never shivered with Stephen King, cried with V.C. Andrews, or been able to read the Bible. Can the blame be placed on public education today? I don't think so. Students who can't read can find ways around it; they're not stupid, they just can't read. So if not the school system, what's the problem? I can think of a few other contributing factors.

One is our immigration policy. It is possible that some of these people are not truly illiterate--they can read. They just can't read English. I wonder what will happen if the free trade agreement goes through.

Another factor is television--America's connection to commercialism and propaganda. Often, people would rather watch re-runs than turn off the tube and pick up a book. Plus, television was the baby-sitter of almost a whole generation. (Those of you with HBO can recall the beginning and basis of the show "Dream On.") Of course the baby-sitter of this generation is Nintendo. (I really hate Nintendo.) Never in my life have I seen a greater waste of time than that spent playing Nintendo. Nintendo is creating a generation that hasn't read Robinson Crusoe, The Hardy Boys, or The Nancy Drew Mysteries, much less the directions to Mario Brothers.

What can be done? Quite a bit. We are in charge of the next generation. If you have children, read to them, take them to the library, be a living example. If you do watch television, turn on the closed caption (which is a mandatory addition to all televisions made after 1992), so your children will see the words as they hear them. Boycott Nintendo (I really hate Nintendo). How can you stand to watch your children waste such time? Send them outside to play and exercise their bodies, or give them a book to help exercise their minds. If you don't have children, volunteer to help others. The rise in illiteracy must be stopped.

GSC Chemistry Professor Anticipates Program Grant

by Amy Jo Rowan

The Glenville State College Chemistry Program, under the direction of Dr. Mary Jo Pribble, professor of Chemistry, will soon be innovating an array of new technology with the receipt of a $5000 grant.

This innovation will occur with the purchase of the High Performance Liquid Chromatograph featured in the September 2 issue of The Mercury. Dr. Pribble is looking forward to this addition and hopes to advance the progress of the Chemistry Program by using it.

Growing up in Ritchie County, Dr. Pribble attended Harrisville High School. Upon receiving her diploma, she attended Maryville College in Tennessee. It is here that she earned a Bachelors Degree in Chemistry. Dr. Pribble obtained a Masters Degree in Chemistry at Duke University in North Carolina. She then worked to earn a Ph.D. from Louisiana State University.

Dr. Pribble began her career as a professor in 1954 at Davis and Elkins College. Through the years she has taught at various colleges and universities, including: Marietta College of Ohio, Marshall University, and Limestone College of South Carolina. In addition to teaching, Dr. Pribble worked as a literature chemist for the Ethyl Corporation in Baton Rouge, Louisiana from 1959 to 1961.

As a chemistry professor at Glenville State College, Dr. Pribble enjoys her job and its rewards. She is proud of the progress the Chemistry Program is having this year.

She hopes that the purchase of the High Performance Liquid Chromatograph will give graduates of Chemistry and Biology Programs a better chance of obtaining a position in a laboratory upon graduating.

She also noted that knowledge of this instrument is necessary for people in the medical, dental, and pharmaceutical fields. "This instrument is very useful as a means of separating mixtures of substances. It will also help the Chemistry Program to reach its goal of preparing students for a career in Chemistry."

Dr. Pribble also commented that the High Performance Liquid Chromatograph "will make GSC more competitive with other colleges in the science field."

Dr. Pribble resides in Glenville. In her spare time she enjoys gardening and listening to music. Dr. Pribble often attends performances by the West Virginia Symphony in Charleston. She has also served as an elder at the Presbyterian Church she attends.

Would you like to have 24-hour visitation in the dorms? Why?

by Heather Messenger

NAME: Kathy Copen

RANK: Senior

MAJOR: Behavioral Science/Criminal Justice

HOMETOWN: Charleston

ANSWER: "It really doesn't matter. Even though it would be nice, there is nothing you can do after 11 that you can't do between 12 and 11."

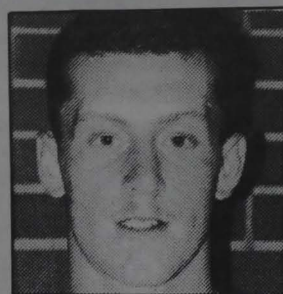

NAME: Toni Hall

RANK: Freshman

MAJOR: Forensic Psychology

HOMETOWN: Clendenin

ANSWER: "Yes, because I can see someone longer. I have classes all day, and I don't have time during the regular visitation hours."

