New Process Adopted For Financial Aid Application

by Holly A. Wilkewitz

If you are one of approximately 1,500 students at GSC tired of filling out the lengthy "Free Application For Federal Student Aid" (FAFSA) every semester, then help is on the way, according to Financial Aid Director August Kafer.

Students who wish to reapply for financial aid for the 1994-95 school year need only to fill out a new renewal form, which they will receive in the mail sometime between now and December 17.

All that will be required on the new blue renewal form will be any changes from last year's application and the answering of a few "yes or no" questions.

According to Kafer, the renewal changes stem from the government's attempt to make the financial aid process simpler.

All returning students who filled out a 1993-94 FAFSA will receive the renewal form, unless they fit one of the following categories: their transaction has been voided or rejected, their application went through a professional judgment or dependency override, their application has been flagged by the Department of Education because they are in default, or if they owe a refund on a grant.

Students may also not receive a renewal form if they made any corrections to last year's application after October 22 of this year.

If students do not fit into one of the above categories, they will receive by mail one copy of the renewal form, from whichever processor they sent their 1993-94 FAFSA form to.

If the renewal form is lost, students will then be required to fill out the regular FAFSA form, which will be available the week of final exams.

According to Kafer, the renewal forms will be similar to student aid reports, and should not be difficult to fill out. He did, however, want students to be sure to look at section H of the renewal form carefully. He said to, "be sure to check the 'yes' box," or your form may be rejected.

Both renewal forms and new applications for financial aid for the '94-'95 school year will not be accepted until on or after January 1, 1994.

Asbestos Removal, Remodeling Started

by Melissa Riggleman

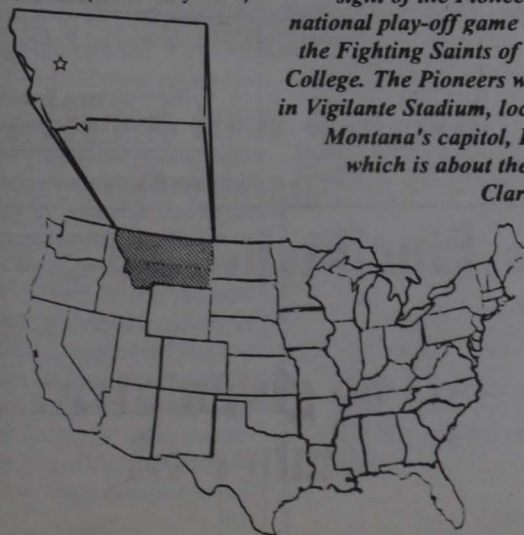

In a survey performed eight years ago, asbestos was discovered in the majority of buildings on campus. The Environmental Protection Agency required that the asbestos be removed by a licensed removal specialist. The college contracted Master Mechanical from Huntington, West Virginia to perform this service to a sum of $7,835.

In addition to the asbestos-removing project, remodeling has begun in the Administration Building, as of last week. This includes new carpet, lighting, ceiling tiles, and new wall treatment for rooms 99, 100, and 101. Room 101 will be temporarily moved to 102 until the project is finished. The total cost of the project underway in the Administration Building will be $15,000. But, the money spent will be worth it, according to Bruce Hathaway from the Maintenance Department who said, "After the project is completed, the rooms will look more attractive."

The rooms will be ready for occupancy by January.

Where in the World is Helena, Montana?

A closer look at Montana, and its capitol, Helena (indicated by a star).

Montana (shaded below) is the sight of the Pioneers' first national play-off game against the Fighting Saints of Carroll College. The Pioneers will play in Vigilante Stadium, located in Montana's capitol, Helena, which is about the size of Clarksburg.

Pioneers off to Montana

by Holly A. Wilkewitz

After much uncertainty surrounding the sight of the Pioneers' first play-off game, Head Coach Rich Rodriguez found out Sunday they would be travelling to Montana.

The Pioneers are slated to play the Fighting Saints of Carroll College, whose season ended with an 8-1 record, in Vigilante Stadium at 1 p.m. (3 p.m. our time). The field is located in Helena, Montana's capitol, which is comparable to Clarksburg in size.

Carroll, a private Catholic college, has an enrollment of about 1500 students, and is now ranked number six in the NAIA. Glenville State holds a rank of number two in the nation, second only to Central State of Ohio.

There is still some uncertainty surrounding what strategies Carroll College will use in their play against the Pioneers. Practice Tuesday was delayed as the Coaches watched the newly arrived game tape, hoping to form some strategies of their own to counteract the Saints' game plans.

"I have no idea how they'll play," quarterback Jed Drenning explained, "but from what we've heard we anticipate a lot of blitzing and man-to-man coverage."

"Our offense will just have to be ready for any type of defense," Drenning continued, "and dictate to them what their defense will be."

Junior wide receiver Chris George shared Drenning's views, and also seemed unconcerned about the lack of knowledge on the Saints' defense.

"We'll control our own destiny," George said, "it hasn't really concerned us all year what the other team is doing."

George brought up another point—weather. The team was told to expect 20 degrees and snow.

"I've never played in those conditions," George said, "but it's better than rain."

As far as the Carroll College offense goes, senior linebacker Rodney Fox (#51) said, "I haven't seen any film on them, but I know they're big, and they like to run the ball."

"We just have to hope we're ready to play," he added.

Coach Rod says the team is very excited about post-season play.

"We have good chances—we have focused players who want to make an impact in national class play," Coach Rod said. "But we just don't want to be a part of the play—we want to be successful at it."

The team plans to leave tomorrow morning for Montana, and what will be their first national play-off game in twenty years.

WHAT ARE YOU LOOKING AT?

Mental illness has warning signs, too.

Withdrawal from social activities. Excessive anger. These could be the first warning signs of a mental illness. Unfortunately, most of us don't recognize the signs. Which is tragic. Because mental illness can be treated. In fact, 2 out of 3 people who get help, get better.

Scratching the Surface

by Lisa Hayes

Do you ever have a morning or two when you just don't feel like getting up? How about a day when you know you just can't face the world? Sure, I think we all have. But, have you ever had days like that consecutively for 10 days in a row? Days when you sleep until 3 p.m., sit up until about 6 p.m. and then go back to bed and sleep for another 14 hours? Or have nights of no sleep, over and over, even though you're completely worn out?

Are you familiar with an ulcerous stomach? Prone to mood swings, or fall into unannounced unrealistic feelings of helplessness, or get lost in a storm of intensified emotions you can't rationalize your way out of?

If you don't know this scenario, you're lucky. You're not one of the thousand of Americans dealing with mental illness. It is as real, as gripping as the flu, but it takes more drastic measures on the mind.

It's like a migraine headache. Just as someone suffering from a migraine headache is extra sensitive to light and even soft sounds, a sufferer of mental illness is super sensitive to verbal and nonverbal input. But, a headache sufferer needs darkness, silence and solitude; the mentally ill person already feels alone--in the dark, misunderstood.

Thankfully, today, mental illness is more understood, and there is help. It is not a joke, it is not an excuse. Mental illness is a personal weakness that should be dealt with. There are people who understand, and there are people who can help. People who don't preach or nag or scream, accuse, insult or disregard. People who know you can't help yourself and want to help.

In My Opinion...

by Terry Collins

Last Thursday, November 11, was Veterans Day. A day set aside so that we may remember the countless thousands of brave men and women who have spared this country the horror of foreign invasion for over 200 years.

In our nation's capitol, President Clinton addressed members of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars at Arlington Cemetery. Vietnam veterans joined together at the wall and wept for the memories of their fallen brethren.

All over the country patriotic Americans attended parades and ceremonies and displayed flags over their homes and businesses.

Back at Glenville, it was business as usual. Students wondered aimlessly through the Amphitheater bringing the unknowing up to date on the latest gossip and struggling through another day of classes that they really did not want to be in anyway.