NAME: Bill Riggleman

RANK: Freshman

MAJOR: Business Management

HOMETOWN: Petersburg, WV

ANSWER: "Yes I would, because this is college and we are adults but they are treating us like kids in junior high."

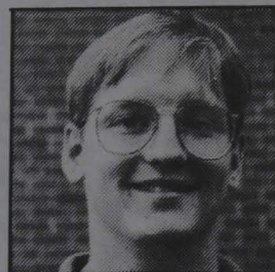

NAME: Misty Taylor

RANK: Junior

MAJOR: Multi-subject/Pre-K

HOMETOWN: Weston, WV

ANSWER: "Absolutely. I'm 20 years old and I'm treated like a child here. I have paid my fees, why shouldn't I have the freedom of responsibility? I don't sign-in at home. Why bother here? Why waste time when I'm supposed to be learning the adult world."

NAME: Keith Jean

RANK: Junior

MAJOR: Music Education (K-12)

HOMETOWN: Charleston

ANSWER: "Yes. I feel that when people come to college they should be treated as adults. If they want a member of the opposite sex to stay in their room for a night that is their business."

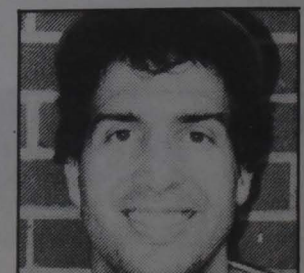

NAME: Sean McAndrews

RANK: Director of Activities, Programming and Residence Hall

MAJOR: M.A. Student Personnel, WVU 1992

HOMETOWN: Weirton, WV

ANSWER: "Yes, I would like to see 24 hour visitation so the students would stop complaining about it. You would still have to sign in and out, and you would have to institute policies to protect roommate rights and the constant shakers on a male or female floor. You would also need to institute policies dealing with restroom usage and people who are extremely noisy during coitus. I feel 24 hour visitation won't keep students on the weekend. The only thing it will do is let me, Jerry, and Bea have a few longer nights of sleep."

Pioneers Pummel J.C. Smith in Home Opener

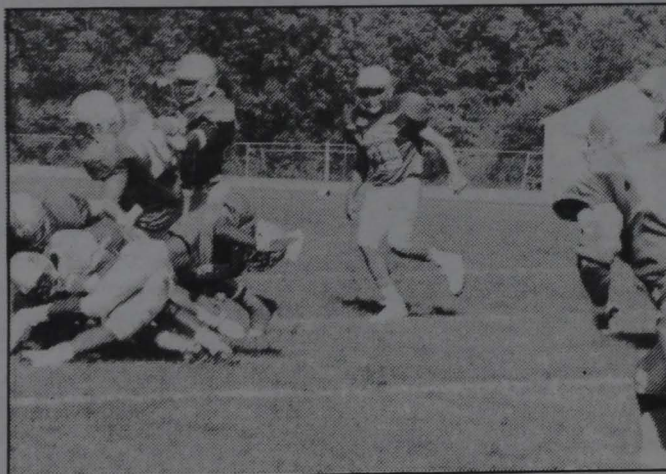

by Sean Davis

The Pioneer football team scored 20 points in both the second and third periods to give them their first win of the season, 45-0, over Johnson C. Smith University. In the win the Pioneers amassed 627 yards of total offense, while the defense played very solid football in limiting the Golden Bulls offense to just 167 yards of total offense. According to Head Coach Rich Rodriguez, "the defense played very, very well."

Linebacker Shane Beatty accounted for 15 tackles, one quarterback sac and a pass interception in the win. Rodney Fox and Tom Reid added seven tackles a piece. Reid also recorded a pass interception.

After a sluggish start and only five points to show after the first quarter, the offense put things together in the second and third quarter to win. Wide receiver Chris George caught 13 passes for 284 yards and one touchdown. Running back Shane Haddox led the ground game with 108 yards on 16 carries. Overall the Pioneers racked up 255 yards on 55 carries. Haddox also had four touchdowns. Quarterback Jed Drenning connected on 19 of 37 passes for 372 yards, and 3 touchdown passes. Wide receiver Gerald Lewis had a 34-yard touchdown pass.

Next up is Newport News of Virginia, Saturday. Kickoff is set for 1:30 p.m. at Newport News.

Pioneer Athletic Club Kicking Off Their Fundraising Season

by April Ludle

Under the direction of Steve Harold, the Pioneer Athletic Club has a lot of work ahead of them. The object of the club is to raise money for athletic scholarships.