As I observed this phenomena, I wondered; doesn't anyone know it's Veterans Day, and if so, doesn't any one care?

Did anyone even notice that the flag pole in front of the Administration Building wasn't even flying the American flag? Of course not, who would notice except for someone who cares. Someone like a veteran---like me.

I found it unnerving that this institution did not even show ample respect for American veterans to display our national flag, the very symbol of everything veterans have fought for over the years.

And if my assumption was correct; and students have no more respect or regard for those who protect their freedom than they displayed last Thursday, I hope that this country is invaded first thing in the morning. Those who don't care are bound and shackled and dragged off to a prison camp where there are no vehicles to hop in to come and go as they please. No more MTV or congregating freely with their friends. Where one could not even freely go to Pizza Hut for the Wednesday Night Special.

This type of treatment is exactly what each one of you deserve if you have no more regard for the men and women that have died so that you may enjoy your freedom in the United States of America.

To quote the great pseudo philosopher Earl Pits, "Wake up America." Think about your freedom, and stop taking it for granted.

Professor Visits From South Africa

by Brenda Wilson

Hamilton Mnisi, the vice-rector of Hoxani College, Gozankula, South Africa, visited the campus of Glenville State College Thursday, November 4. His main purpose in the visit was to get information about effective community college practices to guide him as he joins with others to begin the Acornhoek Community College in Acornhoek, South Africa.

He met with Nolan Browning for several hours. They talked about the concept of a community college, and about several specific programs including the Tech Prep Associate Degree, and setting up occupational training on a competency-based approach.

In this program, in-service teachers would be trained to set up a competency-based system. This would enable students to leave their secondary schools with the skills they need.

Browning helped to set up such a program in Belize. Browning was also able to share experiences of his work with a community college in Guam, where he was involved the summers of 1991 and 1992.

During his meeting with President Simmons, Mnisi and Simmons compared higher education and economic conditions in rural South Africa and rural West Virginia.

Mnisi also met with members of the Division of Education to renew friendships established when he visited three years ago. During his visit three years ago, he spoke with faculty and students in separate sessions comparing United States education with education in South Africa.

Hershberger Places Third in competition

by Craig Mills

GSC Forensics Team member Heath Hershberger placed third in After Dinner Speaking at the Ruth A. Wilcox. J.B. Parker, Lori Crouter, and Keith Miller also participated.

"I'm extremely pleased," comments Nancy Wemm, one of the team's advisors, adding, "this is a new experience for everyone involved." GSC has not had a Forensics Team since 1985.

J.B. Parker participated in Persuasive Speaking, in which he presented an original speech; and participated in Impromptu Speaking, where he was given a topic and allotted seven minutes to prepare and present a speech.

Lori Crouter and Keith Miller took part in a Dramatic Duo Interpretation and performed a portion of the play "Love Letters" by A.R. Gurney.

The Forensics Team will compete again next March at the West Virginia State Forensics Tournament at Fairmont State College.

More Forensic Team members are needed; anyone interested in joining, should contact Nancy Wemm in the Language Division.

Mrs. Gayle Burkowski, Forensic Team advisor, Students Heath Hershberger and Lori Crouter, and Mrs. Nancy Wemm, also an adviser, display a trophy won at the Ruth A. Wilcox competition.

Faculty Spotlight

The Man of The Hour: Dr. Donald Herrlein

by Sandra Gibson

One need not look too hard in order to meet with interesting people at Glenville State College. Dr. Donald E. Herrlein is one of these people. He came to GSC three years ago and since that time, he has been sharing his experiences and knowledge of psychology by teaching a wide variety of courses in the field. His classes contain an average of 250 students per semester. He is an assistant professor of psychology and a doctor of education.

Dr. Herrlein was born in Martins Ferry, Ohio. He received his B.S. at the University of Steubenville, Ohio and obtained a M.S. from Florida State. Herrlein completed his doctorate at the University of Tulsa.

Dr. Herrlein retired after 22 years of teaching psychology at Northeastern University in Oklahoma. He moved to the position of director for the Rogers Company Guidance Clinic but, "was happy to return to teaching at GSC." Teaching always held a greater interest for him.

During his time at Northeastern, his dedication to his profession and students manifested itself in many ways. During a 10-year period (1978-88), he was named "Faculty Member of the Year" two times and was runner-up for this award a third time.

The faculty of Oklahoma Colleges and Universities awarded him the "Distinguished Service" award in 1982.

He also served as president of the faculty senate, president of the grievance committee, and was a member of the curriculum and policy committee, as well as others.

"An interest in people and behavior are what probably sparked my interest in psychology," states Herrlein. "My particular interest is in child psychology. He believes that a good start in life is essential." As the twig is bent, so grows the tree," he comments. Human sexuality is his second favorite subject.

Herrlein strives to, "inform my students, as well as guide them

to what is ahead in life." He places equal emphasis on job opportunities, the future, and the importance of commitment to the more than 25,000 students who have been in his classroom over the past 27 years.

Although he loves interacting with his students, he enjoys time alone as well. "I am truly a private person at heart. My private moments give me time to put all things in perspective," he added.

His spare time is spent reading the newspaper, watching informative television programs or challenging himself with "Jeopardy." This enables him to, "keep abreast with the rest of the world."

Herrlein's job at GSC allows him to be within a three-hour drive of his childhood home of Martins Ferry, Ohio. His two brothers and one sister reside there. His daughter has completed a master's degree in counseling psychology and works in a pediatric mental health facility. His son is completing a master's in computer science and business administration.

Three years ago, with the help of Delores Mysliwiec, former chairperson of the Social Science Division and professor of sociology, a B.A. program was submitted and approved. It consists of half sociology and half psychology.

"Job opportunities in the field of behavioral sciences are just unbelievable," he states, "we must do the training for these jobs here at GSC, or otherwise we will be hiring for them from out of state." Nicholas County and Weston extensions have offered a variety of psychology courses as well, in order to keep up with the large amount of interest shown in this field.

Students have responded positively to the program and to Herrlein. "I began college as a math and accounting major but, after just one course with Dr. Herrlein, I knew my heart was with behavioral science. His unique ability to relate life experiences with psychology really brought things home to me," commented senior Angie Meadows.

Faculty have received him well also. "You can always count on Don to bring a smile to your day with his quips," comments Wayne deRosset, professor of English. "His knowledge for his subject is reflected by the manner in which his students relate to him and respond to his teaching."

Student Congress Takes on Big Issue

by Kim Groves

Discussion was heavy during the Student Congress meeting held November 11.

The main topic during this meeting was student activity fees. Many student congress members believe that more of the fees should go toward academic affairs, such as new lab equipment. According to one member, "Entirely too much of our activity fees are going into athletics."

Although Dr. Alfred Billips agreed, he pointed out that, "sports are the reason why many students are attracted to college. Some high school students probably wouldn't be interested in college if sports were terminated."

Most of the athletic and intramural programs on campus must rely on the student fees in order to stay afloat.

Each full-time student at GSC is charged $75 per semester for athletic fees. Most of this goes toward the support of the football team. According to Dr. Billips, "without this support, the team could go under, it's doubtful it could survive on a gate fee alone."

Billips also made members aware that elementary and secondary schools receive much more government funded money than higher education institutions. He stated, "Politicians go where the most votes are."

Although many ideas were tossed back and forth, nothing was resolved officially.

New Organization Formed

by Melissa Riggelman

A new organization has been formed on campus entitled the Campus Entertainment Enthusiasts. CEE is a non-profit organization for anyone, male or female, who is interested in joining. The cost to join is only five dollars a semester. One of the group's goals is to better themselves by helping others. Their motto is "I am my brother's keeper, yes I am."