They must have several fund raisers in order to reach their goal. Some are taking place right now. Fundraisers currently include: placing season tickets on sale, the tickets that get you in to every home game for all sports; posting the billboards you see at the field and in the gym; selling seat cushions at the football games, which are sponsored by Pizza Hut; and at all the games you will find several teams working the concession stands.

Each team is required to work three games a year. Coach Harold stated, "We find this to be very successful, because people learn who is on what team and they get to talk to the team members."

Other things to come this year will be: a pig roast during homecoming, raffle tickets to give away a clock donated by Rube Stump, (this too will happen at the homecoming game), 50/50 drawings, a pizza shoot out, an elimination dinner, and a card show.

For more information on the activities, contact Coach Harold. Also, keep an eye on the Mercury for all of the upcoming events from the Pioneer Athletic Club.

by Sean Davis

The Women's volleyball team evened up their season record at 3-3 last Friday with a thrilling win at home over Bluefield College of Virginia.

Nikki Hardman recorded 14 kills along with nine blocks in the win. Shelly Coffman aided in the attack with nine kills, and Patsy Buckles again led the way in assists by racking up 28 in the match. Kim Sees deserves mention with 14 digs.

The Lady Spikers opened the match with an easy 15-6 win. In the second game Bluefield evened the score by winning 13-15, but the Pioneers took game three by a 15-10 count. In game four, they took control early and won 15-8. The final scoring for the day was 15-6, 13-15, 15-10, and 15-8.

Monday the women hosted a triangular match with West Liberty and the University of Charleston. The Pioneers struggled in their opening match with West Liberty, winning the opening game but then falling in the last two games for a final count of 15-11, 9-15, and 8-15. Hardman again led the way with 11 kills and Buckles added 22 assists.

The women then battled the University of Charleston. Coffman's 4 kills and Buckles' 7 assists led the way for the Lady Pioneers, but UC proved to be too much on Monday as they won easily 4-15 and 3-15. Their record falls to 3-5 overall and are 0-0 in the WVAC. UC won the triangular match by beating both GSC and West Liberty.

The Lady Spikers will look to rebound Thursday as they travel to Parkersburg to do battle with Ohio Valley College. Saturday the Pioneers will see action in the UC Tournament. Glenville, along with eight other teams, will take part in a Round Robin Tournament Format.

Governor Caperton, Rachael Worby, Mrs. Simmons, and President Simmons at the reception after the evening's thrilling performance.

The first question I asked Mrs. Worby was what she enjoys of the symphony as an individual. She paused a moment to think of an answer. With sincere honesty she answered, "Music flows through my veins. I have to be with music, it is my greatest passion. I feel lonely without music." In regards to conducting, Worby stated, "I love to work with a collection of musicians, and to work with the spirit of the group."

I asked how the Wheeling Symphony has grown since she became musical director and Worby answered with obvious pride in the work she has done. "The number of concerts have quadrupled in my eight seasons. This enables the symphony to continue with its goal of education. With the increase in the numbers of concerts, the more chances to reach a broader and more diverse audience."

Worby preceded to describe her work as the musical director. Besides the obvious, physical conducting, Worby has to rehearse the orchestra, audition and hire members, chose the guest artist, pick the music, and meet with people in regards to booking and other public interviews.

I asked if the music to be presented in the concert had a theme. It turned out that the theme was "music that was banned or censored."

The program included Felix Mendelssohn's Piano Concerto No. 1 in G Minor and Kurt Weill's The Threepenny Opera Suite, both of which were banned in Nazi Germany because the composers were Jewish. Vivaldi's concerto in C Major was banned because the Catholic Church, at the time, disapproved of members of the church writing music. Stalin put limitations on Prokofiev's Classical Symphony and Richard Wagner's Siegfried Idyll was banned in Israel because of Hitler's use his music in World War II.

The concert itself was fantastic. The orchestra was in great form as Worby emitted her normal warmth, while asking the audience to respond to the music they were hearing. As she did last year, Worby invited anyone who wanted to come and sit with the Orchestra to join her on stage. It is truly wonderful to watch Worby interact with the audience, especially the children.

Warren Davidson performed a wonderful solo on the Mandolin during the Vivaldi concerto, yet the real highlight of the evening was watching Sally Pinkas' hands blur as they traveled up and down the 88 keys on the piano.

Rachael Worby and Sally Pinkas, along with the members of the symphony are all-stars of the world of music and I'm very glad Glenville had a chance to witness them shine in an evening filled with great splendor and talent. At the reception after the performance, Worby paid Glenville a great compliment by saying, "Wonderful things happen here that don't happen anywhere else."

Movie Review ...