CEE's advisor is Holly Kennedy, a math professor at GSC. Their officers are: President Ron Frye, Vice-President Wesley Stewart, Sergeant-at-Arms Brian Swisher, Secretary/Historian Aaron Colebank, Treasurer Daniel Simmons and Vice-Treasurer Kenny Simmons. Other members include Jason Runyen, Jerry Burks, and Paul Ryan.

The organization's plans include a fund-raiser for the Veteran's Administration hospital in Clarksburg. Various jars have been set up on campus and around town. The money that is made will be used to buy presents for the veterans.

The group will also be travelling to the hospital December 10 at 6 p.m. to sing Christmas carols. A trip to Daytona Beach is also being planned, but is still pending approval at this time.

The Campus Entertainment Enthusiasts bylaws states "We will not show prejudice toward race, sex, creed, religion, or political affiliation," so membership is open to anyone.

If you are interested in joining CEE, contact Ron Frye in room 309 LBH, or any member.

Tau Kappa Epsilon

by Jim Weekley

The Iota Omega chapter of Tau Kappa Epsilon held an informal meeting Monday, November 15. The House Committee reported that all of the major plans for the house were complete. A few minor details and a meeting with the administration is all we have to complete before we start looking at houses.

Also, chances for the 7.62 SKS rifle are still being sold. Be sure to buy your chance soon. You may be the lucky winner.

Tau Kappa Epsilon will sponsor a Thanksgiving Party tonight, 8 p.m. at 492 Walnut St. Everyone is invited to attend and bring a friend.

To all of the new members:

the old men want their commode bowl. You lost, so take it like a man and bring us our trophy. If not, we may have to play again.

All brothers should be aware that Crack now has a Slim-Jim. He was caught trying to steal Squeak's car today. Everyone remember to park your car in a highly visible area so he doesn't steal it.

Remember Crack, we still have three copies of your key, so don't step on the wrong persons toes and bring Tonto his shirt or you may never see your Samurai again.

The president's words for the week are: "Let's all go outside and look up at the sky and smile for a satellite photo of Glenville."

The Stats Do Not Lie

by Sean Davis

The GSC Pioneer football team, on paper, definitely justifies their number two NAIA ranking. When you go down the line and see all the statistics, the offense put up some great numbers, but the Pioneer defense was just as impressive.

As a team, the defensive unit gave up an average of only 223 yards of total offense a game, while holding the opposite team to just 9.2 points a game. Linebacker Shane Beatty led the team in tackles with 117, followed by linebacker Rodney Fox who recorded 89 tackles. Defensive backs Jerry Pitts, Tony Gibson, and defensive end Chuck Hython each had two interceptions to lead the team. Hython also led the team with 10 quarterback sacks followed by Roger Cunningham with five sacks.

On offense, there were many leaders. At quarterback, Jed Drenning put up some impressive numbers. He completed 63 percent of his passes for 3,391 yards and 25 touchdown passes, as well as gaining 202 yards on the ground and scoring seven touchdowns.

At runningback, Shane Haddox led the Pioneers with 1,025 yards on 184 attempts, which was good enough for 5.57 yards average per carry. He averaged 102.5 yards a game, as well as 13 touchdowns rushing on the year.

On the receiving end, Chris George was the best in the country in NAIA and NCAA Division II polls. He caught 117 passes on the year for 1,876 yards and 15 touchdowns. He averaged 16.2 yards a catch and scored on a 76-yard reception, which led the team.

Walter Wilbon was next among receiving, with 32 receptions for 397 yards and three touchdowns.

GSC golfer Vance Fitzsimmons led the way at the Francis-Marion Invitational on his way to capturing medalist honors in the tournament. As a team, they tied for third.

Fitzsimmons, who won his second tournament of the fall season, shot a two-day total of 74-70 for 144. He finished first in a 23-team field, which had 115 golfers competing. The University of South Carolina-Aiken finished first overall, finishing second was Kennesaw College of Georgia, and tied for third with GSC, was the University of North Carolina at Wilmington.

Individually, freshman John Moran played well, as his two day total was 76-72 for 148. Other scores include Gary O'Flaherty with (77-74)=151, Colin Cassidy shot a (73-80)=150, and Stephen Maloney finished with a (77-80)=150.

The Pioneers who were ranked second in the national NAIA poll, will not play another tournament until the spring season opens up.

GSC Hosts Third Annual Accounting Conference

by Mark Starcher

The third annual West Virginia Student Accounting Conference was held November 3 in the Recital Hall of the Fine Arts Building.

The following area colleges were represented, along with three area high schools: Alderson-Broadbudd, College of West Virginia, Fairmont State, West Virginia Institute of Technology, University of Charleston, West Virginia Wesleyan, Glenville State, and Doddridge, Gilmer and Lewis County High Schools. The attendance was 113.

Cheryl F. McKinney, certified public accountant and assistant professor organized this conference. What made this an interesting day were the speakers, people who lectured about their careers.

Fred Scheeren, certified financial planner, and vice-president of Legg, Mason, Woods, Walker, Inc., spoke on "Opportunities in the Financial Industry and Financial Planning." Scheeren gave some advice that "he wished he had been told." Scheeren said, "First, your first job may not be your last. Also, find the best way to please your clients, if you want to excel."

Some points he covered that apply to everyone were: save or invest 10 percent of your monthly paycheck; be covered with life, disability, and health insurance; and in the near future draw up a will.

"So You Want to be an FBI Agent...Opportunities with the FBI," was presented by Special Agent Thomas Engram of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Engram stated that the FBI hired people with accounting, language, and science/engineering degrees.

Starting salary is $35,000. However with what you go through to become an agent, the money is earned. The FBI application is 16 pages long. You are interviewed; there is an extensive background check which includes a credit and arrest check, physical examination, fitness test, and you must prove you can handle a firearm to become an agent.

Dorinda Kisner, C.P.A. in private practice spoke of "Sole Practitioner vs. Accounting Firm." Kisner went over the advantages and disadvantages of being a sole practitioner or working for a firm.

"Things They Don't Teach

You in College" by Dennis Thornburg, C.P.A. and partner for Chamber and Paterno, switched to the lighter side of accounting with the top 10 reasons for becoming an accountant and the top 10 myths about the profession. A point he stressed that applies to everyone is to get a summer internship. Thornburg stated, "it gets you known and you have an excellent resume--your job performance."

Director of the GSC Careers Office, Brenda Peyser told us "How to Get the Job We Want." Peyser commented on "things to do" to achieve the first permanent job.

"The job search for graduate college students is around six months to a year," she said. Again, Peyser made career points that weren't just for accounting majors.

"What Professional Organizations Can Do for You" was covered by Paul Arbogast, managing partner for Ernest and Young; he also is immediate past president of West Virginia Society of Certified Public Accountants. Arbogast talked about not taking the summer off; instead do job searches, go to job fairs and seminars. "Co-Op," he stated, "is the best interview in the world."

Sondheim CD Will Capture Your Heart

by David Graham

In 1976, a musical revue called Side by Side by Sondheim captured the hearts of theatergoers in London and the United States. The show contained songs from past Sondheim shows such as Company, Anyone Can Whistle, and Gypsy. Since then, Sondheim, the prolific composer that he is, has written other shows for the stage including: Sweeney Todd, Merrily We Roll Along, Into the Woods, Sunday in the Park with George, and Assassins.

With this new material, producer Cameron Mackintosh (who also produced Broadway giants such as The Phantom of the Opera and Les Misérables, as well as Side by Side by Sondheim) collaborated with Sondheim on a new show named Sondheim-Putting It Together.

The show has since come and gone. But, fortunately the show has been preserved on an excellent recording which makes the production available anytime. Since the show consists of a selection of various songs, nothing is missed. The stars of the show are the singers and the songs, not fancy sets or falling chandeliers.