Slater Sets Up For "True Romance"

by David H. Graham

"True Romance" rated R, starring: Christian Slater, Patricia Arquette, Dennis Hopper, Christopher Walken, Brad Pitt, Val Kilmer, Gary Oldman, Bronson Pinchot, and Michael Rapaport.

It is difficult to categorize the movie "True Romance." At one moment it appears to be a romantic comedy. Then, in an instant, it becomes an action adventure. This shift continues until it is obvious that this film is all of the above and does not want to be categorized. In fact, the inconsistency in themes compliment this, at times, offbeat movie rather than detract from it. This lack of restraint allows the film to flow and enables the audience to move along with the characters as they run from the mob.

Director Tony Scott knows how to give his films movement, as seen in "Top Gun." As in that film, he once again cast two great young actors to tell his story. Christian Slater and Patricia Arquette have a chemistry together that illuminates the screen, and they give inspired performances. This film should ensure both of them well-deserved respect as serious young actors.

Slater plays Clarence, a young loner who loves comics, martial arts films and Elvis. On his birthday his boss has arranged for a call girl named Alabama (Arquette) to seduce him. The two discover they share many of the same interests and, after confessing her profession to him, as well as her love, they are soon wed. Trouble soon ensues when, by mistake, Clarence ends up with a suitcase filled with cocaine instead of Alabama's clothing. At this point the movie takes off and does not let up until the credits roll.

The plot is deceptively light-hearted. Granted, at times the film has a whimsical feel to it. But, in an instant it turns gruesome. That is why the film is also affecting, because of its unpredictability and its incredibly strong supporting cast. The audience begins to care deeply about the characters in the film because they are well-acted and fully developed.

It's so refreshing to see a movie that keeps you guessing, as opposed to the cliché ridden films that are so popular. Slater and Arquette are given an excellent script with which to work and a supporting cast of some of the best actors working today. However, that doesn't always ensure a good movie.

What this movie has that makes it great is a fresh approach to an old idea. It's a buddy picture where the buddies happen to be married. You want them to succeed even though they are breaking the law. They are two outsiders who have found each other in a world that had forgotten them. "True Romance" is an inspiring film that will disturb some because of the graphic violence, but it will also surprise and delight you with its heart and humor.

How Is Your Cultural Literacy?

The subject this week is Civics.

How is the number of representatives from each state in the House of Representatives determined?

- A) by the area of the state      B) by the wealth of the state
C) by the population of the state      D) by the amount of exports the state produces

For answer, see next week's issue of The Mercury. Questions are drawn from the national best seller Test Your Cultural Literacy. The answer to last week's question was "B" Baroque period. Baroque music was, like the architecture of the time, both lavish and precise.

Not for honor. Not for country.

Fall Fashion Outlook for the 90s

by Alicia Flemming

According to Einstein, time is relative. Arguably, fashion is, too. These days, there aren't any absolutes. In the 90s we have taken bits and pieces of the preceding decades' fashions, and molded them into a modernized version where almost anything goes.

Finally, we have the luxury of taking our personal styles and integrating them into a fashion network that has grown out of the culture of the youth. We can now express ourselves through our own tastes, instead of being considered "out" when we choose to ignore what the designers put on the runway. And the result? Designers are creating fashions mimicking what the kids on the streets, in the clubs, and across the campuses of our country were already wearing. Free at last.

Let us consider three ultimate necessities for fall: a good, strong pair of jeans, a flannel shirt and boots.

Jeans are faded and beat-up, dirty, worn, and lived in. They can be bell-bottoms or hip huggers, slightly relaxed or fitted, but they must be distinct and well-worn.

The flannel shirt is a must-have for both sexes, whether you wear it sleeveless and alone, over an oxford, draped casually over a loose cotton t-shirt, or tied at the waist.

Check out the heavy black lace-up boots adorning the feet of men and women alike. They're clunky and perfect for stomping. They look good with vests and long baggy short, jeans. Even poking out under ankle-length dresses and leggings.

Here is one more thing to remember for fall. You must learn the essential art of layering. Flip through any J. Crew catalog for ideas. If nothing else, they are at the very least masters of layering. The key here is knowing how to mix everything--styles, textures, colors, patterns, lengths--everything.

Try meshing suede vests with flannels, t-shirts with sweaters and jackets, leggings with wool socks and boots, even dresses with pants. Almost anything goes. And don't forget a trademark hat. Once layering is mastered, your personal tastes are easily integrated.

Be creative. Have fun with it. And by all means, let yourself come through.

On January 20, 1993, Bill Clinton's salary increased by $165,000.