The show boasts a powerful ensemble of singers featuring Stephen Collins, Christopher Durang, Michael Rupert, Rachel York, and Julie Andrews. This show was Julie Andrews' first time back on stage since she played Guenevere against Richard Burton's King Arthur 30 years ago.

Of the 30-odd songs I think that there is an underlying theme about people and their relationships. Christopher Durang begins the show by singing "Invocation and Instructions to the Audience," which turns out to be a comic song of do's and don'ts. To quote:

Good evening ladies and gentlemen, and welcome. Patrons are respectively reminded that the use of cameras or sound or video recording equipment is strictly forbidden. Also, please do not sit in the Aisles as in the event of any emergency, you will be trampled to death.

As his instruction builds into a clever song he ends with the advice, "Please don't fart. There is very little air, and this is art."

In continuation of the people/relationship theme, the first act songs include: the swinging "Rich and Happy" (Merrily We Roll Along), "Have I Got a Girl For You" (Company), the song about a fighting couple--"Country House" (Follies) from Julie Andrews to bring the act to a close.

In the second act, the cast plays a clever game in which they have to make up a question with the word "married" in it. The questions are mixed up and distributed among the cast.

Stephen Collins responds to the question of whether he was sorry he ever got married with the song "Sorry-Grateful" from Company. Michael York, when asked if he likes being a bachelor, responds with "Live Alone and Like It" from the film Dick Tracy. As the game continues, and the Sondheim songs put under a new context, the songs provide an interesting look at people's personalities.

Sondheim-Putting It Together is a show that would make an excellent introduction to the world of Stephen Sondheim, as well as give a refreshing look back on some old favorites for the person who is well-acquainted with his wonderful art.

Jazz Band--A Smash

by April Ludle

The GSC Jazz Band under the direction of Mr. Phil Rossano, presented their 1993 concert Tuesday, November 16. As the sound of jazz exploded from the stage so did the excitement.

The night's selections were: "You Make Me Feel So Young," Arranged by Roger Holmes; "Cute," Neal Hefti; "Pan," Robert Ojeda; "I'm On My Way," Bob Bunton; "Coral Reef," Neal Hefti; and "New for Old" and "Let 'er Rip, Zeke," Harry Huffnagle (a clarinet duet featuring Phil Rossano and Cliff Cody).

Other selections included "Teddy the Toad," Neal Hefti; "Bein' Green," Joe Raposo; "Late Night Theme," Paul Shaffer; and

"Tribute to Miles," arranged by Mark Taylor.

Featured solos included: Mitch Lucas, drums; Bo McMillion, guitar; Stacy Yoak, piano; Tim White, bass guitar; Ben Price, trombone; Gary Allen, vibes; Chuck Satterfield, trumpet; Ann Smith, saxophone; Keith Jean, trumpet; and Tom Chappell, drums. The concert was a smash. No one could help tapping his or her foot.

The music was packed full of excitement and it kept everyone on their toes. There was even one person screaming for an encore.

We thank the Jazz Band for a wonderful night of great music. We can't wait for the next time (and of course, the matching ties added that extra zip).

He Said/She Said Performed

by David Graham

The student directed play is a wonderful thing. The student director has a voice, for at least a few minutes, and the vehicle capable for making his voice be heard. I felt for some reason Keith Miller's voice was slightly muted.

The three plays presented under the title He Said/She Said: A Trio of One Act Plays About Sexual Identity were: If Men Played Cards as Women Do by George S. Kaufman, If Women Worked as Men Do by Ellen Goodfellow, and Abstinence by Lanford Wilson. Performance, set, lights, acting--everything aside, I want to know what motivated director Keith Miller to choose those three plays. I don't think the choices were thought out completely. I think that the choices were obvious sex jokes and silliness that lies on the surface of the plays and not for what the plays were truly about. I base this statement on the fact that there was so much more in the three plays to explore that was not even touched on.

The concept was great. However, the plays take us (the audience) up to a certain point then leaves us there. When the play offers some food for thought, instead of getting something to chew on we get a light snack--popcorn. I am not implying every play must be oozing with deep symbolic meaning. But, there were subtleties that could be added to complete the circle of the play and make it whole. Don't be afraid to jump in the play, get crazy with it. The foundation you have laid is truly a solid one and the cast you have chosen is competent, so push them. They can handle it.

If Men Played Cards as Women Do featured Chris Kenna, Darek Igo, Heath Hershberger, and Ezekiel Flowers. It was obvious that the four actors had a good time doing this play. All were strong actors and held their part, making it possible for the play to be a working machine. I think GSC has found a new pair of talented actors under the name of Heath Hershberger and Darek Igo. This is an observation of the audience who, in my opinion, warmed up to the two actors. They have a good rapport with the audience. There is a mutual likeness and friendship there, and it is nice to sit and watch it grow from play to play.

Kelly Weiser, Mary Reaser, Kathie Burgess, and Jamin Pack are not outdone by the men in the previous play in If Women Worked as Men Do. I was glad that Kathie Burgess came back to the stage. Kathie, and everyone else for that matter, be true to your art and never abandon it. No matter what anyone might say.

As in life something is rarely perfect. My bottom line critique is not to be happy with the play. It is good. It is very funny. But improve on it. The actors' hard work showed, as well as the hard workers that are never seen. I truly appreciate your art. The play can also be seen tonight at 8 p.m. in the AB Auditorium.

Inspire--Efficiency For The Future

Rick Conklin

As we head toward the turn of the century, businesses and governments alike are recognizing the need for a more efficient style of management.

Inspire is a program initiated by Governor Gaston Caperton, designed to involve state employees in the decision making process. The emphasis is to move away from an autocratic style of management and head toward the more efficient style of participatory management.

The program is being implemented throughout the state government, its agencies and institutions.

GSC's version of this program, entitled Self-Studies/Continued Planning, began in January of this year. The title of this program reflects the main ideas of the Governor's Inspire program. William Diehl, director of administrative services and personnel described the beginning process of the program, "We have created 10 teams who have been examining various functional areas, with the idea of determining what we can do better, in order to help us accomplish goals and meet the institutional priorities over the next decade."

These teams, called workout teams, are composed of employees from all levels of the college. Each team is given a problem or a set of problems, to discuss and create feasible recommendations for solving them.

According to Diehl, the fundamental importance of the workout teams is, "You actually invoke the wisdom and participation of the people who are most likely to be able to tell you what needs to be changed--the people who deal with these problems on a daily basis." Once a team has unanimously agreed upon a solution and timetable, it is presented to a management team for approval. Approved solutions are then overseen by a member of the workout team to ensure implementation. This process is a continuing one which will evaluate problems as they are incurred. Participatory management is not designed for employees to discuss pet peeves or point fingers of blame. "The purpose is to identify our strengths and weaknesses," Diehl said.

Solutions for eliminating unnecessary procedures and paperwork, departmental conflicts and unproductive meetings are prime examples of the accomplishments that can be acquired through this type of program. "Across the board, we will do a better job in the most economic and efficient way, and in the end do a better job for our students."

Full implementation of the Self-Studies/Continued Planning could begin as soon as spring semester.

Reports from the workout teams are expected in by the end of November.

Thanksgiving and semester break will be coming soon. Most of us are looking forward to spending this time with our families and friends.

However, there are many international students at GSC who do not have the opportunity to go home and visit their families during this time.

Dr. Sharon Kraus pointed out that in past years the college has closed both Pickens and Louis Bennett Hall during such breaks. This has created a problem for international students who must find another place to stay.

This year the college plans to keep the bottom section of Pickens Hall open for these students. However, according to Kraus, "There have been many international students requesting information on home stays during long breaks."

The college is seeking volunteers to take these students into their homes during Thanksgiving and Christmas break. This would benefit everyone, because it would give the international students the opportunity to observe American traditions, and it could also serve to break down barriers that exist between international and American students. For more information, please contact Ms. Peggy High, Clark Hall room 203.
